POETRY.

SEA MUSIC.

The tide rises, the tide falls,
The twilight darkens, the curlew calls;
Along the sea-sands damp and brown
The traveller hastens toward the town,
And the tide rises, the tide falls.

Darkness settles on roofs and walls,
But the sea in the darkness calls and calls;
The little waves with their soft white hands
Efface the footprints in the sands,
And the tide rises, the tide falls.

The morning breaks; the steeds in their stalls
Stamp and neigh as the hostler calls;
The day returns, but nevermore
Returns the traveller to the shore,
And the tide rises, the tide falls.

—Longfellow.

TWO DIARIES.

NANNY SOMERTON'S.

June 1st.—Summer begun and I not able to walk yet! It is so tiresome to sit here doing nothing, that I have begun this journal from sheer desperation. But I have nothing to write except the interesting item that I have broken my leg, and am therefore a temporary prisoner. My window faces a large house that is forever staring at me in the dreary desolation of emptiness; and gives me the blues every time I look at it.

June 2d.—Hurrah! My bugbear has vanished. The house opposite was opened to-day for thorough cleaning, and painters, paper-hangers, carpenters and scrubbing-maids have made the prospect lively. Clare, that is my sister, says we are going to have new neighbors. A dozen or so of children, maybe, to tumble around and scream forever.

June 3d.—The new family will arrive to-day, so Clare says. It takes a woman to find out anything! The furniture has nearly all come. I should judge by the number of loads. I have watched anxiously for some sign of the dozen babies, but have seen only two colored women, one dog and the truckmen.

June 4th.—They did come yesterday, but not until after dark. Clare says their family name is Allison. I caught a glimpse of a young lady through the long windows, and shortly afterwards the same one came out with an older person to examine the garden.

June 6th.—Mother and Clare called on the Allison's to-day, and my sister came home enraptured. Mrs. Allison was a widow, so ladylike—Miss Allison so charming and pretty! In short, Clare exhausted all the adjectives to describe this wonderful pair. "Dell and I expect to be very dear friends; we liked each other at first sight," she concluded.

June 8th.—The Allison's returned mother's call to-day, and Clare had another fit of ecstacy over "Dell." For my part, I consider her rather tomboyish. I saw her this morning running around the garden with her big dog, until the tumbling down of her hair sent her in the house to fix it.

June 10th.—Clare and Dell Allison have been playing croquet all the afternoon, and I have been much amused watching them. Dell's sweet, ringing laugh floated most musically in at my open window. She is very graceful; and I shall not be sorry to obtain a nearer view of her face; it is very attractive at this distance.

June 12th.—Dell had a visitor from New York yesterday and did not invite Clare over, so there has been gloom on my sweet sister's face, and she has devoted herself to me with an assiduity quite touching. Girls are queer creatures! If they take a fancy to somebody, and that somebody takes the least notice of anyone else, they fairly turn green with jealousy. I think it is perfectly unreasonable! Who ever heard of a man acting so?

June 15th.—The doctor gave me permission to take a few steps and I went down in the parlor. When I was comfortably settled, who should come in but Miss Allison. I think I shall describe her appearance. Her eyes are brown and very mischievous, though when she welcomed me, they were sweet and sympathetic. Her hair is long and curly; golden-brown I believe is the proper color. Altogether, she is as bright and winsome as possible, and I enjoyed her company greatly. She and Clare have gotten over their slight coolness, so that all was peace and harmony.

June 18th.—Clare has gone to visit our aunt in Philadelphia and I am horribly lonesome. Then, too, I shall not see so much of Dell while she is away; and, I must confess, our opposite neighbor is very fascinating.

June 20th.—Morning. Dell has been gathering a profusion of flowers, which she arranged in numerous bouquets and a charming wreath. I guess she is expecting company, for she keeps running to the gate and looking up the road every few minutes. Afternoon. I know now for whom all the preparation was made. About three o'clock Miss Allison paid her hundredth or so visit to the gate, and after standing a moment, rushed back to the door and called her mother out. The same instant a carriage drove up and stopped just where it hid the group. When it drove off, there was revealed a young gentleman to whose arm Dell clung affectionately. I—well it would be a relief to thump somebody's head.

June 21st.—Was ever a man so wretched! I don't care what becomes of me. My leg can break over again if it likes! Let me write down a full account and read it over till I go distracted. Dell came in to-day to bring me a book she had promised, and as she held it out I saw an elegant new ring on her finger. The young lady, suddenly aware of the object of my scrutiny, and perhaps reading some of the feeling that I was surprised into letting appear on my face, flushed really, and walked abruptly to the window; then, returning quite as quickly, she laid the volume on the table saying, "I hope you will find it interesting," and was gone. This, then, is the secret of the new comer's warm welcome. I should have remembered that this brilliant being must have been attractive to many eyes besides mine. And yet—oh, Dell, Dell! Can I confess it! I had allowed her to take my heart close captive without even a struggle.

But I had more yet to suffer. Later in the day, while my eyes were fixed, as usual, on the Allison's house, Dell appeared at the window where her flowers are. She was soon joined by—him, and plucking a rosebud, fastened it in his buttonhole. Then, he actually stooped and kissed her! Too much gratitude by far. Girls are all flirts, pretty simpletons that are void of sense and feeling.

DELL'S DIARY.

June 4th.—We have moved to the loveliest old-fashioned house with a great big garden and quantities of strawberry. We are quite alone at the end of a long village street; except for one house directly opposite. I saw a young lady there; I hope I shall like her.

June 5th.—To-day, our neighbors called and we had a pleasant time. Clare is splendid, but very much "grown-up." Well! I need a restraining influence I suppose, and she may exercise it over me.

June 8th.—Returned Mrs. Somerton's call, and discovered that Clare has a brother. She enlisted my sympathies by an account of his accident, and interested me through his picture. He is certainly very handsome, dark as a Spaniard. Clare is entirely different, being a perfect blonde.

June 12th.—Yesterday, I had a visit from Cousin Ida. She is the most bashful girl I ever saw; really, she looked frightened when I proposed asking Miss Somerton over.

June 15th.—As I rushed in to see Clare to-day in my usual "harum-scarum" fashion, I came face-to-face with her brother. For an instant I was confused, but I am never troubled long in that way.

June 19th.—Clare has gone away for a few days. I felt so sorry; but just after she went I got a letter from Fred, that made me joyful in an instant. He is coming to stay until after Christmas.

June 20th.—Fred did not come until late. I watched all day and had about made up my mind for a disappointment, when up he drove. Dear fellow! He always thinks of me, he brought me a beautiful diamond ring.

June 21st.—To-day I ran over to take Harry's book and tell him about Fred. But he caught sight of my ring and oh! such a look as he gave me. It flashed over me instantly what he was thinking, and I resolved to leave his thoughts undisturbed; therefore I said nothing whatever about Fred. I wonder if he would care much if Fred were really my lover? He will soon know the truth, however, for we shall go there together before long.

HARRY'S DIARY.

June 23d.—Three cheers! Hurrah! I received a letter from Clare, and in it she says "Has Dell's brother Fred arrived yet, she wrote me that they were expecting him? "How could I have been such a fool! I shall never, never write that girls are jealous again. Clare will return to-morrow. Later: Dell and Fred Allison came over this evening; he is a splendid fellow, looks like his sister.

June 23d.—Clare came home this afternoon and of course we had a long talk. I am four years her senior, so she has always made me her confident. She had to change cars at a small country station, where she could not find a ticket-master, and was wondering what she should do, when a young man entered. Thinking he was the official in charge, she inquired for a ticket. He bowed courteously, and informed her of her mistake, but busied himself in finding the absent agent. Something in Clare's eyes made me think she would not object to see the handsome young stranger again.

June 24th.—Early this morning, Dell rushed over to welcome my sister and invited us both to spend the evening. I shall venture to walk that short distance. Evening. We had a delightful visit, and Clare had a most agreeable surprise. Fred Allison is the gentleman who so kindly assisted her at the little station.

NOBODY'S DIARY.

Reader—if there is such a person—having carefully copied for your edification, the extracts given above, suddenly came to a stand still. Harry Somerton ceased to keep a journal, perhaps because other affairs occupied his time. As for Dell, she still kept one, but it was under lock and key. It would not do to stop so abruptly, but what could I do? I was in despair, until kind Mrs. Somerton pitying my grief, placed at my disposal a leaf from her own account of that years events.

"Christmas Eve." My Children have just left me for the night, and I have drawn aside the curtain that the moonlight may come in. All the earth is wrapped in ermine, white and pure, while trees are laden down with weight of jewels. Yet I am sad; for to-morrow are my two dear ones to be joined each to another. Am I so weak that the tears blister this page? But nay, chide me not, oh! conscience; let me have the present for melancholy—to-morrow I must be cheerful. My bright, beautiful Dell I may not see for years; she will accompany Harry to a far distant State. Fred and Clare go immediately to the city, so they scatter, and I shall be left alone. Draw the curtain, and shut out the weird gleaming, for the bridal gown hath a whiteness rivalling its own.

A NICE PORTERHOUSE STEAK.

Mr. Scismup came down stairs to a ten o'clock breakfast with a vacant countenance and a backward tendency in his hair that made his two eyes three. He sat down to the table and picked up his knife and fork, glared in uneasy wonder at something in the platter before him. It had evidently been fried in butter and was intended for food.

Mr. Scismup harpooned it with his fork and lifted it up bodily, gazing at it with ever increasing wonder.

"What under the sun," he exclaimed, at last, "is this thing?"

"Well," replied his wife, with just a shadow of a sigh, "it looks like your new soft felt hat, and that is what I thought it was, but you pulled it out of your pocket when you came home this morning and said it was a nice porterhouse steak and you wanted it broiled for breakfast. You needn't give me any of it; I'm not hungry."

And Mr. Scismup, who was just wild to know what else he said when he came home, and what time it was, for the life of him didn't dare to ask.

HOW THE CLERK SUFFERED.

After a little dissertation on the troubles and annoyances of hotel clerks, the San Francisco Call relates this anecdote:

A recent visitor from Australia was rather taken aback the other day by the politeness of the clerk of the —— hotel, where he had taken up his quarters.

The day after his arrival, which happened to be one of the windiest of the season, he went out for a stroll around the streets of 'Frisco to see the sights and exhibit his linen covered himself.

He returned to the hotel disgusted, and remarked to the clerk:

"You have a great deal of dust here in San Francisco."

"Yes," drawled the clerk, "I suffer from it myself."

"Weak eyes?" inquired the stranger.

"No, sir."

"Your lungs are affected, then?"

"Not much," yawned the clerk.

"In what way then, do you suffer from the dust?" asked the somewhat surprised Australian.

"By hearing about sixty times an hour every fool who comes to the counter say, you have a good deal of dust here in San Francisco."

When your wife [illegible] with rage in her eye and her thumb in [illegible], you had better keep quiet. She has been trying to [illegible] out of the window.

NO PENSION WANTED.

He didn't look a bit like a patriot as he stood rubbing his back on a corner wall, but it isn't every body who can tell a patriot at first sight. They were talking about pensions, and all at once he woke up and said:

"Was I in the army? You bet I was!—Didn't I have charge of one of the big guns in the trenches of Yorktown? Didn't I stand in the mud all day and sleep in the pond all night, and wasn't it that which twisted my legs out of shape with the rheumatism? And yet have I applied for a pension? Has any one seen me insidiously stretching forth a hand to grab at the vitals of this distressed country? Not a grab."

No one had anything to say, and presently he went on:

"In the army—humph? Who saved the day at Malvern Hill? Who killed seventeen of the enemy with his own hand? Who was decorated by sixteen medals and a cross by Gen. McClellan? And yet does any assassin charge me with making midnight visits to pension agents to swear that the hardships of the tented field have left me with only one lung and no liver at all? Hang a soldier who wouldn't sacrifice his liver for his glorious country!"

He burned up five or six matches in a vain effort to light the stump of a cigar and then growled out:

"I may look seedy now, but who led the Second Corps at Fair Oaks? Who captured three flags from the enemy with his hand? Who was shot in four places and left for dead? And yet do I go whining around after the financial vitals of this glorious Republic?—Not a whine? When I reach out my hand and ask Uncle Sam to come down, it will be when I have forgotten the teachings of a veteran father."

"Were you wounded?" inquired one of the groups.

"Was I? Oh, no! I didn't get hit seventeen different times in three years! I am not carrying half an acre of scars down to my grave to attest my devotion to my country!—And yet, what man dares charge me with a desire to skulk into the barn and rob the treasury cow of her feed—the feed she needs for her daily existence?"

"Won't you show us some of your scars?" inquired two or three at once.

"No, sir! I never show 'em except at reunions! There is no reunion here. This is simply a gathering of two bummers, a politician, a lame man, a nigger, a soldier, who has been in forty-six different battles, received seventeen wounds and doesn't want a pension. You wouldn't know the scar of a cannon ball from that of an old wood saw, and you'll go off and say I got run through a threshing machine! I am going inside to drink alone to the prosperity of this great and glorious Union, and it won't do you any good to stand around the door."

WARRANTED HARMLESS.

There was a great hubbub and scraping of heels in the corridor before they projected a little slate colored man into the Jefferson Market Police Court yesterday. He was not a bit abashed by the [illegible] had come up with a jolt against the bar he bobbed up his head and demanded if anyone knew who "dis culled gemman" was.

"Haven't the pleasure of your acquaintance," said His Honor, "but reference to the blotter brings up any incog dodge of yours. You are plainly set down here as Jasper Clay. Does the Court err?"

"You got it right," called out the prisoner. "Dis is Jasper Clay, all hisself, and dahs de makins of a dozen stand up and knock down tuzzles in him, too. Jes let him hab a round' wif summun and you do de speckilatin'; dat's all I ask fo'."

"I'm sorry to refuse so modest a request," said His Honor.

"Oh, y'aint gwine ter do it, eh?" said the prisoner, louder. "I'se so sorry. T'would jes be fun for me t' do a little cuttin'. I'se game, I is, all around, an' when dahs some lambastin' goin' on I'se bad all the way down from de wool to de patten ledders. Jes see," and the small darkey wheeled about and attitudinized with pugilistic fervor.

"Here's an engagement for you, Mrs. Clay!" the magistrate called out, and there stepped to the stand a colored Amazon with an arm like a truck axle. The prisoner faltered a moment, but stiffened up again and shouted:

"I'se on it, chillern, you bet yo' life, and you don't bluff me wif an ole ooman in a kaliker gown."

The new comer gave Jasper Clay a look that made him quail, and then she said:

"Jidge, kin I tote the ole fool 'ome? He'll jes go on that way a-crowin' like a game cock 'long's you lissen."

"But aren't you afraid? Won't he fight?" queried His Honor.

"Wot, Him!" cried the Amazon in amazement. "Jasper Clay fite! Good lans! Why, Lor bress yo' soul, if dat chuckle-headed niggah could fite twice as well as he could wuck it 'ud take 'bout tree hundred ob him to tackle a sick cat, and den you'd had t' draw de cat's teef and tie it to a coal box."

The encomium on Jasper's bravery was deemed sufficient warrant for his harmlessness, and he went off quite meekly.

SOLID FOR SARAH.

The Democrats of Kansas are solid for Sarah. That is they have nominated Miss Sarah E. Brown for State Superintendent of Public Instruction, being the first woman ever nominated for a State office by a political convention.

Miss Brown is at present school superintendent of Douglas county, the second county of the State. Judge Emery, who did much to secure Miss Brown's nomination by the Democratic State convention, was interviewed with this result:

"But," said the reporter, "it is urged that Miss Brown's sympathies are not really with the Democratic party."

"Oh, pshaw," replied Judge Emery, "I know better than that. Her brother, the ex-Congressman, told me not two weeks ago that Sarah had gone over tooth and nail to the Hancock party."

"How old a woman is she?"

"Well, I should say about thirty-five."

"Is she pretty?"

"I don't believe she could be called a pretty woman, but she's mighty brainy. She knows more than most of the men in the State and she is as straightforward and business like as the most prosaic business man in the world. She has her office in the court house."

"What does she want of an office?"

"Why, she is our county superintendent of schools. She beat the regular Republican candidate last time by a fine majority. Her nomination on our ticket will give it great strength. Lots of Republicans all over the State will vote for her, because she is an admirable woman in the best sense of the term."

"Will she make a thorough canvass of the State?"

"Oh, no! She is not that kind of a person. She is not a woman suffragist. She is not in the habit of going around making speeches. You never saw a more diffident, gentle lady. She comes down to her office every day, walks right straight to her desk, transacts her business quickly, efficiently and expeditiously, and is never talked about. During all her life in Lawrence and during all her official service I have never heard a word derogatory to Sarah Brown. On the contrary she is always and everywhere spoken of as a scholarly, bright and worthy lady. As to her politics," continued the Judge, "she is as good a Hancock man as we've got in the State. She is a thoroughbred, you can bet on that. She is true blue every time."

Hurrah for Sarah.

Miss Blanche Murray is a very proper young lady. Last week she caught her little brother smoking.

"You terrible thing," she hissed. "I am going to tell father on you!"

"This is only corn silk," murmured the boy, penitently.

"I don't care what it is. I am going to tell on you, and see that you don't get into that beastly, horrid, degrading habit. I wouldn't have anything to do with smokers."

It is evening. Miss Murray is sitting on the front stoop with Algernon. It is moonlight, and the redolent spirits of the honeysuckles and syringa are wafting bliss to their already intoxicated souls.

"Would little birdie object to my smoking a cigarette?"

"Not at all," replied Miss Murray. "I like cigarettes, they are so fragrant and romantic. I think they are just too delicious for anything."

"Then I'll light one."

"I can't say as to that," replied the man, "but I'm dead sure the old woman will if I don't get home in time to put that codfish to soak for breakfast."

"But do you prefer codfish to liberty?" asked the other.

"I don't know as I do, but I get more of it."

"And you will see this country ruined—see her go to destruction?"

"I'd be kinder sorry to see her go down hill," observed the delinquent, as he reached the door, "but if you had a wife who could begin scolding at ten o'clock and not take a breath until daylight, you'd kinder stand off as I do, and let the glorious republic squeeze through."

329.

The New York Tribune has posted on its window "Old 329 did it," and the Republican faithful have adopted the idea as their political motto. It denotes the truth, a most remarkable thing for the Republican leaders to express in this campaign. It is the truth, as surely as the bloody shirt omens their party affection instead of the starry flag, which the Tribune once pronounced a "flaunting lie." "329 did it." That is so, gentlemen. The same species of bribery and corruption Mr. Garfield handled to his disgrace in the matter of Credit Mobilier 329, carried Indiana. That did it in October and a like game will doubtless be repeated, if possible, in November. Honesty had nothing to do with the Republican majority in Indiana. Garfieldian 329 did it. A most appropriate badge for his followers to wear, lacking, however, those other figures known in history as DeGolyer 5,000.

HANCOCK AND ENGLISH.

The election of Hancock and English will of a certainty—

Render the Constitution supreme.

Restore fraternal Union.

Preserve civil and religious liberty.

Perpetuate the blessings of free government.

Benefit all the people, of all sections, regardless of condition, creed or color.

Develope for national wealth and Northern profit the vast and prolific domain of the South.

Open world-wide markets for American productions of every kind.

Bring back under the American flag and for the emolument of our own country lost ocean commerce, and retain within American hands the many millions of dollars now yearly carried away to enrich English and other foreign ship-owners and ship-builders.

Protect by a just, practicable and permanent system of tariff duties every industrial pursuit—agricultural, manufacturing, commercial, mechanical and mining, prospering all alike, the poor man equally with the rich, the small capitalist on a par with the great.

Block the way of heartless monopolies, now seeking to strangle in their artful coils the liberties and privileges of the toiling masses.

Make specie payments a reality instead of a sham.

Provide for the honest redemption of all public obligations, and the final extinguishment of the national debt.

Reduce the burden of taxation by instituting and enforcing prudent, but positive economy in every department of government.

Strike down the thousands of political vampires who are now sucking money out of the peoples' treasury, without rendering a mite of useful service therefor.

Appoint men to office because of their personal integrity and qualification, and hold them to the faithful discharge of duty.

Abolish the vicious system of using national finances as a lever for private speculation.

Raise honesty into dominion and crush official rascality to death.

Make business of every description prosperous because permanently sound, and the government strong because Constitutionally free and upheld by love instead of hate.

VOTE FOR
HANCOCK AND ENGLISH.

ATTENTION! JERSEYMEN!

The time for discussion is nearly gone, the day for decisive action at the polls is close at hand.

Fidelity to the Constitution and Union, and the preservation of free institutions, demand from every true hearted friend of the Republic the deposit on Tuesday next of a ballot for the following named candidates:

For President,
WINFIELD SCOTT HANCOCK.

The gallant defender of the Union in war and the resolute supporter of the Constitution in peace, the enlightened student of our system of representative government, the fearless friend of popular rights, the devoted patriot, the citizen of unsullied character, the honest man.

For Vice President,
WILLIAM H. ENGLISH.

A practical business man, of unspotted personal repute, thoroughly acquainted with the affairs of government, and who, as a member of Congress during the Kansas agitation, earned merited distinction as the champion of freedom.

For Governor,
GEORGE C. LUDLOW.

A gentleman in the fullest meaning of the word, a citizen of the highest standing, a life-long resident of New Jersey, zealous of her honor, conversant with the best interests of her people and possessing the ability and courage to advance and protect them.

For Congress,
MILES ROSS.

An indefatigable worker for the good of the Third Congressional District, and who, as its Representative, has done far more for public improvements than any of his predecessors.

For Assembly,
ROWLAND M. STOVER.

Known to his fellow citizens as an affable, generous, upright and intelligent man, one who will, as a State Legislator, seek to promote the general welfare and keep untarnished the fair fame of New Jersey.

Such are the Democratic nominations offered for your suffrages, and never were candidates placed before the people more in unison with the grand old Jeffersonian standard of honesty, capability and worth.

VOTE THE WHOLE DEMOCRATIC TICKET!

GARFIELD AND ARTHUR.

The Democratic opposition to Garfield and Arthur, outside of general political principles, is based upon authentic official records, and most of it derived from reported investigations made by their own party friends before the kaleidoscope of politics had transformed Congressman Garfield and Collector Arthur into candidates for the two highest offices in the gift of the American people, and at a time when they were severely condemned as transgressors by the prominent Republican journals.

The evidence is overwhelmingly conclusive that they are not men fitted to occupy the honorable and responsible positions of President and Vice President of the United States.

Their proven delinquencies as public servants are amply sufficient to convince every citizen who is not shackled by the chains of party that they ought to be defeated.

Their election would be a dire calamity to the country and the cause of morality, because—

Thereby, integrity of character would be lowered to a discount and a premium set upon official depravity.

Besides, their election would—

Re-kindle the fires of sectional animosity.

Postpone the restoration of Union.

Endanger the life of free government, by establishing at Washington a centralized and unscrupulous power, hostile to both the letter and spirit of the Constitution.

Keep up at an enormous and increasing expense thousands of worthless office-holders, whose whole duty consists in drawing sinecure pay.

Encourage Monopolists and Ring plunderers of every name and hue—Whiskey, Sugar, Indian, Custom House, Public Lands, Rail Roads, Naval Contracts, Postal Routes, &c., &c., to deplete the treasury and oppress the people.

Bring into high favor lobbyists and subsidizers.

Institute a carnival of profligate extravagance, jobbery and special favoritism, to the injury of honest enterprise and legitimate business.

VOTE FOR
HANCOCK AND ENGLISH,
Peace and Permanent Prosperity.

ATTENTION! WORKINGMEN!

Some partisan employers would take the bread out of the mouths of your wives and children unless you bow down like slaves and vote as they tyrannically dictate.

Such interference with the rights of citizenship is treason to freedom, and criminal in the eyes of statutory law.

Resent the insult.

Assert your dignity.

Exercise your privilege.

VOTE AS YOU PLEASE.

Let all men know that labor is your capital and that your ballot is as dear as life.

Proclaim the glory of American citizenship.

Proudly declare that you are and will ever remain FREEMEN, and that no political power on the face of the earth can reduce you to the level of a Russian Serf or a Chinese Coolie.

VOTE AS YOU PLEASE!

GARFIELD'S LETTER.

A fac simile of the following letter, with its Washington envelope, recently appeared in a New York paper, and created, as its outrageous sentiments justly warranted, an intense indignation among the working classes:

[PERSONAL AND CONFIDENTIAL.]

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 23, 1880.

Dear Sir: Yours in relation to the Chinese problem came duly to hand.

I take it that the question of employes is only a question of private and corporate economy, and individuals or companys have the right to buy labor where they can get it cheapest.

We have a treaty with the Chinese Government which should be religiously kept until its provisions are abrogated by the action of the General Government, and I am not prepared to say that it should be abrogated until our great manufacturing and corporate interests are conserved in the matter of labor.

Very truly yours, J. A. GARFIELD.

H. L. MOREY, Employers' Union, Lynn, Mass.

Mr. Garfield denies authorship of the letter, but that, after his denial of complicity with Credit Mobilier, fails to convince. He then said things which his own political friends proved false.

That is an unfortunate reputation for Mr. Garfield, but he made it himself and the records survive.

The Garfield managers have sought to discredit authenticity of the letter in question.

The proof is altogether against them.

Gentlemen who served in Congress with Mr. G. and are familiar with his hand writing, after careful inspection of the original, pronounce the letter no forgery, but the production of Mr. Garfield.

Its sentiments correspond with his vote to sustain Mr. Hayes' veto of the Chinese restriction bill.

Three of the most skillful experts in the United States, best versed in the art of detecting spurious writing, have critically examined the letter and announced Mr. Garfield as the author.

The then existence of H. L. Morey is affirmed by living witnesses.

Such an organization as the Employers' Union is vouched for by the President of the Labor League of America.

The validity of the post-mark is clearly shown.

The spelling of "companys" instead of companies is accounted not strange, because, in an unquestioned letter of Mr. Garfield, the word "recorded" is written "recorderd."

Mr. Garfield cannot escape from the odium of that Morey communication.

The doctrine therein proclaimed is atrocious.

It means—

The right of employers to buy and import cheap Coolie (modernized slavery) labor, to the exclusion of free white American, and to be bravely protected in so doing until wages are brought down to the Chinese level.

How do you like the prospect, Workingmen?

"Buy labor where you can get it the cheapest," is Garfield's musical of the leading American industrial interests.

DEMOCRATIC CREDIT.

The City of New York solicited bids for a loan of $2,000,000, in 20 year bonds at four per cent interest.

The money being required for the redemption of bonded obligations maturing November 1st.

Bids were received for thirty millions, at a premium ranging as high as five per cent.

That shows the credit of Democratic Government.

New York City is Democratic to the tune of over 60,000 majority.

Capitalists offer to lend her ten times more money than she wants, and to pay a large bonus for the privilege.

The country sadly needs a Democratic Secretary of the Treasury.

SEIZING THE SOUTH.

The Republican party are now endeavoring to buy the South. By an error of the telegraphic authorities, Senator Barnum, of the Democratic National Executive Committee, was sent despatches belonging to the Republicans. Two of them are as follows:

I telegraphed yesterday. I will provide as requested two hundred each for Callender and yourself as compensation.

To F. W. WICKER, COLLECTOR, KEY WEST, FLA.:

"City of Dallas" took 150, "City of Texas" 100, "Colorado" 100, for Key West. Men on dock instructed to say nothing about it.

MARSHALL JEWELL.

The numerals "150," "100," and "100" mean men to be colonized. The same game carried Indiana. Will such villainy win?

Subjoined will be found the sworn statement of Mr. A. D. McCabe of Monmouth County, N. J., who was a fellow passenger with one installment of Jewell's repeaters, forwarded from N.Y. city to Florida, in pursuance of the iniquitous policy begun in Indiana:

ASBURY PARK, Monmouth County, N. J.
Allen D. McCabe, being duly sworn, deposes and says that he is a resident of Ocean Grove, Monmouth County, N. J.; that on Oct. 1, 1880, he left New York on the steamer Western Texas for Florida; that there were on board of the same vessel, in the steerage, about a hundred rough-looking fellows, who, according to the statement made by the Captain of the vessel to this deponent, were railway laborers hired to work on the Waycross and East Florida Railroad. Deponent says that the said railroad is a line projected between Fernandina and Jacksonville; that some work has been done on the Fernandina end, but that no work is now doing or apparently in contemplation on the Jacksonville end. Deponent further says that on the arrival of the Western Texas at Fernandina on the evening of Tuesday, Oct. 5, the alleged laborers were landed at Fernandina, but that on Saturday, Oct. 9, deponent saw a number of these men in Jacksonville, and that on Monday, Oct. 11, he saw and recognized in the streets of Jacksonville nearly the whole body of the alleged laborers who had come down with him on the steamer; that deponent, knowing no work had been begun on the Jacksonville end of the Waycross Railroad, interrogated several of these men as to their business in that place, saying: "I thought you fellows had come down to work on the railroad?" to which the answer was: "We ain't going to work on no railroad;" that to further inquiries they refused to make any reply, and walked away. And deponent further says that from Oct. 9 to Oct. 12, at which latter date he left Jacksonville for New York, he saw great numbers of the alleged laborers going up to the Republican headquarters on Bay street. That he asked the reason of their visits to said headquarters, but received no answer. And deponent further says that Horatio Jenkins, Jr., is the Chairman of the Republican State Executive Committee of Florida.

ASBURY PARK, Monmouth County, N. J.
Mayo W. Hazeltine, being duly sworn, deposes and says: I have been for some years a resident of Asbury Park, a borough adjoining Ocean Grove, and forming a part of the same township. I have been personally acquainted for upward of three years with Mr. Allen D. McCabe, and know that his standing in this community as a citizen and business man is high. He is entirely worthy of belief. I can further attest that he left New York for Jacksonville in the steamer which [illegible] the latter part of last week.

Talk for Hancock, work for Hancock, vote for Hancock when the time comes.

Five thousand eight hundred and thirty-nine gentlemen from Asia, vulgarly called Chinese, came into this country last year, and are now damaging American labor. There is no protective tariff on Chinamen.

The following are the official figures of the total vote for Governor at the October election in Indiana, as received by the Secretary of State:—Porter, Republican, 230,291; Landers, Democratic, 222,740; Gregg, National, 14,863; plurality for Porter, 7,551.

MILES ROSS, our candidate for Congress, secured appropriations which brought more money into this county than was obtained by any other member of Congress we ever had. He has never cast a vote against our interests. He is of the people and for the people.

Vote for MILES ROSS.

A Republican paper in Norwalk, Connecticut, has declared for Hancock and English. The editor says:—"We would not support Garfield if it were beyond a doubt that he would receive the electoral vote of every State. He is not a man influenced by honorable motives, and he requires too many certificates of character. We advocate the election of him whom we deem the more worthy."

George Ticknor Curtis, the personal friend and biographer of Daniel Webster, says—"If the people of this country love the Constitution of the United States and wish to preserve it in its integrity as a free, beneficent, mild and paternal government, arrogating to itself nothing that does not belong to it and exercising its appropriate powers for the equal benefit of all sections and all classes, they must turn the Republican party out of power."

Labor is wealth. Labor makes capital. The Democratic party holds that they are entitled to equal protection. Democracy brands as infamous the theory now advanced, that, because a Chinaman can live on rats and work for a few cents a day, his cheap labor is to be bought and freely imported to the exclusion of Americans. The man who ever avowed such a doctrine as that ought to spend the balance of his life either in China or the State Prison.

A moment's reflection will convince any man of common sense, that to raise the amount of tariff revenue absolutely necessary to meet the interest on our large National Debt, and to provide means for the payment of Government expenses, will of itself create the most ample protection to every interest. The cry about the tariff, set afloat by the Republican leaders after the failure of their rebel claim and bloody shirt programme, is unadulterated humbug, as they well know and as one of their number has thus admitted—"We intend to bamboozle ignorant voters with the tariff argument as long as we can." What a low estimate the Garfield party must place upon the intelligence of American voters. Workingmen! Show them that you are neither fools nor woolies?

HANCOCK, ENGLISH, LUDLOW, ROSS AND STOVER.

TO THE DEMOCRATIC VOTERS IN NEW JERSEY.

NEW JERSEY DEMOCRATIC STATE CENTRAL COMMITTEE.

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Oct. 27, 1880.

We are on the eve of a very important Election. Upon the votes cast November next may depend the Nation's life. We vote for a President and Vice-President of the United States, a Governor, Congressmen, and Members of the Senate and House of Assembly of the State of New Jersey. It will be the duty of the Legislature to elect a United States Senator, and the vote upon the question will probably determine whether or not we shall continue to have a Democratic majority in the Senate of the United States. The country calls upon you to give one day of your best effort in support of free ballot and an honest count. The Republican Party everywhere are alert, unscrupulous and terribly resolute. The emergency is too great—the crisis in our National affairs too [illegible]—the dangers which threaten us too [illegible] to justify any good Democrat in withholding from the cause in which we are engaged, the support [illegible] which his presence will give. [illegible] at the polls in your voting precinct. Neither fraud, intimidation nor bribery can prevail when honest, determined men are on guard.

J. R. McPHERSON,
Chairman.

Don't bet money on the election. Betting is against the laws of the State, and besides, it may cost you your vote.

Every working man should remember that Garfield says employers "have a right to buy labor where they can get it cheapest," and recommends the importation of Chinese cheap labor.

The accident that has placed in the hands of the National Democratic Committee the evidence of the monstrous frauds by which the managers of the Republican party are endeavoring to keep themselves in power cannot be regarded as anything less than providential. The whole Republican plan of the campaign is one of deception, corruption, trickery and fraud. They nominated a smirched candidate and deceive their readers by keeping from them the evidence of his character. They openly and unblushingly raise large funds to carry elections. They resort to the trick of crying "tariff" while their candidate is a free trader. And now they are detected in a plan to colonize a State to carry it by illegal votes. If the people do not rebuke such infamies at the polls there must soon be an end to free institutions.

The Democracy is the only Union party.

The Worst Kind of a Tax Shirk.

The more the gross evasion of taxes by FREDERIC A. POTTS is examined and brought to light the more astounding and shocking it appears. To the assessor of Union township, Hunterdon county, he says, "my personal property other than you see here on the farm is invested in my business in New York," and he escaped with an assessment of $5,000 on personal property, which in 1867 he applied to have reduced to $4,500, and had it so reduced.

The assessor was deluded and deceived; he was under the impression that Mr. POTTS' personal property in New York was not taxable in New Jersey. He knows better now.

But Mr. POTTS did not stop here. The farm, which does not belong to [illegible], upon which he pays taxes, was [illegible] 1867 for $25,740. [illegible] It was assessed up to 1874 [illegible] then Mr. POTTS applied to [illegible] assessment reduced, and it was [illegible] $10,780; again in 1877, [illegible] it reduced to $10,500; [illegible] he wanted to get [illegible] next year he asked to [illegible] down to $10,000, and [illegible] So it appears [illegible] evasion and concealment [illegible] more than $300,000 [illegible] what he could [illegible] to the lowest [illegible] all the while [illegible] taken [illegible] the whole State."

[illegible] he could compel [illegible] to pay tax on [illegible] who even a [illegible]

[illegible] New Jersey!

Slaves or Freemen?

Workingmen of New Jersey! The Republican leaders have strong hopes of carrying New Jersey, because they believe that you are [illegible] and so [illegible]!

The party of monopolies and rings believe that they can coerce you into voting against your judgment and your desires because a few of them pay you wages, none too large, for your honest labor.

They endeavor to deceive you with false alarms. They seek to frighten you by empty threats of want and misery for those dependent upon you!

Be not deceived: be not alarmed!

Stand together and you cannot be injured.

Maintain the manhood which is within your bosoms.

Show that the suffrage which you have inherited through the blood and suffering of the founders of this government, is not at the beck and call of those who merely pay you for the labor which you give them.

To give way now would be to acknowledge a mastership which would be your degradation.

From all parts of the country comes up the cry from some of your fellow-workmen, "We are oppressed."

FREDERIC A. POTTS, in his mines in Hunterdon county and on his coal docks at Elizabeth, says to his employees, "I pay you a dollar a day. You toil and sweat in heat and in cold, in sunshine and in storm, but it is not enough. I must be elected, you must betray your party, oppose your friends and sink your manhood." And all for a dollar a day.

The Singer Sewing Machine Company says: "A Democratic Congress refused to extend the patent under which we were enabled to sell a machine costing $10 for $50; they have broken our monopoly and we will be revenged. Vote for Garfield and remain in our good favor. Vote for Hancock, and take the consequences."

So in almost every manufacturing concern owned by Republicans, by their threats and falsehoods they are endeavoring to deceive and coerce you.

Stand together now, if you ever intend to. Give way this time, and expect to have some other demand immediately made.

For if you do not maintain your own self-respect, they will not help you in it. If you sink your manhood once, they will only push it deeper in the mire.

Remember, too, that the law is upon your side; no man can threaten you at his will. Even if you should lack courage, the people of the State are behind you in the maintenance of your rights.

They have placed among the [illegible] against [illegible] and the [illegible] of [illegible] the very wrong which is now being imposed on you.

The 58th section of the "Act for the Punishment of Crimes," is as follows:

[illegible]

Any man who threatens you with loss of labor, employment, wages, &c., [illegible] within the [illegible] State Prison.

With this law behind you, your defeat [illegible] of your own making.

Workingmen of New Jersey, will you be slaves or freemen?

Any Democrat who refuses to work for and vote for Hancock simply because Ludlow is the present candidate was too good for the Republicans, shows himself to be a moral coward. The man who changes his choice for fear of [illegible] regardless of right or wrong, is not worthy the [illegible] of men who [illegible] made [illegible] the tragedy. The [illegible], is he who [illegible] up for the right without in defeat or success. Democrats! quit you like men—be strong for the cause of HANCOCK and Union. Nothing can defeat us in this election but dishonesty and weak knees.

On a full and fair vote New Jersey is Democratic to the core, as the following will show:

	Dem.	Rep.	Gr'b'k.	Maj.
1868	[illegible]	[illegible]	....	[illegible]
1871	[illegible]	[illegible]	....	[illegible]
1874	[illegible]	[illegible]	....	[illegible]
1876	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
1877	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
1878	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
1879	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

It will be seen by the above that when the Democrats are out in full numbers, as they were in 1876, they far outnumber their opponents. The prospects are that there will be fewer laggards this year than ever. Hancock will run ahead of his ticket and now that a reaction has set in on the [illegible], there is no fear of our losing the State. Let every Democrat see that a full vote is got out.

The United Labor League of America Denounces Garfield.

AN ADDRESS ISSUED.

The United Labor League of America has issued an address to the working men of the United States, in which Garfield is handled without gloves. He is summed up as follows:

He is the man who refused to vote for an appropriation to pay the robbed and down trodden laborers of the district of Columbia.

He is the man who voted millions of acres of your lands to railroad kings.

He is the man who has been foremost in every [illegible] in Congress which was labelled "job."

He is the man who voted against the right of actual settlers on the public lands.

He is the man who got a five thousand dollar bribe to open the door of your treasury to Boss Shepherd.

He is the man who sold himself to England, and if you are guilty of the inexcusable crime of electing him President, you will be governed through the Free Traders of London instead of through Washington.

He is the man whose whole public life has been a contradiction to labor and to honesty.

In the dental ranks will never occur if you are particular with your teeth, and cleanse them every day with that famous tooth-wash, SOZODONT. From youth to old age it will keep the enamel spotless and unimpaired. The teeth of persons who use SOZODONT have a pearl-like whiteness, and the gums a roseate hue, while the breath is purified, and rendered sweet and fragrant. It is composed of rare antiseptic herbs and is entirely free from the objectionable and injurious ingredients of Tooth Pastes, &c.

Hancock Veterans

Meet at their Headquarters, Somerset street, every Wednesday evening. Regular drill Tuesday and Friday evenings, at 8 o'clock.

E. A. Gross, President.
Julian Scott, Secretary.

Vote early.

Vote for Hancock and English.

Look out for fraudulent voters.

Let every citizen lawfully entitled to vote, deposit a ballot that meets his own approval.

Many a dust-blinded pedestrian and crop-raising farmer, gave thanks for the recent and welcome rain storms.

Democracy is opposed to making the rich richer and the poor poorer, but would make all prosperous and happy.

The Friday evening singing school in the chapel of the Crescent ave. church, is largely attended by all ages and both sexes.

Rev. Jacob Cooper, D. D., of Rutger's College, will occupy the pulpit of Trinity Reformed church Sunday morning and evening.

There is no more handsomely furnished and equipped billiard parlor in this city than that lately opened at Miller's (formerly Laing's) Hotel.

The Democratic party is in favor of protecting every industrial interest alike, and, at the same time, protecting labor as well as capital.

Those having notes falling due on Tuesday next, should remember that such day is a legal holiday and they must meet their obligations on Monday.

The members of No. 2 Engine Co., re-dressed their arch on Monday, and had their picture taken under it, with the steamer, by photographer Thorn.

Messrs L. L. Compton, Joseph Cutter and Robt. Simpson boast of four deer amongst the game they have recently been slaughtering in the Adirondacks.

Workingmen—do you not recognize the fact, that if the election of General Hancock would reduce your wages, then your employers would support the Democratic ticket for that very reason.

Those Republicans who are threatening workmen with loss of employment if they exercise the inalienable right of suffrage by voting the Democratic ticket, will find out that they are handling a two-edged sword.

The Railroad managers have of late instituted a "still-hunt" for the parties who make a practice of renting and hiring commutation tickets. The search has, so far, resulted in the arrest of two or three citizens of this place.

The property of the Netherwood Hotel Company, was recently sold under foreclosure and purchased for $60,000, by Messrs. Pomeroy & Plummer, the holders of the first mortgage. The price paid is less than one-third of the original cost.

We are pleased to announce that Geo. V. Hecker & Co., whose Self-Raising Flour has been so long an extensively used, have put a Baking Powder into the market. The name of Hecker on any package is a guarantee of perfection. Ask Your Grocer for it.

In the Court of Quarter Sessions at Elizabeth last week, Mr. Adam Fritz was arraigned before Judge McCormick, and pleaded "not guilty" to an indictment for assault and battery. Trial was set down for Nov. 4th, and the accused was discharged under $1,000 bail.

The first to present a pocket time table containing the changes of Monday last, was Mr. E. C. Mulford, whose office is at the east end of the Railroad station. The cards were issued from The Constitutionalist's steam presses on the same morning the changes were made.

Those who have been so fortunate as to experience the pleasures of a collation gotten up by that experienced New York caterer, Mr. John Crawford, will not need our recommendation of that gentleman's efficiency. A reference to our advertising columns will show what he is offering the Plainfield public.

To appoint a Commission of skilled experts, outside of Congress, to thoroughly examine into the details of the present tariff system, and thereupon given practical judgment, is the Balance plan, sanctioned by many of the Republican Senators, and petitioned for by prominent Manufacturers through the country.

The regular Winter time-table of the Central R. R., was issued on Monday morning last. No changes of any particular account are made, excepting that the 11:34 a. m. is run through this city at 10:38, and in consequence there is no train for New York from that time until 1:26 p. m. The Sunday morning train for New York now leaves at 6:45.

The Sabbath school connected with the Congregational church will hold its session in the Seventh Day Baptist church on and after next Sunday, Oct. 31st, at 2:45 o'clock p. m. The Pastor, Rev. Wm. Manchee, will lead a class for the study of the Bible, to which all are cordially invited.

Geo. W. Rockfellow,
Superintendent.

A target company, composed of members of the Halsey Engineer Corps of Newark, which took part in the late Republican parade in this city, visited North Plainfield on Saturday last and enjoyed a day's recreation and one of Mr. Joseph Blair's generous dinners. On their return to the depot, three cheers were given by the members for the Hancock and English banner on North ave.

It was our good fortune to be allowed an inspection of the tables spread by Mr. George Miller, at Laing's Hotel, for the entertainment of the guests of the Lincoln Club, on Thursday evening of last week. There is no one who can do that sort of thing more completely and thoroughly than landlord Miller, and a bountiful supply of coffee and food rolled into the jaws of the six hundred, on the occasion prepared for.

The election of General Hancock to the Presidency will be followed by a thorough investigation as to how the thousands of millions of dollars have been expended during the past twenty years. That the party of Garfield & Arthur fear, and well they may. To prevent such an act of injustice to the taxpayers, is why the enemies of Democracy are fighting like tigers at bay. Drive them from cover, Voters of New Jersey!

On the evening of the 18th of Nov., the Relief Association will hold its Anniversary meeting in the Methodist Church. The speaker for the evening will be Chas. L. Brace, who has been connected for twenty years with the Children's Aid Society in N. Y. It is hoped that the reputation of Mr. Brace and the interest felt in the Association will ensure a large audience. It is earnestly desired that all who are working in any department of this Society as visitors or otherwise, will avail themselves of this opportunity to gain practical suggestions from one who has had so large experience in charitable work.

James E. Martine, Esq., of this city, addressed a large Hancock & English mass meeting at Farmingdale, Monmouth County, Thursday evening of last week, which was presided over by Judge Martin. Gen. Charles Haight was the speaker of the evening, who by his eloquence held his hearers spell-bound until the close of his remarks, which were greeted with tumultuous applause. The same night there was an enormous long torch-light procession of uniformed men from the surrounding country, while huge bon-fires made the scene as light as day. There is great enthusiasm for the whole ticket in Monmouth County.

The very liberal system upon which Edsall & Price are conducting their business, has won the confidence of the people, and secured to them a patronage that is seldom bestowed upon a firm in the same space of time. They have superior advantages, being engaged extensively in the jobbing as well as the retail trade, which enables them to handle large quantities of goods direct from the great importing and manufacturing firms of New York and Philadelphia. They are also fitted to share these advantages with their numerous patrons, who are not slow to avail themselves of such opportunities. Where the buyers' and sellers' interests are mutual, success is sure to follow.

On Wednesday morning of last week in the Court of Oyer and Terminer at Elizabeth, Judge Vandyckel presiding, the negro John Johnson was arraigned and pleaded not guilty to an indictment charging him with shooting and killing Samuel Williams in this city during August last. Mr. Lindabury [illegible] for prisoner asked that the trial might not be set down earlier than the latter part of December, as he would be engaged in the Supreme Court for some time, and would not have the opportunity for preparation previously. Judge Van Syckel suggested that the trial be put off until some date in the January term, and by consent of the [illegible] and counsel, the third Tuesday in January was fixed upon.

Vote for George C. Ludlow.

The store formerly occupied by Edsall & Price, No. 18 East Front street, is to let at a bargain. See adv.

There was a false alarm occasioned on Monday last at 10.30 p. m., by a brush fire in the neighborhood of Netherwood.

Members of the First Ward Hancock and English Club are earnestly requested to attend a meeting at their rooms on this (Friday) evening, Oct. 29th, at 8 o'clock.

There will be a shooting match at Blair's Hotel, North Plainfield, on the morning of Nov. 26th, at 10 o'clock. The match will be decided with shot-guns at 40 yards; the first prize being the celebrated stallion "Young Jersey," and 2d and 3d prizes of gold will be given. All are invited to compete.

Fools.

The author of "A Fool's Errand" (which the title page tells us is "By one of the Fools," and "Dedicated to the rest of the Family") is swinging around the country still engaged on the same business. He spoke at the Wigwam last Tuesday evening, and gave a sort of oral appendix to his recent book.

Vote for Miles Ross.

How About the Fire Wells?

It is a startling fact that many old and reliable wells on private premises in this city, have given out and are entirely destitute of water, within the past two weeks. The cause is attributed to the long and continued drought. How are the Fire Wells? If old wells, which have never before been known to go dry, now give out, how must the drought affect the wells made for the use of the Fire Department in case of emergency? The matter subject is an important one and should be looked after.

Vote for Rowland M. Stover.

Piano Recitals.

Miss Anna Bock, a pupil of Liszt, is announced to give a series of three piano recitals at Steinway Hall, N. Y., on the afternoons of Nov. 11th, 18th and 20th. It will be remembered that after her studies at Vienna, Miss Bock was heard at concerts in all the principal capitals of Europe, where she appears to have brought credit to the maestro and herself. The lovers of classical music, among our citizens, will undoubtedly take advantage of the opportunity offered to hear this pianiste.

Vote the Whole Democratic ticket.

An Old Folk's Sociable.

On the evening of next Thursday, Nov. 4th, there will be given in St. Mary's Hall, formerly the church, on Fourth street, an "Old Folk's Sociable," whereat the young folks, it is to be presumed, will also enjoy themselves amazingly. After some trouble the managers of the affair have succeeded in securing the services of Mr. J. F. Kerrigan, the celebrated Irish Piper, who will be present in person and play some of those inspiring national airs for which he is so justly renowned. Other pieces of instrumental music have been engaged, and everything that will tend to make the evening's entertainment pleasurable, will be provided. Tickets are now for sale at 50 cents each.

Look out for bribery and corruption.

Elected(?)

The Republican Assembly Convention, for the Third District of Union county, was held at the Plainfield wigwam on last Saturday afternoon. The names of Messrs J. L. Miller of Westfield, J. Hervey Ackerman of Plainfield and Frank W. Sheldon of Rahway were presented as candidates for nomination. No choice resulting from the first ballot, an endeavor was made to stuff the hat on the most approved Republican plan, but Chairman Randolph, after a "mechanical calculation," ordered another vote. Mr. Sheldon subsequently received the necessary number, and the delegates present, recognizing his coming defeat, proceeded to elect him beforehand. Plainfield gave a majority of 480, Westfield 40, Summit, 20, &c., &c. Let him R. I. P.

Notable Longevity.

Mr. Frasse Cole of Scotch Plains celebrated the anniversary of his 94 birthday on Monday last, by entertaining at his residence a number of old friends and neighbors. Among the guests were the Rev. Lewis Bond, aged 87; Mr. Fitch Shepard, aged 80; Mr. Henry F. Garet, aged 79 and Mr. Lyman Spencer; almost all of whom had attended their host's school during the boy-hood days of the past. There was a bountiful dinner partaken of, and the celebration was further carryed out by appropriate speechmaking and other features. Mr. Frasse Cole is the father of our old acquaintance Mr. Jacob Cole. He has been a life-long Democrat, and will cast a vote for Hancock and English on Tuesday next.

Arrest illegal voters on the spot.

The American Institute Fair.

That the interesting features of the Forty-ninth Annual Exhibition of the American Institute are increasing, is proved by the continuous patronage the exposition is accorded. Day and night the building at 63d street and Third ave. is crowded with those in search of instruction and amusement; and the instrumental concerts including Prof. Arbuckle's cornet solos, lend additional attractions to the visit. Besides the products of farm and factory that are exhibited, machinery for all purposes is shown in operation; and printing, embroidering, and other arts by steam may be seen at every stage from their beginning to completion. Those visiting the exhibition from Plainfield, will be landed at the door of the building, upon taking the Elevated R. R. at the City Hall, New York. No one should neglect availing themselves of the opportunity, which will greatly repay any trouble or expense.

Beware of spurious tickets.

The Congregational Church.

At a meeting of the Congregational Society held on Wednesday evening, Oct. 20th, it was unanimously resolved to change their place of worship from their present location to the Seventh-Day Baptist Church. There will, therefore, be no further meetings in the church corner of Second street and Central ave.; but services will be held on and after next Sabbath, in the Seventh-Day Baptist church. The Congregational Society is just entering the second year of its existence, and during the year just closed it has raised over $3,000 wherewith to meet its expenses, and has paid promptly all its obligations. The Treasurer's report, as presented at the first annual meeting, we take pleasure in saying was clear and intelligible. The Congregational Society have resolved that their financial affairs shall be conducted on a cash basis, which plan has already been so successfully adopted by the Methodist and Seventh-Day Baptist churches of this city.

"Married Life," by Amateurs.

In spite of the fact that other entertainments claimed the patronage of Plainfield's public on Tuesday evening last, VanDeventer Hall was well filled with the higher class of our citizens upon the occasion of the Amateur Dramatic Performance in aid of the Muhlenberg Hospital Building Fund. The play selected was Buckstone's hackneyed comedy, "Married Life"; and as every aspiring dramatic association has attempted to please its audiences with the unreal characters and impossible situations of the play, any reference to the plot would be unnecessary.

Of the rendition of the comedy on Tuesday evening, too much in praise cannot be said. All the parts showed careful study and well-judged dressing. The characters of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Coddle were admirably set forth by Mr. W. Rockhill Potts and Mrs. Dr. Chas. A. Hart. Both performers showed themselves to be consummate artists with a thorough knowledge of natural action. Mr. Homan L. White and Miss Florence Tweedy interpreted the parts of Mr. and Mrs. Lionel Lynx with much truth and accuracy. In the first act in particular was the lady's acting especially [illegible]. Miss Sallie [illegible], as Mrs. Frederick Younghusband, showed a thorough appreciation of the [illegible] disposition she was expected to portray; in all stages of which she was ably sustained by Mr. Wm. F. Kaufman. The melancholy state of mind into which Mr. and Mrs. George Dismal are supposed to have drifted, was marvelously illustrated by Mr. [illegible] and Mrs. [illegible]. [illegible]

To the Ladies of Plainfield.

At a meeting held Oct. 8, 1880, by the members of Empire Hook & Ladder Co. No. 1, it was unanimously resolved, that a vote of thanks be tendered to the ladies of this city, for the donation of eatables especially those sending cakes for our collation on day of parade, which was appreciated by us most heartily. Also a special vote of thanks to Mrs. Brown of Emily street, North Plainfield, for sending us a beautiful wreath, which was appreciated in the same manner. Hoping you will accept of this vote of thanks, and trusting if ever you should have the misfortune of having the Fire Fiend raging about your doors, that the Zephyrs will never be wanting in your rescue.

Yours Truly,

Deacon Clark Rogers—Deceased.

The death of Mr. Clark Rogers on Monday morning last, leaves a vacancy in our city's list of esteemed and respected residents that can never be filled as admirably again. The deceased had long been one of Plainfield's principal property owners and always to be found closely identified with its best interests. He was a revered member of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church, the welfare of which organization was one of his heart's desires. Quiet and unassuming in his friendships, loved and cherished by his family, his death causes many a kind spirit to mourn in sympathetic unison at his demise. The funeral services, which took place on Thursday morning at the church to which he had belonged, was largely attended by a number of the associates and acquaintances that respect for his personal qualities had drawn around him.

Our Governor in New York State.

The recent tour of Gen. B. McClellan through New York, has been, judging from the local newspapers of that section, of great benefit to the cause of Hancock and English in the State. Every place visited by the gentlemen, was alive with enthusiasm for the Democratic cause; and the entire trip was a perfect ovation. In a letter from Oswego to a friend in this city, Gen. Wm. H. Sterling who accompanied the Governor says:

"At present writing the General is resting, and a mass of people are surging in front of the Hotel calling for Little Mac. I never saw anything like the enthusiasm! Party lines are thrown aside and the oft repeated 'General I am a Republican, but I am with you now' is heard everywhere. I do not hesitate to say that the General's visit through Nothern New York has made thousands of votes—and history will bear me out."

Democratic Rallying.

We are safe in saying that the largest political meeting ever held in Van Deventer Hall, was that of Wednesday evening last. The main floor and galleries were packed—every seat occupied, and the aisles filled and walls lined with those who were compelled to stand. Amongst the gathering were noticeable many ladies and a fair proportion of the Republican constituency, who seemed to be interested and sympathetic throughout. The Plainfield Cornet Band was in attendance and played much of their admirable music both before and during the evening's programme. The stage was well filled with the speakers and such representative men of our city as Mayor Harper, Rev. Father J. P. Morris, Joseph W. Yates, E. H. Depew, P. Echevarria, James Clark, S. O. A. Murphy, Wm. H. Voorhees, Van Rensselaer Schuyler, Wm. B. Maxson and others. The meeting was called to order promptly at eight o'clock by the choice of James E. Martine, Esq., as Chairman. The Hon. Chas. H. Winfield was then introduced as the first speaker of the evening.

That able orator began his address, by begging to be excused from making a speech and requesting to be allowed to have a social talk with the gathering. "There have already been," he continued, "too many false issues started in the campaign that are calculated to mislead the people; and I propose to refer only to those matters of record that relate to the parties and upon you are called upon to support (applause). If there is any Republican in this place, who takes exception to what I may say, I wish he may call me to order. I do not intend to use Democratic argument against the Republican party—you Republicans would not accept it as conclusive—but if I can show you by Republican testimony that your party is the most corrupt and dishonest the world has ever seen, then, as honest men, you should go to the polls and vote against its continuance in power (continued applause). I intend to talk to Republicans in particular. There is an old saying that refers to the Democrats—'The righteous have no need of repentance' (laughter and applause) * * * I am told that in this city there is a minister of the gospel who has been speaking for the Republican party. I am told that this political parson said, that because there was once a slave-block in the South, you should therefore vote the Republican ticket (laughter). I am afraid that he is a minister of peace that loves to fan fraternal discord. Bob Ingersoll was formerly a Democrat and a member of a christian church. But since he has gone over he spends six months of the year in abusing God Almighty and six months in abusing the Democratic party (laughter). * * * The Republican orators tell you that they are for protection and we are for free trade. A Democratic tariff for revenue will bring you all the protection you get now, but it will never protect monopolies. You can't levy a tariff for revenue without having protection; nor can you levy a tariff for protection without revenue. I have an English journal here which is the organ of the Cobden Free Trade Club of that country. This Club had a meeting recently, whereat speeches were made—an extract from one of these speeches I will read to you from the report in full. The speaker says: 'I am happy to be able to refer to the fact that General James A. Garfield, the Republican nominee for President of the United States, is an honorary member of this Club, and pledged to the advancement of its principles' (hisses). The nomination of this free-trader shows that the Republican party are attempting to hoodwink you when they claim to be protectionists." The speaker then referred to the "Chinese Letter" that had lately been made public; stating that he was a lawyer accustomed to sift testimony and was satisfied that Mr. Garfield wrote it. "It is not the first time that the gentleman has denied a thing. He swore emphatically before a Republican Committee that he never received or agreed to receive any share of a certain stock—and that Republican Committee reported directly against Mr. Garfield's oath (hisses). If the party had the nomination to make over again, you couldn't induce them to put Messrs. Garfield and Arthur up if you clubbed them (laughter). It reminds me of a darkey who took a mule to the river to drink. The animal was checked up so tight that he couldn't get his head down. Our friend went behind the mule and loosened the crouper, upon which he was immediately kicked about three hundred feet. 'I guess,' he said when he got up—'I guess I unloosed de wrong end.'" (laughter). The speaker occupied just two hours in convicting the Republican party and its candidates, by their own testimony. His arguments, based upon the opinions of the Republican press regarding the past of Messrs. Garfield and Arthur were most scathing and withering. Republicans present winced under the shame they felt when their own party's denunciation was repeated. Loud and continued applause fairly shook the Hall as point after point was established against the Republican party and in favor of the Democracy. No one present could disguise the fairness of the speaker's words, or claim that his accusations were not based on Republican records. His witty hits were received with great laughter, and his expose of the fallacious theories of the Republican party—proved to be fallacious by its past—called forth jeers and hisses. "They tell you," he said, "that if the Democracy comes into power the Rebel Brigadiers will govern us. Why! the post-master of this city will find that his appointment, under Republican rule, is signed by a Rebel Brigadier." A facetious and sarcastic epitaph, to be placed over the grave of the Republican party, closed this unequalled address. In part it was:

HERE LIES (AS IT ALWAYS HAS)
THE REPUBLICAN PARTY.
When it lived, it lived in clover;
When it died, it died all over.

The Hon. James Fitzgerald of New York, followed with cheering words from that State regarding the coming election. "New York," he said, "will give Hancock and English 50,000 majority; Brooklyn will add to it 20,000, and the doubtful counties of the Harlem River will swell the total to 100,000. I feel that I am safe in guaranteeing my friends in the city that New Jersey will clasp hands with the Empire State and cast its electoral votes for the Democratic candidates."

Owing to the lateness of the hour, Plainfield's always welcome speaker, Captain James M. Brady, spoke but briefly. He closed with these words of appeal: "Next Wednesday morning, when New York shall be ushered upon the parapets of [illegible] and [illegible], let us [illegible] that it may look down [illegible] and find the flag of New Jersey waving among them."

There is a large manufacturing establishment in Plainfield, a standing rule of which is to allow every employe to vote as he thinks proper, but to positively prohibit political discussion on the premises, be it Democratic or Republican. That is right, and directly adverse to the Republican style of putting up a placard bearing this despotic edict—"Employes of this establishment are requested to vote as are the employers there [illegible], under penalty of immediate dismissal." We honor the noble Plainfield firm in question, and hope they may be richly rewarded for their loyalty to the spirit of American Freedom.

Another Misrepresented Corporation.

An employe of the Sterling Button Works, informs us that the proprietors of that manufactory are loud in their denials of the rumors afloat regarding their action in relation to the political complexion of their hands. The works have been closed for a short time in order that new and improved machinery—which increasing business has necessitated their purchasing—may be added. As soon as such intention is carried out, work, with increased facilities, will be resumed; and all their old workmen, and such new ones as are needed, will be employed no matter what their politics, or who is elected. We can thereby assure the hands who were told by Republicans that if they (the workmen) voted for Hancock they would be discharged—that such statements are false, and those who made them must have known them to be false.

No Questions Asked.

The Republican party of the country, having so outrageously misrepresented matters to the workingmen in making of the "tariff for revenue" clause in the Democratic platform an argument against the election of Hancock and English, the Young Men's H. and E. Club of this city secured the presence at Van Deventer Hall, on last Friday evening, of Mr. Lawson N. Fuller, and challenged any who wished to dispute, or argue or question the matter, to be in attendance and promised every opportunity for all to ventilate to any extent their opinion. The cowardice of the Republican party of this city and its recognition of the fact that its statements are false and could not be substantiated by figures or arguments, were shown by its silence. Mr. Fuller, upon being introduced, at once requested those who had any questions to ask in relation to the tariff, to ask them no matter what their bearing. A suggestive silence followed. There was not a Republican present, that did not know that the arguments made by his party were fallacious. The speaker followed with a most interesting and instructive review of the issues of the present campaign. He had always been a Republican, but being the proprietor of one of New York's most extensive sugar refineries and having continual dealings with Custom House officials, he, in the past, had become acquainted with the corrupt and dishonest management of Chester A. Arthur. In company with other importers of the city, he had gone to Washington to request Mr. Arthur's removal; which, all will remember, was done by President Hayes and Secretary Sherman after a thorough investigation. In consequence, upon the nomination of Arthur, he refused to support him; which course of Mr. Fuller's, any but a dishonest man, would have followed. "I am called a 'flopper,'" said the speaker, "and a 'renegade' by numbers of my former party, but I tell them—'gentlemen, I voted before there was a Republican party, and expect to still vote after it goes out of existence.'"

The Hon. James M. Wadsworth, ex-Mayor of Buffalo, N. Y., now a resident of this city, preceded Mr. Fuller with a most comprehensive survey of the tariff laws and a thorough exposition of its many unjust provisions.

The audience was exceedingly large, when it is considered that the weather out of doors was most unpleasant. His Honor, Mayor Harper, presided and the stage was occupied by the representative men of our city.

If a Republican dares tamper with your vote, thunder in his ears—"I am an American citizen that cannot be bought—not a Heathen Chinaman."

A Parade of the "Moral Idea" Party.

The parade of the Republican party of this and other cities, which took place in Plainfield recently, was in general sufficiently unobjectionable to demand no condemnation. When, however, ladies cannot stand on our sidewalks without being insulted and knocked down by the rougher and rowdies that formed a part of the Republican turn-out, and when gray-headed men have their teeth knocked down their throats, younger men are cut open with razors and citizens in their own door-yards are shot with revolvers—it is time that a local journal, no matter what its politics, should publish any unbiased and impartial account. It is considered a sufficient apology on the part of the Republicans of this city to say that the perpetrators of the outrages were a club of "drunken niggers" from Elizabeth—that is, the party consider it a sufficient apology, and follow it up by claiming that the blame should rest on the shoulders of those who cheered for Hancock. In other words, if anybody dares to cheer for anyone but Garfield they must do so at the risk of their lives, because the Republican party chooses to elevate drunken colored men to a position in its parades. They have the right, in a free country, to occupy the whole middle of the street in honor of their candidate, but no one has a right to stand on the sidewalks and mention the Democratic nominee. Would they think the Democracy of Plainfield were justified in shooting, cutting and beating them for cheering Garfield? Would they in such a case allow that inebriety was an excuse? Three young white girls were chased through North avenue, by a number of the colored club. Were they any the less frightened because their pursuers were drunk? Some boy hallooed for Hancock on Somerset street, and the same club broke ranks, rushed into the crowd on the side-walk and knocked an elderly lady down with a lantern. Was the blow and shock any the less severe because the aggressors were intoxicated? Mr. John Loughlin, whose hip was laid open by a razor in the hands of one of the paraders, is suffering just as severely as he would if the party who attacked him was sober. This victim is an inoffensive young man, correct in all his habits and vouched for by his employers as being a temperate and painstaking workman. He will be unfit to pursue his vocation for some weeks. Have the Republican party shown that they discountenance the act of their supporters, by offering to reimburse Mr. Loughlin for the wages he will lose and the expense he will necessarily incur, from not the slightest fault of his own? Mr. Lawrence Kane was shot in the arm, while standing in his own door-yard—he was sober and must bear the consequences of another's drunkenness.

Verily if the country remains in the hands of the Republican party it will be no longer the land of the free and the home of the brave. They will rule or ruin! They allow no difference of opinion! Join their ranks among the outragers, or submit to be outraged.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

The Democrats held a large and enthusiastic meeting in the Hotel Hall last Friday evening. The speakers were Mayor Harper, of Plainfield, Capt. James M. Brady, of New York, G. E. Lindsley, of Rahway, and Jas. S. Wadsworth of Plainfield.

Political meetings, bolters, and an occasional breaking in of stores, keeps Westfield a going.

The Boys held a grand parade on last Wednesday. Clubs from all the adjoining towns were present. Messrs. Potts and Robbins were also present.

Our Democrats paid a visit to their Cranford friends on Monday night last.

J. H. Lewis and family, now residing at Warwick, N. Y., are stopping at Mr. Chas. L. Welsh's for a short time.

Dr. J. V. Smith has removed to his new residence on Clark street.

Last Wednesday night there was quite a reunion of the relatives of Mr. Ezekiel and Hannah Clark, at the residence of Constable Barnaby, on Broad street. Mr. Ez. Clark, although 86 years old, is still in good health and spirits, as also is his wife, Hannah Clark, aged 86 years. They have been married for 65 years, and have seen their great-great-children, which number up to 111, most of them being present at the reunion. The most happy and humorous part of the evening seemed to be their son Chas. T. Clark.

There was some thieving going on around here a short time ago. Mr. G. A. Hayward's drug store was entered, the drawer rifled of its change, and all the cigars. On Friday night Jas. Perry's meat shop was broken into and a lot of meat stolen. Last Monday night F. E. Raley's [illegible] shop was [illegible], also F. Roberts' store on [illegible], where the parties took [illegible], tobacco, &c. At Mr. Hayward's [illegible] a large piece of [illegible]. [illegible]

In the columns of yesterday's (Wednesday) Truth is to be found the following:

—"When James A. Garfield shall have gone upon the stand, and under the oath before the Hon. Noah Davis, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, have sworn that he did not write the Chinese cheap labor letter, Truth will publish the facsimile letter of the Executor of the estate of Henry L. Morey, deceased, which accompanied the famous Chinese labor letter."

Be not deceived by false statements of the Garfield managers. They will resort to any means for the purpose of prolonging twenty years of partisan power.

Duty of the Hour.

New Jersey is the battle ground. It is a small State, but as it grows so goes the National conflict. In the dark days of the Revolution, when despair came over the Continental soul and our forefathers went forth to battle hatless and barefooted, it was the heroic attitude of New Jersey which snatched victory from the jaws of defeat and gave liberty to the people. She was then faithful among the faithless, and her heroic perseverance then saved the cause of human freedom. Let her now repeat her revolutionary struggle in the cause of Right. She can elect Hancock and take the Republic out of the grasp of the destructive imperialists. Her devotion once severed us from a kingdom of foreign despots, and now the votes of free Jerseymen may be the means of saving the Republic from internecine monarchy, confusion and ruin. Not only are we, of this little State interested in a National and State point of view, but our local well-being hangs in the balance and is to be settled, for weal or woe, by the November elections. Then let us get to work with a Spartan will. We must elect Ludlow Governor. The next Chief Magistrate of New Jersey will have the appointment of successors to Judges Vandyckel, McCormick, Mulford, Alward and Prosecutor Fay, and a United States Senator is to be chosen by the next Legislature. Clear the decks for action!

The Democratic party is the determined enemy of special legislation for the benefit of grasping monopolies.

Paid to Talk Differently, Now.

(New York Herald, Dec. 6, 1873.)

The reputation of these men is so soiled and besmeared that to hear Dawes and Garfield talking virtue is much like listening to the Evil One counselling sinners to pursue the straight and narrow path.

(New York Tribune, Oct. 29, 1872.)

* * The men who have lost everything ask for reunion. The men to whom the war brought nothing but gain, refuse the proffered hand and continue their malignant work of discord and hate.

(New York Tribune, Nov. 8, 1876.)

It was the misfortune of the Republican canvass that from the outset men identified with the present regime [Grant's] were pushed to the front. The Republican party originally gained its power by appealing to the consciences and intellects of men.

(New York Tribune, Nov. 2, 1872.)

* * * We purpose putting a stop to Federal interference with local affairs, and especially with the freedom of elections. * * * We purpose abolishing forever officers like Davenport, and teaching the agents of the President to respect the privacy of honest citizens' houses and the sacredness of personal liberty. * * *

The Republicans bagged the electoral vote of Florida in 1876 through the agency of a corrupt Returning Board. Now they seek to accomplish the same thing by shipping repeaters from New York per steamers. The Democratic National Committee having discovered their "jewell" of a game, very properly made the evidence public.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

It was the good fortune of the Senior of The Constitutionalist, in company with the following named gentlemen—Messrs. E. P. Thorn, A. Vanderbeek, M. M. Thorn, LaRoss Manning, of this city, and John S. Clark, Esq., of New Brunswick, to pay a visit to that sportsmen's paradise, Barnegat Bay, last week, in quest of recreation and wild fowl. Taking the cars on the Long Branch Railroad at Elizabethport, we were soon transferred to the terminus of the line at Point Pleasant. Here was found in waiting "Uncle" Bennett, with his strong and commodious stage, to convey our party through the pines a distance of about two miles to where lay at anchor, in the waters at the head of Beaver Dam Creek, the beautiful yacht "Bertie Jarden," owned and commanded by Capt. John Dorsett. Soon all the traps were aboard, anchors weighed and we were speeding toward Barnegat Bay. After a peaceful night's slumber on board the yacht, the party were up early in the morning, and under the guidance of such experienced gunners as Wm. Morris, John Forsyth and Taylor Johnson, each division were ensconced in a "blind" and patiently awaited the appearance of the foe—i. e., the ducks. Soon the "boom" of the Webley, Clabrough, Scott and Parker guns were heard and the game began to tumble. At the command—"Low Bridge; here they come," each nerve was strained and the hot blood coursed swiftly through the veins, as with bated breath, the novice awaited the near approach of the unwary ducks, who only approached the decoys to meet such a fusilade as left many of them dead and dying on the waters of the bay. In the evening the tired sportsmen congregated in the small cabin of the "Bertie" after a hearty supper, smoked the pipe of peace, and listened to sweet music from the organette and singing until nine o'clock, when—"all hands to-bed, and up at 3 in the morning," was the orders of the veteran Will Morris. Thus did the time pass away until Friday when the party returned home loaded down with game, the net results of the four day's shooting being 162 head of duck and snipe. To those who desire a pleasant trip of the kind, we recommend to their notice Captain John Dorsett and his yacht "Bertie Jarden," and advise that they secure the services of Messrs. Morris, Forsyth and Johnson as gunners. There are none better to be found in that section. Want of space forbids us giving the extended notice of the above-mentioned trip that we desired. We reserve "notes" for a future issue. Did you hear that "Parker" just now, or was that the "Webley?"

Fish Warden P. C. Ohl, in company with Mr. A. A. Anderson, of the State Fish Hatching establishment at Bloomsbury, on Saturday last, set free 450 large size young black bass in Tier's Lake, this city, and Brooklyn Pond, New Brooklyn, by order of the State Fish Commission. These strangers will thrive rapidly in the waters in which they were deposited. They cannot be taken legally by any device inside of three years. It is to be hoped that parties residing near the streams will take an interest in the matter and see that the fish are protected. They will see the benefit when the fish have obtained sufficient size to be caught.

The season for shooting deer in this State is from Oct. 15th to Dec. 1st.

A fair expression of public sentiment will triumphantly elect Hancock and English. They can only be defeated by fraud.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

A DIVE FOR LIFE.

Just below Kanahwa Falls, in West Virginia, is an overhanging rock of immense size, jutting out about one hundred feet over a seething whirlpool and it was once the scene of a remarkable adventure.

The Indians were in hot pursuit of Van Bibber, a settler, and a man of distinction in those early times. He was hard pressed and all access to the river above and below being cut off, he was driven to the jumping rock, which proved to be the jumping off place for him. He stood on the rock, with full view of the enemy above and below, who yelled like demons at the certainty of his capture. He stood up boldly, and with his rifle kept them at bay. As he stood there he looked across the river, saw his friends—his wife, and a babe in her arms—all helpless to render assistance. They stood as if petrified with terror and amazement. She cried at the top of her voice:

"Leap into the river and meet me!"

Laying her babe on the grass, she seized the oars and sprang into the skiff alone. As she neared the middle of the river, her husband saw the Indians coming in full force and yelling like demons.

"Wife, Wife!" he screamed, "I'm coming; drop down a little lower."

With this he sprang from his crag and descended like an arrow into the water, feet foremost.

The wife rested on her oars a moment to see him rise to the surface, the little skiff floated like cork, bobbing about on the boiling flood. It was an awful moment; it seemed an age to her. Would he ever rise? Her earnest gaze seemed to penetrate the depth of the water, and she darted her boat further down the stream. He rose near her, in a moment the boat was along side of him, and she helped him to scramble into it amid a shower of arrows and shot that the Indians poured into them. The daring wife did not speak a word; her husband was more dead than alive, and all depended on her strength being maintained till they could reach the bank. This they did, just where she had started, right where the babe was lying, crowing and laughing. The men pulled the skiff high on the land; and the wife slowly arose and helped to lift Van Bibber to his feet. He could not walk, but she laid him down beside his babe, and then seating herself, she wept wildly, just as any other woman would have done under the circumstances. That babe is now a grandfather and that rock is called "Van Bibber's Rock" to this day.

WORDS OF WISDOM.

Discretion of speech is more than eloquence.

Suffering has its limits, but fears are endless.

Money is like muck, not good except it be spread.

He that is not industrious envieth him that is.

One maxim is "A pound of pluck is worth a ton of luck."

It is easier for a man to descend to earth than to mount to heaven.

However laborious the life of the good, it is less so than that of the bad.

True virtue is like precious odors—sweeter the more incensed and crushed.

If a man be gracious and courteous to strangers it shows that he is a citizen of the world.

True philosophy places us above honors, but nothing places us above the ennui they cause.

The mind has more room in it than most people imagine, if you would furnish the apartments.

The evils of the world will continue until philosophers become kings, or kings become philosophers.

Strong minds, like hardy evergreens, are most verdant in Winter; when feeble ones, like tender Summer plants, are leafless.

There are truths which some men despise because they have not examined and which they will not examine because they despise.

Childhood often holds a truth with its feeble fingers, which the grasp of manhood cannot retain, which it is the pride of utmost age to recover.

Natural objects themselves, even when they make no claim to beauty, excite the feelings and occupy the imagination. Nature pleases, attracts, delights, merely because it is nature.

We double all the ills of our fate by dwelling on them; a scratch becomes a wound, a slight an injury, a jest an insult, a small peril a great danger, and a slight sickness often ends in death by brooding apprehensions.

FASHION NOTES.

Turbans are still in favor.

Fine feathers are worn this season.

Foulard and velvet collars and cuffs are worn abroad.

Poke bonnets have the trimmings massed far in front, leaving the crown perfectly bare.

Breton lace plaitings in many rows cover one side of some of the dressiest Japanese fans.

Gold beads mixed with chenille are used in patterns on the crowns of bonnets and lace to match edges the brims.

Monograms and heraldic devices are embroidered in gold chain stitch on many of the new pockets or reticules.

Butterfly bows and rosettes of satin ribbon, with drooping ends to fall on the low coiffure, are worn by young ladies in preference to the broad Alsacian bows.

A corsage cluster of flowers is now furnished by Parisian modistes with all dresses except the plainest suits. Sometimes a small bird is perched in these clusters.

Some very sensible overcloaks are reported from abroad. They have capes springing from the shoulders, and they protect the dress entirely. The cloaks resemble an enlarged dolman, and they are lined with blue, almond, gray, cardinal or black.

Low-throated linen collars, with a point each side and flaring behind, are worn by young ladies. High linen collars are worn very close indeed, and are made quite straight, with a stud button at the top of the collar, and a second stud lower down.

In Paris fashionable dinner and evening dresses are made of grenadine, lace, Indian or Hindoo tulle, gauze, muslin and barege mixed with silk and satin. Tints of white, black, pearl gray, pale blue and different shades of yellow, such as amber, ripe corn and ecru, are the favorite colors, the trimming being jet-lace, beads and ribbons. If the [illegible] or [illegible] is [illegible] of plain figure or brocaded silk or satin [illegible], and generally of a different color.

POETRY.

PERSEVERANCE.

One step and then another,
And the longest walk is ended;
One stitch and then another,
And the largest rent is mended;
One brick upon another,
And the highest wall is made;
One flake upon another,
And the deepest snow is laid.

So the little coral workers,
By their slow and constant motion,
Have built those pretty islands
In the distant dark-blue ocean,
And the noblest undertakings
Man's wisdom hath conceived,
By oft-repeated effort
Have been patiently achieved.

Then do not look disheartened
On the work you have to do,
And say that such a mighty task
You never can get through;
But just endeavor day by day
Another point to gain,
And soon the mountain which you feared
Will prove to be a plain!

"Rome was not builded in a day,"
The ancient proverb teaches,
And Nature, by her trees and flowers,
The same sweet sermon preaches.
Think not of far-off duties,
But of duties which are near,
And having once begun to work,
Resolve to persevere.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

COUSIN EDITH.

Lillian Ames stood leaning against the casement of an open window leading on to a sloping lawn, at whose base flowed a sunny, rippling stream of water.

It was one of England's fairest daughters. Even at this moment, spite of the fact that her brow is gathered in a frown, and the red, full lips are unmistakably pouting, her beauty is undeniable.

A few bold spirits had declared that there was little soul in the face; but the large hazel eyes could melt or flash at will; the dark lashes shaded a cheek as white as Parian marble, with rarely even a touch of color upon its velvety surface; and the lithe, graceful figure even unconsciously assumed a new grace in each unsteady poise, until one forgot the question of soul in its perfect outward flesh and blood tabernacle.

Near her, reclining on a low easy chair, sat a young girl of about her own age. At first glance the exquisite soul-loveliness of her face paled in Miss Ame's brilliant beauty, but there were more to love its possessor, and fewer to envy her. Something like imagination was in her voice, as she addressed her friend.

"I cannot believe that you mean it, Lillian," she said. "You have been engaged to Oscar Dering for a year, and how can you say so carelessly that your engagement shall be broken—"

"Beg pardon!" interrupted the other, in low, ironical tones, "I have not yet been engaged to Oscar Dering twenty-four hours. It was to Lord Oscar Dering I gave my pledge."

"Oh, but, Lillian, because he has lost title and estate must he also lose the woman of his love? Think a minute. You surely will not give him up so easily?"

"[illegible] a girl of an age to live upon sentimentalism, but to look upon every-day realities of life. When I engaged myself to Lord Dering, I was the subject of congratulation among all my friends. Now that the cousin who was supposed to be dead crops into life in some remote portion of the globe, and that Oscar insists upon renouncing the property in his behalf without even a struggle, I am not content to let these same congratulations lapse into pity."

"Oh, Lillian, do you think anyone could pity you for possessing so royal a gift as the love of such a man? Think better of it, dear; I know you care for him. Do not so lightly renounce your life's happiness."

"You plead his case eloquently, my dear. Really I did not know I possessed a rival in my fair cousin. Perhaps a heart caught in the rebound—you know the rest, of course, and can point the moral."

"Lillian, you are cruel—cruel!—I—"

But the late speaker had passed through the window out of hearing, and advanced to meet a man quickly approaching on the green sward, while the young girl left behind fell back in her chair, the great tears coursing down her cheeks, on which the crimson color-signal flamed.

It was as though some ruthless hand had snatched the veil from her own heart, leaving exposed its most cherished secret—a secret she had not known herself until now betrayed by her shame.

"I must leave this place. I cannot meet him again; I must go home. But, Oh, how can she give him up!"

Edith Loring and Lillian Ames were cousins, but the one was the daughter of a clergyman whose rectory was some ten miles distant from Ames court, and one of the noblest estates of England, and of which Lillian was sole heiress.

The girls, however, had been closely united, more by the tie of friendship than cousinship, since the latter was a distant bond, and Ames court was almost as much Edith's home as her own. Now, however, the homelier charms of the rectory were very grateful to her. Here no one could prove the discovery so new to herself—to trace the scarlet blush which seemed so often to burn her cheek, until she wondered that it did not leave its brand.

She had been home six weeks, and twice Oscar Dering had driven over to see her, but she had always denied herself to him on some household pretext, until one morning he overtook her in the road.

She had been busy with thoughts of him, wondering how he had borne his ruptured troth, and reproaching herself for the cowardice which heretofore had forbidden her meeting him, when she heard behind her the quick step of the horse's hoofs. His rider drew rein at her side.

"So I am to find you at last," he said. His voice sounded the same as of old; the bright, cheery tone was unchanged.

"Have you seen Lillie lately?" she at last found courage to ask.

"No," he answered, and then she saw the frown gather on his brow, and an expression of pain come about his lips. "I see as little of your cousin as possible now. You know, Miss Loring, I am no longer a subject of congratulation."

"Yes, I know," she said. "I—"

"Don't pity me," he interrupted; "I can't bear that quite yet."

"I did not mean to pity you," she replied.

"Oh, if Lillian had not spoken of the heart caught in the rebound," she thought, when week after week Oscar Dering would find his way to the rectory garden or the rectory parlor, to spend long hours with its fair young mistress.

She understood so well why he came, because now and then Lillian's name drifted into the [illegible] talk, and because, as he grew stronger, he [illegible] of her and of the love he had borne her. It was a mingled pain and pleasure to listen. If only she had not learned her own heart the pain would have been less. But she was destined to learn it more fatally, yet, as one morning strolling through the woods together, the sharp report of a hunter's gun close beside them startled them both. The next instant her companion sank white and senseless on the sward beside her, while the affrighted hunter whose misaimed charge had entered his arm, hastened forward.

"Bring assistance quickly," exclaimed Edith, while she raised the heavy head to her lap: "Oscar, speak to me," she moaned.

"Oscar! Oscar!"

Over and over again she repeated his name in the same accents of despairing love, until they had forced their way into the life-pulses of his being and aroused them to activity.

He opened his eyes in a half-wondering look, as though delirium had overtaken him.

At this instant the hunter returned with assistance, and a half hour later the wounded man had been borne to the rectory, the wound dressed, and the knowledge given that it was merely a flesh wound, painful, but not dangerous. Yet his recovery was a tedious affair.

He grew moody and abstracted. It gave him more time to think of Lillian and his loss, Edith thought, even while she wondered why his eyes followed her with such a strange questioning look. Once she entered his room with some freshly cut flowers in her hand.

"Where shall I put them, Mr. Dering?" she inquired.

"Mr. Dering?" he answered. "Did I not once hear you call me Oscar, or was it a sweet fancy wafted from dreamland?"

Again the crimson tide dyed her face.

"Don't!" she said, as though he had hurt her, and hastened from the room bearing with her the flowers, and it seemed to him the light and sunshine.

Had he been blind all this time, and was he just beginning to see?

A grand ball was to be given at Ames' court. Lillian insisted that Edith should be present, and the invalid also was summoned to the feast.

On the evening of Miss Ame's ball she picked up the paper sent down by the afternoon mail from London.

She was suddenly startled at seeing the name of the man to whom she so lately had been betrothed.

It was published decision of the court that owing to some disability, the title could not descend to Oscar Dering's cousin.

He was, then, Lord Dering still. Fool that she had been. But to-night, while he still thought her in ignorance, she must win him back.

It was late when he entered the spacious drawing-rooms.

"I have been waiting for you," she said in her sweetest, lowest tones.

"You honor me too greatly, Miss Ames," he replied.

"Let us go into the conservatory," she added, "it is cooler there."

He offered her his arm.

From a distant corner of the room Edith saw them.

"I will not begrudge him any happi- [illegible]

"Have you forgotten the time when we were here together, Mr. Dering?" Lillian was asking at this moment.

"No," he answered gravely, looking into the beautiful face beside him.

"Can one ever retrieve a mistake," she asked, "when one finds it out?"

"I don't know," he replied. "Can one cause the rose, blighted in mid-summer, to bloom again in the depths of the winter?"

She knew then what he meant.

"We are dealing in 'smiles;'" she exclaimed, "let us return to our guests."

An hour later Oscar Dering led Miss Loring to the same spot.

"I love you, Edith," he said. "I thought my heart was dead when I met you. My darling, will you be my wife?"

"Oh, Oscar, you are sure, sure of yourself?"

"I have been made more sure to-night," he answered.

She was too happy to question his words—too happy even to let Miss Ame's congratulations sting her when she said:—

"A heart caught in the rebound. Did I not tell you so."

Too happy to be made happier when she learned that on her wedding day she was to be made Lady Edith Dering.

HE COULDN'T HELP IT.

There was a case yesterday of a boy who couldn't help it. A prominent and dignified citizen was looking through the third story window of a block on Jefferson avenue, which he had thoughts of renting, when the idea suddenly struck him to look into the alley in the rear. He raised the sash of a window and peered out upon ash boxes, coal scuttles and barrels of straw without number, and was about to close his observations when the sash came down with a thud and struck him behind his shoulders. In his fright he fell to his knees, and while the solid half of his body was all right, the lighter was over the window-sill. In addition to the weight of the sash any movement of the body was accompanied by pain. The sash could not be reached with his hands freely enough to lift it, and it soon occurred to the prominent citizen that he ought to have help. He could not expect it from behind, for he was alone in the building, but as he looked down into the alley a boy came stumbling along to find something worth begging away.

"Hello! boy, hello!" called the citizen.

"Hello yourself!" replied the boy as he looked up.

"Say, boy, come under the window here; I want to speak to you."

"Not much yer don't," chuckled the gamin. "You can't drop no coal-scuttles on my head."

"But I don't mean to."

"Mebbe not, but you've got a bad face on you for all that. When did you get out of the jug?"

"Boy, I want your help."

"So does your aunt. Don't get me to stand in with no such duffer as you are!"

"I am caught in this window and want to get out."

"So would I! Been prospecting for old junk, eh? You'll get six months for that!"

"If you'll come up stairs and help me out I'll give you a dollar."

"A dollar! You can't play no dollar dodge on me, old man! If you make another face like that at me I'll hit you in the eye with this old lemon. I don't look stuck up, but I don't let any man insult me all the same."

"Don't you know who I am?" asked the citizen.

"Naw, I don't, but I'll bet the [illegible] yet! You've got one of the homeliest mugs on you I ever saw, and I've a good mind to give you one, just for luck. Look out, now!"

He made as if he would throw, and the citizen dodged. This was such fun for the boy that he kept it up for three or four minutes, and the offer of two dollars had no effect on him. Then he gathered six or eight old lemons and oranges together and said:

"I believe you are the boss hyena who knocked dad down at the caucus, and I'm going to drive your nose back exactly as [illegible]!"

"If you throw at me I'll call the police," exclaimed the citizen.

"The sooner ye call the sooner ye'll be jugged! Here's to hit you square on the nose."

The opening of a back door of a store and the appearance of a man disconcerted the lad's aim, and the lemon struck the citizen's hat instead of his nose. His yells brought a climax, but the air was full of tropical fruit even as the boy dusted down the alley and turned a corner.

The boy couldn't help acting that way. He was born so. It wouldn't have been a bit like a boy to run up stairs and release the man. He didn't have a fair show with his spoiled lemons, but boys soon get over disappointments.—M. Quad.

AN ENGINEER'S IGNORANCE.

"Every effort is made," said a railroad officer in a recent conversation, "to procure trustworthy, faithful employees, but all kinds of deceptions are gotten up to throw us off. I have one case in mind. There is a rule on the road for which I labor which compels not only the conductor but the engineer to sign the receipt of all train orders. When my Superintendent took charge he insisted upon having that rule adhered to, and in that way he ascertained that there was one engineer in the employ of the company who could neither read nor write and he had been running an engine for fifteen years. Had an accident occurred to his train, in which accident persons were injured and in consequence of such injuries an investigation had been ordered, and the fact of that engineer's ignorance been established, we would not have saved ourselves (in a suit) for heavy damages, and beside that would have been fined heavily for allowing such a state of things.

His cunning came into play. He was a married man and his wife was once a school teacher, and through her efforts he was able to commit to memory the rules as printed on the time cards, and he had them so thoroughly fixed in his mind that he could point them out on the card, but he was just as liable to do so with the card bottom side up as in any shape. He was a good engineer, but we were obliged to let him go. He went home very much chagrined, but went to work to learn to both read and to write. He spent one whole winter at it, but he was too far along in years to be successful, and finally was obliged to give it up, and to-day he is firing on the road."

A FRENCH JOKE.

In Paris they are very funny with their practical jokes. Here is one told with much satisfaction of Rousseau. Rousseau went into a grocer's shop and said:

"Have you any eight candles?"

"Yes, sir; we sell a good many of them. You see there are more poor people than [illegible] more than a grocer—you are an observer."

"Oh, sir!" said the grocer, flattered, "then you want, sir—"

"An eight candle, please."

"Only one, sir?"

"One to begin with; I'll see about more afterward."

The candle was produced and Rousseau said:

"Will you kindly cut it in two?" This was done, and he then said: "Now would you kindly cut the two halves into four?"

"Into four, sir?"

"Yes; for my purpose I want eight small pieces of candle."

"There they are, sir."

"One moment; would you kindly make a wick to each piece? And now can you oblige me with a match?"

This being done, Rousseau stuck the eight pieces in a line on the counter and lighted them.

"May I ask what you are doing?" said the grocer.

"Oh!" said Rousseau, "it is a joke."

"A joke?"

"Yes; and having made it, I wish you good day."

As he left the shop the grocer ran after him crying: "But you haven't paid me for the candle."

"If I did," replied Rousseau, "where would be the joke?"

A CUNNING FOX.

A New Jersey fox that had been tamed secured the friendship of dogs, but, from his peculiar odor, cats kept aloof from him. They would not walk upon any spot where the fox had been standing. He used his knowledge of this to cheat pussy out of his breakfast. As soon as the servant had poured out the cat's allowance of milk the fox would run up to the spot and walk around the saucer, well knowing that the rightful owner would not touch it. Day after day the cat lost his milk, until the trick was found out, and the milk placed in a spot where the fox could not reach it. After he had been stopped from robbing the cat he tried his cunning on the dairymaid as she was bringing the pails from milking. As she was passing along the fox went up to her and brushed himself against one of the milkpails. The milk became so tainted with the smell of the fox that the maid dare not take it to the house, and thoughtlessly poured it into a pan and gave it to him. The crafty animal repeated this trick several times, but when he found that the spoiled milk was given to the pigs instead of himself, he gave up his attempts.

"SOLID COMFORT."

The other day a lady in this city noticed her "colored help" chewing pins and needles. The lady, thinking the amusement a dangerous one, recommended that she desist.

"No, chile," she said. (The mistress was much younger than the servant.) "In de olden times I had heap ob trouble. I sought comfort in whisky, but dat gib me headache in de mo'nin'. So I tried smokin'. That was de berry [illegible]. Then chewing I tried. But that was no good. Hap'ly one mo'nin' I thought ob pins and needles. "Don't you ever swallow any by accident?" the lady asked.

"Gosh do, chile, gosh do; for some nights I go to sleep with my mouf full and they all gone in de mo'nin'."

The Constitutionalist.

Published every Friday by
W. L. FORCE and A. L. FORCE.

FIGHT ON! FIGHT EVER!

The Presidential election has resulted in the Choice of Garfield and Arthur, which, in our judgment, is a public calamity, and one that may prove subversive of the best interests of country.

The campaign just closed with the registered success of those two candidates at the polls, plainly developed a settled design on the part of prominent leaders of the Republican party to grossly innovate, and eventually transform our system of free government, wisely established by the framers of the Constitution, into a centralized despotism—a monied oligarchy.

That is the danger ahead.

It is an easy thing to lose beyond peaceable recovery civil freedom.

The most unscrupulous political methods have been exerted within the past few months, aided by the whole machinery and resources of the General Government, an army of placemen, and the financial strength and influence of monopolists, to perpetuate the ruling power of the Republican party. If that can be successfully accomplished now, as it was four years ago by fraudulent counting, why not again and again: and then, the elective franchise will become a farce, and freemen, so called, the mere slaves of ambitious rulers.

To that destructive point the country is fast drifting.

The masses of the people are honest, but shamefully have they been deceived by false partisan issues regarding the tariff and business, and criminal sectional charges against the South.

All that kind of artifice has been industriously plied for political effect by the opponents of Democracy.

The people can be cheated.

Are they willing to be shackled?

The purpose of the Democratic party is to maintain the Constitution and Union in their full vigor, to antagonize tyranny in every form, and to defend at all hazards popular rights. For that Democracy has ever fought and will continue to fight.

Defeat makes us still stronger in the faith of Democracy. It is the cause of truth and justice.

If the Republic is to live, the Democratic party must triumph.

Burnish your armor, Democrats!

Prepare to battle again!

A hundred-fold more honorable to be repulsed beneath the patriotic and stainless banner of Hancock than to raise the victor shout with such a leader as Garfield.

THE REASON WHY.

General Garfield will be chosen President of the United States by the electoral vote of New York, and this vote he will receive only in consequence of a disastrous and unexpected falling off in the Democratic majorities in Brooklyn and of N. Y. city. That this falling off was the result of causes quite outside of the national contest is absolutely certain. The vote of New York State will be given to General Garfield, not because General Garfield is the choice of a majority of the voters of New York, but because, not for the first time in the history of our municipal parties, [illegible] personal interests have been preferred to the general [illegible] of the party and of the country. Mr. [illegible], for example, gave the State to the Republicans in 1871 by forcing on the city Democracy his candidacy for a re-election to the State Senate. He was elected, but an entire county ticket and a Legislature were sacrificed. New York has secured a Democratic city government, which is so far a good thing, but it remains to be seen whether New York could not have secured this at a less cost than that of the 35 electoral votes which, added to 138 from the South, 9 from New Jersey and 3 from Nevada, not to mention California, and Oregon, would have elected General Hancock President of the United States. This is not the time for dealing in detail with the causes which have provoked the results we see in New York city and in Brooklyn, nor for suggesting practical preventives of the recurrence of such a calamity hereafter. But it is the time to invite Democrats generally to look into the causes of these results and to make a careful analysis of the figures and statistics of the recent election, while those are yet freshly before us, to the end that when within another month new general committees shall be selected by the Democratic voters, the lessons which those figures and statistics have to teach may not be lost sight of.—*N. The President's Thanksgiving Proclamation.

The following was issued, Nov. 2d, by the President of the United States of America:

A PROCLAMATION.

At no period in their history since the United States became a nation have this people had so abundant and so universal reasons for joy and gratitude at the favor of Almighty God, or been subject to so profound an obligation to give thanks for his loving kindness and humbly to implore his continued care and protection.

Health, wealth and prosperity throughout all our borders; peace, honor and friendship with all the world; firm and faithful adherence by the great body of our population to the principles of liberty and justice which have made our greatness as a nation, and to the wise institutions and strong frame of government and society which will perpetuate it—for all these let the thanks of a happy and united people, as with one voice, ascend in devout homage to the Giver of all Good.

I therefore recommend that on Thursday, the twenty-fifth day of November next, the people meet in their respective places of worship to make their acknowledgements to Almighty God for his bounties and his protection, and to offer to him prayer for their continuance.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington this first day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty, and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and fifth.

[Seal] R. B. HAYES.

By the President:
Wm. M. Evarts, Secretary of State.

The annual meeting of the N. J. Temperance Alliance will be held in the 3d street M. E. Church, Camden, N. J., on Tuesday and Wednesday, Nov. 9th and 10th, commencing at 10 o'clock a. m., on the morning of Tuesday the 9th, with address of welcome by the pastor, Rev. J. T. Gower, D. D. The programme prepared runs through three sessions each day.

We purchased it some weeks ago to use in announcing the result of the political election, but we find no chance to utilize it and at the same time show a regard for the feelings of our party. The only appropriate representation of the existing state of things that it will serve to illustrate, is in portraying the kindheartedness of the noble old Democratic eagle of New Jersey, carrying home what is left of its brother of New York, to nurse it in its nest.

THE STAR OF THE NORTH!

Although up to the hour of our going to press there are still some counties to be heard from that gave Democratic majorities in 1856, yet the Republicans have carried quite a number of the Northern States and the election of Garfield and Arthur is probable. We may be considered weak-backed by our party, but we are compelled to confess that we have had no hope of General Hancock's success since Wednesday morning. The returns given below are as full as it is possible to make them up to the present time; and when is considered the amount of time and labor spent in computing them from other journals, with the aid of scissors and paste-pot, we trust that our pains will meet the approbation they justly demand and deserve.

The Assemblymen of the county are Dunn (D), Parrot (R), Sheldon (R).

The latest returns show a majority in New Jersey for the National Democratic ticket and for the Democratic Gubernatorial ticket. At the rooms of the Republican State Committee the election of Ludlow is not conceded, because full returns have not yet been received, but they say that the indications point to his election. The full vote in the Seventh Congressional District—Newark and suburbs—increase the majority for Potts to 3,365. The returns which have reached the political headquarters from South Jersey and Hunterdon and Warren counties, in middle Jersey, are very meagre, and they may reduce the majority claimed for Ludlow, still further, but not sufficiently in all probability to change the result. The Democratic electoral ticket runs ahead of the State ticket and wins by a majority variously estimated at from 1,500 to 2,200. The Republicans gain one Congressman in the Second and lose one in the Seventh District, so that the delegation will stand as in the present Congress. The majorities for the successful candidates are as follows:

First District—George M. Robeson, Rep.	[illegible]
Second District—J. Hart Brewer, Rep.	[illegible]
Third District—Miles Ross, Dem.	[illegible]
Fourth District—Henry S. Harris, Dem.	[illegible]

Seventh District—A. A. Hardenbergh, Dem.	4,481

Messrs. Robeson and Ross are members of the present Congress. Brewer succeeds Smith, Gbk., and Harris succeeds Clarke, Dem.; Hill succeeds Voorhies, Rep.; Jones succeeds Blake, Rep., and Hardenbergh succeeds Brigham, Rep. Hill and Hardenbergh have been members of former Congresses.

The next Legislature will be as follows:

POSTSCRIPT.

[Special Despatch to "The Constitutionalist."]

NEWARK, Nov. 4.—The latest returns from the back counties of New Jersey increase the Democratic majorities. Warren county gives more than 2,000, Monmouth 2,300 on both President and Governor, and Middlesex gives Hancock 1,691 and Ludlow 1,436 majority. Middlesex county is Ludlow's home. Hunterdon county, Potts's home, gives 1,800 against him. The Republicans carry fourteen counties, the Democrats seven. We make the majority of Hancock 1,900 and of Ludlow 1,450. Official figures will not change this much.

The Legislature stands: Senate, 12 Republicans, 8 Democrats, 1 Independent; Assembly, 33 Republicans, 26 Democrats, 1 doubtful. The Republican majority on joint ballot over all is 15.

Forty-Seventh Congress.

News received yesterday from the Pacific coast States make it reasonably certain that California and Nevada have chosen Hancock electors. These, with New Jersey and the Southern States, will give Hancock 155 votes in the Electoral College, while Garfield will have 217. Nothing has been heard from Oregon, and both parties claim the State.

From the latest returns it seems probable that the next Congress will be about evenly divided as between the Democrats and Republicans, and that the Nationals and Greenbackers will hold the balance of power. These are mostly if not all of Democratic proclivities. Kentucky elects a solid Democratic delegation, and it is possible that Missouri does also. In these two States the Republicans have claimed four Congressmen. The Democrats hold their own in Wisconsin, where the Republicans claimed a gain of one, electing three of the eight Congressmen, and in Tennessee and North Carolina the Republican claims of gains of four members are not well founded. The Democrats gain two in California and possibly three, one in Nevada and three in New York, while the Republicans gain one in Indiana, two in Iowa, one in Minnesota, six in Ohio, and one in Virginia. Giving them their alleged gains of two in Missouri, one in North Carolina, and two in Tennessee, and they still fall short of a majority. The following are the figures by States:

	Dem.	Rep.		Dem.	Rep.
Alabama	7	..	Missouri	11	1
Arkansas	4	..	Nebraska	..	1
California	3	1	Nevada	1	..
Colorado	..	1	New Hampshire	..	2

Massachusetts	1	10	West Virginia	3	..
Michigan	..	9	Wisconsin	3	5
Minnesota	..	3
Mississippi	6	..	Totals	142	144

The Nationals elect 1 in Alabama, 2 in Maine, 1 in Missouri and 1 in New York—total, 5.

* Paul, Readjuster, is elected to Congress over Allen, regular Democrat, in the 7th Virginia District, by 1,000 majority.

The following table shows the standing of the Electoral vote at the time of going to press with our edition:

From Defeated Candidates.

At a late hour Tuesday night, the following were received at the office of Puck.

THE GREENBACK TICKET.

TELEGRAPHIC DISPATCH, FROM JAMES B. WEAVER, OF IOWA, TO PUCK, NEW YORK.

BURLINGTON, IOWA, Nov. 2nd, 1880.
10 P. M.

To the Inhabitants of the United States:

Fellow Citizens: Judging by the returns, which are coming in rather slowly, I think that both the Republican and Democratic parties have beaten me. They have not gained their victory fairly. Fraud and intimidation have helped them to succeed, and at this hour I freely concede to them the 369 electoral votes, which I trust may be fairly divided among them. Apart from the terrible corruption which has characterized this election, I cannot at the moment, hurried as I am, account for our singular want of success. One reason may be that we did not secure the services of Senator Conkling and General Grant. It is true that these gentlemen are not Greenbackers; but I think, notwithstanding, if our campaign managers had realized the great importance of the contest, they would have hired these gentlemen for a moderate sum to stump the different States in the interest of the ticket. Still, our followers ought not to be disheartened at the result.

Our ticket has made considerable gains. Returns up to this moment show an extra vote in New York and two in South Carolina, which will certainly have the effect of encouraging us to persevere. I thank you for the support that you have in your wisdom, given to the ticket. We may confidently hope for better luck next time.

JAMES B. WEAVER.

THE PROHIBITION CANDIDATE.

TELEGRAPHIC DISPATCH FROM NEAL DOW.

AUGUSTA, MAINE, Nov. 2d.
11:30 P. M.

To the Prohibition Party:

Am sorry to say that I think we are defeated. It can't be helped; we did our best, but whiskey was too much for us. I shall be glad to meet the whole of the party to-morrow night when we can discuss the situation over a cup of cold tea.

NEAL DOW.

THE ANTI-MASONIC TICKET.

TELEGRAPHIC DISPATCH FROM JOHN W. PHELPS.

ST. ALBANS, Nov. 2d.
Midnight.

The jig is up. Jubela, Jubelo and Jubelum still ahead. Boaz, Jachin, Tubalcain, Mahabon and Shibboleth have carried all before them. When candidates for initiation are initiated, they are deprived of all metal. We have been deprived of the little mental we had by the exigencies of the election; but we did not begrudge it, and, if we got any more, we shall be but too glad to utilize it for the glorious cause that we represent. I cannot understand why there should be such an organization in existence. All that the members of the Masonic body seem to do is to eat suppers, and, when in Lodge, to discuss Hiram Abiff, skull, cross-bones, coffins and mallets. But I am diffuse. I think Masonry is a fraud all around. It means nothing; it does nothing, except to encourage a parcel of fellows to make consummate idiots of themselves. Masons profess to assist their brothers, but they rarely do; they much prefer to let them starve. Still the majority of the voters in the United States are not alive to these facts, indeed, ignore them. I suppose Masons will feel mad at my giving them away in this manner; but they must get pleased again. The worst case against which we have to contend are the fellows called the Knight Templars, who dress themselves up in cocked hats, tunics and swords. It would be bad enough if they were real Masons; but they are as spurious as they can be. In spite of the disaster which has befallen our party this year, 1884 may tell a different tale. Our progress is very encouraging, as we have gained, since the last election, one vote in Oregon, two at Cape Horn, and one in Chinese Tartary. I don't think the Democratic party has done better.

JOHN W. PHELPS.

The census bureau, at Washington, has issued a bulletin of the results in the State of New Jersey according to the schedules returned by the enumerators, which, however, are still subject to possible corrections by reason of the discovery of omissions or duplications of names in the lists of inhabitants returned. The bulletin shows that the total population of six counties is [illegible], of which 83,671 are foreign-born and 9,147 colored. The population by the counties is as follows: Bergen, 35,790; Morris, 50,867; Sussex, 23,553; Essex, 189,819; Passaic, 68,736; Warren, 36,588. The number of males is [illegible] and of females [illegible]. Included in the 9,147 colored are 102 Chinese in Bergen county, 14 Chinese and 8 Indians in Essex county, 3 Chinese in Morris county, 17 Chinese and 4 Indians in Passaic county and 4 Chinese in Warren county.

At Long Branch, during the absence of the widow of Edwin Adams, the actor, at Boston, a few days ago, her cottage was broken into by burglars, who carried away everything of value.

In the dental ranks will never occur if you are particular with your teeth, and cleanse them every day with that famous tooth-wash, SOZODONT. From youth to old age it will keep the enamel spotless and unimpaired. The teeth of persons who use SOZODONT have a pearl-like whiteness, and the gums a roseate hue, while the breath is purified and rendered sweet and fragrant. It is composed of rare antiseptic herbs and is entirely free from the objectionable and injurious ingredients of Tooth Pastes, &c.

In one pocket he carried a bottle of spirits of ammonia for the headache and in another he had a bottle of cologne, just purchased. As they were driving along one of our side streets, he asked her to take a smell of his new perfumery, but unfortunately he placed the wrong bottle to her nose. She took a wholesale sniff, remarked "Gogog—ugig—hah—hugh!" and went over out of the carriage backwards, and for an instant the air in the rear of the buggy was filled with striped stockings, high-heeled shoes, arms, a shocking girl and so forth. She escaped serious injury, but she hasn't spoken to the young man since. Some girls get mad at the least little thing.

Relief Association.

There will be a special meeting in the rooms of the Association Wednesday, 10th inst., at 11:30 o'clock, a. m. Business: election of a Vice President, an Assistant Secretary and three Managers.

MRS. H. D. [illegible],
Secretary.

A Lamentable Decease.

As sad and heart-rending a fatality as ever appealed to the sympathies of the people, is the sudden death in North Plainfield of the entire family of children of Mr. and Mrs. Fawson. The four little ones died of diphtheretic croup, inside of two weeks, leaving a bright and happy household dark and gloomy, and loving parents childless and disconsolate. This husband and wife, so afflicted in spirit, are strangers in a strange land. Only a short time in this country and city, yet the sincere kindnesses shown by their neighbors have done much to soothe and comfort them.

Sunday Work.

A large force of workmen were engaged on Sunday last at Elizabeth, in placing new timbers and ballast under the point where the Central and Pennsylvania Railroad tracks cross each other. Hundreds of people looked on during the day, and not a few stopped on the return from worship to see how the work progressed. Cars were not able to cross the point during the day, and passengers were compelled to walk across Broad street from one train to another. It was rather inconvenient, especially for ladies, but the difficulty is remedied to-day, and trains are proceeding as usual.

Questionable Leniency.

Again has Plainfield's young incendiary, Charlie Vail, been engaged in his favorite pastime of burning other people's property. This time it was a valueless stack of corn-stalks, and the boy was allowed to escape the Reform School that he deserves to fill, upon his father settling with the owner of the fodder. "It was only a little one"—as the saying goes—and those possessed of a false idea of clemency will probably justify in their minds the action of the authorities. This sort of questionable mercy is likely to be continued until someone suffers in consequence. When a conflagration is started, which will lead to the ruin of a residence in which an unsuspecting inmate may be consumed, it will dawn—although but faintly, perhaps—upon the sagacity (?) of these kind-spirited mortals, that this young Vail is a dangerous member of Plainfield's society. Not only for the self protection of our citizens, but also for his own good should the lad be sent where stern treatment and vigorous control will be dealt out to him. His parents seem to possess no power to command his well-doing; and such being the case, the penalties prescribed by law against an offender of his sort, should be enforced. May we hope that the City Judge and other officers-of-the-law will agree with us in our opinion? and doing so, see to it that the danger that threatens our citizen's lives and buildings, is averted.

Personalia.

The Rev. Wm. Manchee is lying quite ill at his residence.

Mr. and Mrs. John Taylor Johnston and family have returned from Europe.

James Garfield Pike arrived on election day, but was unable, on account of his extreme youth, to vote.

Miss Carrie M. Woodland of North Plainfield is steadily improving in health and slowly recovering her powers of speech.

Governor elect, George C. Ludlow was the guest of Gen. Wm. H. Sterling last Monday at the latter's residence in this city.

Among the former residents of our city, that visited the place last Tuesday, were Mr. Charles Opdyke and Loyal Farragut, Esq.

Councilman Wm. McD. Coriell's wife is steadily improving in health, and is in a fair way of speedily recovering her usual condition and spirits.

It is rumored that a prominent dry-goods merchant of East Front street, and one who was a former clerk of that gentleman, will each take unto himself a wife, on or near Thanksgiving day.

Our late fellow citizen, Mr. Fred. D. Gordon received the election returns from the wire that had been switched to the Wigwam, on Tuesday night last. It is needless to say that he officiated in a most satisfactory manner.

Col. Julian Scott is at home again, hard at work in his Plainfield studio. For the past few weeks this artist has been making his headquarters at Cozzen's Hotel, West Point, while engaged in painting the portraits of several prominent army officials stationed at that place.

Election Notes.

Rally for Jersey!

We "helped scare!"

"Grace, 'tis a joyful sound."

This was "an off year." Way off!

How are you betting on the "general result" in '84?

The Republicans of this State threw away their votes.

Ohio won in 1876 by fraud; it has won in 1880 by corruption.

Judson Kilpatrick's last speech was mistaken for a wind-storm.

What was said at the Republican Headquarters—Now let us pray.

It would require a miracle to convince Marshall Jewell that he did not do it.

General Hancock has decided by a large majority not to resign at present.

It is said that a man residing in Kansas swore in his vote at the Third District.

The Democrats will still have a majority in Congress. It is a magnificent fort to hold.

Thanks to Democratic vigilance and precaution, the election passed off quietly everywhere.

Twenty colored gentlemen voted from one little house on Front street that won't hold half that number.

Latest returns from Feltville show a net Greenback gain of one. It is claimed that the Greenback electors will poll the entire vote of the city.

Now that the election is over, the Rev's Beecher, Ingersoll and other ministers can give there attention to preaching the gospel.

Now that the campaign is over, it would be interesting to know how many cents to a dollar Mr. Tilden paid on the promised $25,000 subscription.

We are glad to see one flag, at least, floating in honor of Governor Ludlow. Mr. John Hughes of the Somerset Hotel, raised his in triumph on Thursday, last.

They say that only Democrats indulge in intoxicating liquors. If so, what ailed the Republican of North Plainfield that tried to vote twice in the First District?

If (yes—if) Hancock had been elected, Mr. Harry Couch would have been bound to wear white feathers in his hat. But as Garfield was elected (at least we have heard he was) Mr. Wm. Campbell wears the decoration, instead.

Hancock showed his dignity and good sense by keeping his hands out of the canvass. He said to a friend: "The National Committee has the machine in charge. I am only a passenger." It reminds us of Lincoln's saying that "I have very little influence with this Administration."

Our Brother Firemen of New Haven.

On Thursday of last week, the Fire Department of New Haven was reviewed by Mayor Bigelow of that city, the common Council and others. Mr. Augustus Saltzman of Plainfield was invited and entertained as the guest of Chief Hendricks. There was also present on the occasion Chiefs Brown of Fair Haven, Currier of Norwich and Goldsmith of Waterbury. The engines, hose carriages and entire force looked remarkably well, and the citizens of New Haven have just cause to be proud of their Fire Department under the efficient care of its able Chief.

What They Think in England.

The Advertiser of London, Eng., says: "We cannot but regret the result, if not very keenly. In the first place there is no comparison between the merits of the two men. Garfield is a third-rate political party politician, belonging not perhaps to the school of the Blaines, Conklings and Camerons, but quite as little to that of reformers like Adams, or honest administrators like Sherman. He is the nominee of the wire-pulling interest and is a man of no sort of personal weight or character. Hancock is with few exceptions the most distinguished and without a single exception, we believe, the most loyal, honest and high-minded soldier still in the active service of the Union. He is a man of distinction so great that even his acrimonious Democratic politics could not prevent his retention in active service when twenty-nine-thirtieths of the soldiers, officers and generals of the Federal army were relegated to civil life; and since the younger Adams no man of character equally high, no man so completely answering to what Englishmen mean by a gentleman has ever filled the Presidential chair. Garfield belongs to the type of which Lincoln was the best and Andrew Johnson was by no means the worst example, who in this country would be called political adventurers. The condonation of the gross pecuniary dishonesty and infamous maladministration of the Republican party cannot but exercise a bad effect upon the political morality of the United States, already lamentably low, and will undo whatever good Mr. Hayes may have done during his four years of office teaching jobbers and patronage mongers, peculators and trading politicians that there is no enormity which party zeal will not cover and public indifference speedily forget.

Fashion Notes.

Nicely fitting pelisses are made of cashmere shawls.

Wide belts are sometimes laced in front and at the back.

The woolen handkerchief suits are called shawl costumes in London.

Two studs are worn in the high linen collars that fit closely about the throat.

Color clashes is the expressive name given to some of the new combinations.

Lining about the lower edge of basques is prophesied by a Paris correspondent.

The newest gold cloth is of fine net, wrought with leaves and blossoms in bright colors.

When laces are used on wedding dresses, round point and the finest duchesse are selected.

The Pilgrim suit is made up for children, and the Tam o' Shanter bonnet is worn with it.

Bonnets of peacock feathers, with strings of peacock blue, are pretty head coverings for little girls.

Veils of rose-colored tulle are worn by English ladies. They impart a roseate tint to the complexion.

Cashmere colored buttons and belt buckles are used on the Oriental costumes so fashionable at present.

Rich, stiff white satin, brocaded in silver or gold, is the appropriate fabric for an elegant wedding-dress.

A foreign fashion is that of wearing scented petticoats, with sachet powder, quilted in among the linings.

The imitation spider, which is the newest thing in jewelry, has its body of pearls and its legs of oxidized silver.

Flesh-colored ruching is newer than cream color or plain white, but it is exceedingly trying to the complexion.

Some of the new black stockings have red bands woven into them, so as to make them look as if cross-gartered.

Gray plaid silks, in soft qualities and Eastern colors, are shown for sashes and caps for wear with light evening dresses.

One of the new uses for chenille is to imitate feathers, and some imported bonnets have plumes of chenille lying on their crowns.

Yellow pineapple cloth handkerchiefs, with one corner ornamented with an embroidered design in high colors, are considered elegant.

Family Matters.

Borax is a great economizer of soap in the laundry.

For starching linen.—Use one teaspoonful of borax to one pint of boiling starch. This will improve the stiffness and gloss—a fact not generally known.

It should be a fixed rule that floors, particularly those of sleeping-rooms, are to be scrubbed only on dry days, and where the health of the inmates is delicate the drying should be quickened by lighting a fire in the room.

To clean lamp chimneys, hold them over the nose of the tea-kettle when the kettle is boiling furiously. One or two repetitions of this process will make them beautifully clear. Of course they must be wiped with a clean towel.

Boston brown bread.—One heaping coffee-cup each of Indian, rye and Graham meal; sift and beat together with two cupfuls of molasses, two cupfuls of sweet milk and one of sour, adding a teaspoonful of cream, one dessert-spoonful of soda and a little salt. Beat thoroughly and pour into a tin form; steam four hours and then place in the oven to brown.

Boiled custard.—Take six eggs; beat the whites separately; have one quart of milk boiling; add four tablespoonful of powdered sugar; one tea spoonful of vanilla; put the whites in tablespoonfuls to boil; let them boil one minute, then turn them over to boil one minute more; remove them to a dish; stir the beaten yolks in the milk, and boil three minutes, as more will curdle them; remove to another dish; when cold, place the whites on the top, and serve with jelly.

Stewed rabbit.—Cut the rabbit up in nice sized pieces, wash well and dry. Then fry them to a nice brown. Take two large onions, slice very thin, fry also, and dredge with flour. Put all in a saucepan, with pepper, salt, and some good stock—or water, with herbs, mixed, carrot and turnip—but if possible the stock, as only the onions are served with it. Let it stew gently two hours; rub down a piece of butter with a little catsup or hot sauce. Just ten minutes before serving, stir all together.

To fry apples and pork chops.—Season them with salt and pepper and a little powdered sage or sweet marjoram; dip them into beaten egg and then into beaten bread crumbs. Fry about 20 minutes, or until they are done. Put them on a hot dish. Pour off part of the gravy into another pan, to make a gravy to serve with them, if you choose. Then fry apples which you have sliced about two-thirds of an inch thick, cutting them around the apple so that the core is in the centre of each piece. When they are brown on one side and partly cooked, turn them carefully with a pancake turner, and let them finish cooking. Dish around the chops or on a separate dish.

For The Constitutionalist.

"At Rest."

"I shall soon be at rest." Ah, how well I remember
Those last words that came from the lips of my wife;
She had spoken them oft, [illegible] December,
[illegible]
[illegible]
Her [illegible] virtues were [illegible]
Through years of both joy and affliction I've proved her
My sweetest and best life companion to be.
"I shall soon be at rest." With what deep feeling [illegible]
I heard those sad words, as her [illegible]
Was leaving her frail mortal body, to [illegible]
From earth unto heaven, from life into death.
I can scarcely yet realize that she has left me;
My sadness of spirit no language can tell;
But I must submit, for 'tis God that bereft me,
And I know, as my Father, [illegible] all things well.
"I shall soon be at rest." May her last valediction
Be consoled to me, and oh, may I be,
Through thy kindness, made strong to bear this sad affliction,
Until I'm at rest up in Heaven with Thee.
She is now with her Saviour, in mansions eternal,
In His sheltering arms she is clasped to His breast;
She is singing the anthems of angels supernal,
Her earth-life is ended, she now is at rest.

STATE ITEMS.

Levi Dare, a Bridgeton Councilman, has died, aged 71 years.

Oyster growers in Atlantic county are shipping largely to Europe.

The new Roman Catholic Church of St. Joseph, at Keyport, a fine edifice, was dedicated Sunday by Bishop Corrigan.

Rev. Dr. Knox, of Bloomfield, has been elected Moderator of the Presbyterian Synod of New Jersey for the ensuing year.

Frank Hughes, a brakeman, was killed by falling between to cars of a train on the Pennsylvania Railroad, near Monmouth Junction, on Saturday morning.

The house of John Dillingham, at New Prospect, was robbed on Saturday, during the temporary absence of the family, of silverware, jewelry and clothing, valued at $800.

The drug store of J. P. Schuff, in Bloomfield, N. J., was entered by burglars last Friday night, and robbed of $30 in money, and a quantity of cigars and candy. The butcher shop of E. B. Corbey, in the same village, was robbed the same night of a small quantity of meat.

The five days' storm along the New Jersey coast wound up with a heavy gale on Saturday afternoon and night. A telegram from Long Branch says no further marine disasters have been reported, except the stranding of an unknown schooner near Egg Island Point.

Four prisoners escaped from the Camden County Jail on Sunday evening the 24th of Oct. They were confined in the south corridor and cut the bars of the windows. They then dug below a strong wire screen, and removing bricks enough, excavated a hole large enough to crawl through, coming up through the pavement and thereby gaining their liberty.

At Denton Corners, on Monday night, Oct. 25th, Ephraim Applegate, arming himself with a fowling piece, started out to chase dogs from his sheep fold. Suddenly coming upon a dog, he attempted to strike the animal with the butt end of the gun, when the weapon exploded and the contents entered Applegate's breast. He died of his injuries on Tuesday night.

A gentleman in Norwood, Bergen county, is building a large clock on the lawn beside his residence. The clock is about thirteen feet tall, and is shaped like those that were fashionable many years ago. This clock has caused many curiosity seekers to visit Norwood. It is to be called "My Grandfather's Clock." At noon a large bird will make its appearance upon the clock and announce the hour by flapping its wings and crying "Cuckoo."

Joseph Harris, a prisoner at the State Prison from Hudson county, committed suicide on the afternoon of Oct. 24th by hanging himself in his cell. He was 26 years old, and was committed on Sep. 23d, 1879, for five years, for breaking and entering. He tied a sheet and towel together and hung himself from a staple in the ceiling. When found he was dead, with his toes resting on the cell floor. He had evidently tried to hang himself with his suspenders, as they were found broken and a piece of them tied to the staple. He was seen by the deputy about an hour and a half before his dead body was discovered, and he then seemed to be all right. He was quiet and well-behaved, except in June last, when he made a hopeless effort to escape by breaking from a gang and trying to climb a lightning rod. After a thorough investigation by the County Physician, a certificate for burial was granted.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

Captain Pierce, the fish culturist of South Jersey, will, about the last of November, proceed to Washington to make arrangements for stocking the small ponds of South Jersey with carp from Europe.

Peter Wyant, of New Hampton, has four pet trout, which answer to his call when feeding. Three are one year old, and one is 15 months, and weighs one and a half pounds. The others weigh one pound each. Mr. Wyant feeds them daily with fresh meat, and it is curious to see them eat from his hands.

The keeper of the Absecom lighthouse communicates the following to persons interested in—almost anything: "I have actually caught 300 birds between the netting and the windows of the light. Ducks, brant, geese, and other smaller birds are often attracted by the light into my wife's kitchen. The pair of geese which you saw in my aviary I caught there one stormy night."

Last week Frank O. Garver, clerk in the Erie Railroad office at Middletown, was out gunning near Unionville Sussex county, when his gun was discharged, the contents of one barrel passing through the tips of his index and large fingers on his right hand. He was getting over the fence at the time and had the gun exploded a second sooner he would have received the contents in his body.

Holman's PAD.

Cures without Medicine. Simply by Absorption.

THE ONLY TRUE MALARIAL ANTIDOTE.

DR. HOLMAN'S PAD is no guess-work remedy—no feeble imitative experiment—no pilfered hodge-podge of some other inventor's ideas; it is the original and only genuine curative Pad, the only remedy that has an honestly-acquired right to use the title word "Pad" in connection with a treatment for chronic diseases of the Stomach, Liver and Spleen.

By a recently perfected improvement, effected by the addition of vegetable ingredients of newly-discovered remedial value and absorptive adaptability, Dr. Holman has greatly increased the scope of the Pad's usefulness, and appreciably augmented its active curative power.

This great improvement gives Holman's Pad (with its Adjuvants) complete and unfailing control over the most persistent and unyielding forms of Chronic Disease of the Stomach and Liver, as well as Malarial Blood-poisoning.

Holman's Pads have cured—and are daily curing—diseases of so many kinds, that the list is well-nigh interminable. It includes Malarial Poisons of every type, from Aching Bones and Low Fever to Chills and Dumb Ague; Stomach Diseases, such as Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Sour Stomach, Chronic Diarrhea, Flatulency, Heartburn, &c., &c.; Liver Disorders, like Biliousness, Bilious Colic, Dangerous Fevers, Sick Headache, Pains in the Side, Bilious Fevers, Torpid Liver, &c., &c. Well does this mighty remedy justify the eminent Professor Loomis' high encomium: "IT IS NEARER A UNIVERSAL PANACEA THAN ANYTHING IN MEDICINE!"

The success of Holman's Pads has inspired imitators who offer Pads similar in form and odor to the genuine Holman Pad. Beware of these bogus and imitation Pads, gotten up only to sell on the reputation of the GENUINE Holman Pad.

Each genuine Holman Pad bears the Private Revenue Stamp of the HOLMAN PAD COMPANY, with the above Trade-Mark, printed in green.

TESTIMONIALS.

"You ask me to favor you with my experience and impressions of Miss NELLA F. BROWN. I seldom if ever yield to requests of this nature. I feel less hesitation in this instance because of Miss Brown's exceeding modesty and unpretentiousness, which are characteristics of genius.

I am informed that she never received instruction in the conventional school of elocution, which fact is greatly in her favor. In this she may be compared with Fanny Kemble and the late Charlotte Cushman, who were illustrious examples of what genius may attain without elocutionary training.

Miss Brown has appeared twice upon the "Star" Course in one season to the eminent satisfaction of vast audiences, and will appear again this coming season. This, I take it, is a sufficient endorsement. Yours very truly,

T. B. PUGH,
Manager of "Star" Course, Phila.

MRS. MARY A. LIVERMORE is a woman of superior intellectual power. She is wise, womanly and eloquent, and in my opinion the most able, natural and effective of all the women speakers now on the American lecture platform.

FINDING FAULT.

Does it pay to find fault? You who are the wise keepers of houses, and the dear keepers of hearts, does it pay? There are heavy burdens to bear all day—manifold cares from the rising to the setting of the sun—blunders made by those who should have known better, many a thing to annoy; but don't make cold and cheerless the home atmosphere by finding fault. There is no blight more deadly in its tendency—nothing that can more surely disturb the harmony of home, nothing that will recoil more quickly upon yourself—than the habit of fault finding. Not that errors should go unrebuked, or mistakes uncorrected; but note such down in your memory, and when the work and care and tumult of the day are all over, then call the little ones and the larger ones around you, and then tell them soberly but kindly of the wrong-doings, and see if you are not amply repaid for your forbearance by the smile and the tear, and the little word of contrition and promise of amendment. You will be a thousand times happier when you lie down to sleep, and a sweet forgetfulness has settled over your little flock, than you would have been had the blue eyes now closed been filled with bitter tears that overflowed at unkind censure, or had the little golden head dropped under the shadow of your constant frown. How fair, and sweet, and satisfying life might be to us all if we could forget to fret, and fault, and complain. Don't save your words for praise and appreciation until it is too late. You love the little children—the dear little children! And if they do speak loud, and leave doors open that should be shut, don't find fault. It won't pay.

THINGS IT WOULD BE FUNNY TO SEE.

A circus just to relieve the monotony.

A poor plumber and a rich newspaper man.

A bald headed man who never lost his temper.

A rose without a thorn and a woman without a fault.

A chromo of the man who invented the dance called "the racket."

A doctor who hadn't believed all along that Tanner would come out all right.

A patent medicine that wasn't warranted a dead shot for anything, from corns to consumption.

A tarpaulin stout enough to keep the rain from soaking through the backs of our milkman's cows.

The man who wasn't always able and willing to give an editor a few pointers in the newspaper business.

A man who can rap eternal smash out of his favorite bunion while making a tight croquet and still keep the air brake on his tongue.

The long unpopular and generally unbecoming color of green is again appearing in the list of new and fashionable shades. This color is not of the order of invisible greens, but is of a bright unmistakable line. Suits of this color have already appeared in Paris and London, but are worn mostly by ultra-fashionable ladies, who care more for novelty and eccentricity than for comeliness in dress. There are a variety of shades to choose from, variously named Impyan green, willow, moss, cooked sorrell grass and serpentine.

POETRY.

WINTER WEATHER.

Cold from the northland blows the wind keenly;
(Cold are the desolate homes of the poor;)
Soon will the snowflakes be falling serenely;
(Think of the pain that the homeless endure.)

Brightly in parlors the diamonds glisten;
(Tons of black diamonds one would buy!)
Beautiful darlings to loving words listen;
(Poverty's children are dying close by.)

Ice stretches out from the shore of the river;
(Any worn blankets, old dresses, or coats?)
Even the warmest must tremble and shiver;
(Every free gift a glad angel notes.)

They who have plenty may rest and be thankful;
(Think of God's children with nothing at all!)
Now should sweet charity's river be bank full;
(Think of the stream that is bitter as gall.)

Winter is with us, in spite of delaying;
(Help that poor woman so scantily clad!)
Now for the glories of skating and sleighing;
(Hunger is driving that girl to the bad.)

Months are before us of hard winter weather;
(See the poor babes in their [illegible] nest!)
Brightly the rich ones are joyful together;
(Charity gives in all pleasures a zest.)

Brightly the sun of prosperity rises;
(See that you make not the hard times too hard;)
Past are the days of the panics and crisis;
(Heaven with charity's jewels is starred.)

Winter shuts down upon city and forest;
(Thousands must suffer with hunger and cold;)
Joy is now highest, and need is now sorest;
(Charity's crown is for heavenly gold.)

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

FIFTEEN MINUTES.

BY MARION HARLAND.

"Hist-st-st!"

I was hurrying through the street bounding the rear of Mrs. Eliot's garden, when the low hiss arrested me. There was a gate in the hemlock hedge. As I turned, a figure opened it and stepped out upon the sidewalk.

"I called you, Helen."

"Mrs. Eliot!" said I, astonished, "I thought you were ill!"

"They tell everybody so, child!" coming closer to me and whispering. "The truth is, they keep me a prisoner because they do not want me to go to Reuben. He is very ill! Your old playfellow, Reuben, Nell! My first-born! Ill—dying among strangers, and because he had offended his father, I am not permitted to be with and nurse him. My boy! my boy!"

She wrung her hands and moaned, the tears streaming down her cheeks.

Horror-stricken, I could only gasp, "How cruel! how very strange!"

"Strange!" in a deep, harsh voice. "Yes, to you who do not know Stephen Eliot! I have been his wife for twenty-three years. Only his kindness surprises me! My dear," with sudden energy, "we waste time! God put it into my head to lie in wait for some merciful Good Samaritan in this lonely place. I must go to New York by the ten o'clock train to-night. I dare not buy a ticket in person, for my husband has his spies about the station. I tried to coax Arthur to get one, and he refused. My children are leagued against me. And their brother is dying—dying! I fancy, continually, I hear his dear voice calling me. They drug me to stupefy me into forgetfulness, but I cannot sleep! Nell, as you would have your own mother at your death-bed, run down that street to the depot and buy me a through-ticket; it will be four dollars. They have locked up my purse, but you shall be repaid. Have you the money?" abruptly, as I hesitated.

I had five dollars in my purse, but it was my mother's—not mine. I was on my way to do an errand for her. I said this as sensibly as I could in my bewilderment. Mrs. Eliot was far calmer and more collected; quick with an expedient.

"Charge what you buy to your father. To-morrow, at nine o'clock, tell your mother, who used to be my friend, the whole story."

"She is your friend now, Mrs Eliot. Let me go for her! She will help you!"

"Why should she come? They would tell their story and lock me up again. I got out through the window while the nurse is at supper. I must be back before the creature misses me. She is my husband's tool. He is to marry her when I am dead. Helen Manson! as surely as the Judge of us all lives and sees us, if you are not back here in five minutes with that ticket, I will throw myself under the first train that passes! My darling, my little Nell!" putting both arms around me, and laying her cheek to mine, "you will not refuse me!"

Her face was clay-cold, and so thin and white! Her hands were like hot coals upon mine. She shook as in an ague-fit. The railroad crossing was in full sight, and while I lingered, an express train rushed up the line, strewing red cinders, shrieking like a mad, living monster. Mrs. Eliot pointed to it, in putting me out of her embrace, looked meaningly into my eyes.

Without stopping to think, I walked, almost ran, down the hill to the station; waited a moment to get my breath, then went in and asked for a through-ticket to New York. The ticket-agent was not in. His deputy, a stupid boy, did not know me. I was congratulating myself upon the ease with which I had discharged my commission, when, as I was coming out of the door, my father and Mr. Eliot passed within arm's length of me. I shrank back into the office just in time to avoid a collision. They were walking slowly, talking earnestly together, with bowed heads and very grave faces, too much engrossed in one another to see me, near as I was. I was still shuddering at the narrowness of the escape when I rejoined Mrs. Eliot. She had retreated into the garden; was watching for me over the hedge. As I showed the ticket, she clasped her hands above her head and looked upward.

"Father of mercies! I am not quite forsaken!"

Such a pale, strained face; such wild eyes, full of hungry eagerness the quivering lips could not syllable, I have never seen elsewhere, except in dreams of the scene. She wore a waterproof cloak, the hood drawn over her head, and I remarked that the twisted arms were bare. Unkempt locks were blown across her face by the March wind. I was actually afraid of her as she seized the bit of pasteboard with one hand, my wrist with the other.

"Remember, girl, your life is not worth this!" throwing it before my eyes, "should you lisp this before nine o'clock to-morrow!"

She turned when she had gone a few yards up the walk, leading to the house, came back to the gate, beckoned me to her and kissed me tenderly.

"You are a good child. I shall tell Reuben you saved his life—and mine. Heaven bless you! Good-night, love."

Her smile and voice were wonderfully sweet. [illegible] and farewell brought tears to my eyes, through which I saw her glide between the bare [illegible] of the [illegible] in the gloom of the [illegible].

It was a dull evening. The [illegible] behind the Eliot's house [illegible] luridly along the horizon. The wind moaned in the tree-tops, sighed blusteringly through the stiff hedge. I stood alone in the quiet back street, bordered by gardens. Had I dreamed what had passed since I entered it, a quarter of an hour ago, a light-hearted child, thinking of nothing more important than to-morrow's lessons, or more tragic than the composition I had begun that day upon the "Heroines of History"? Being unlearned and untried, I had no fear of attacking great subjects at that date. I stood still to think and to find my normal self.

The Eliots were our neighbors and close friends. Pauline, the eldest daughter, was seventeen—a year my senior—but we were class-mates and intimate associates. Reuben was twenty-two, and a law-student in New York. There were two younger children. Two others—twin-sisters—three years old, had died of diphtheria four months ago, and Mrs. Eliot had never been well since.

For six weeks she had not left the house. It was reported that she was confined to her bed with nervous debility, and a cough that gave her husband and physician serious anxiety. Yet I had seen and talked with her! The one-dollar bill I had not had time to restore to my pocket-book was crumpled in my hand. I smoothed it out and folded it away in the else empty valve of the porte-monnaie. It belonged to my mother. I must give an account of that intrusted to my charge.

I am sure that, until then, I had not had a misgiving as to the righteousness of my conduct. I seemed to have had no more power of volition than a buried stone or shot arrow. Now, that the impulsive force was spent, the gravitation of conscience asserted itself. I had purloined my mother's property; been unfaithful in my duty to her. To this I must add the deception of purchasing upon trust—a thing strictly forbidden by my father—the articles she had ordered, or run the risk of premature discovery.

Dishonesty! Falsehood! I rebelled at the suggestion. I had done a merciful, a blessed deed! I recalled the agony of the mother's eyes; the impassioned appeal to my regard for the dying boy, my love for my own mother. What else could I have done?

Conscience stood firm with common-sense for her alloy. "You should have revealed the whole affair to your father. It would have been easy to withdraw him from Mr. Eliot long enough to tell the story. He is as merciful, as tender-hearted, as yourself, and wiser!"

The last word cut to the quick!

"I would die before I would betray a persecuted woman into the hands of her enemies!" I said, aloud.

With the audible soliloquy came the consciousness that I was a heroine! Such an one as I had read, and heard, and written of, but in the life I secretly despised as commonplace and tame, never seen for myself. It was a delicious moment in which I tasted the joys of the confidante of a momentous secret; of great and solemn responsibility; of perilous adventure gallantly attempted—successfully achieved. It was not Helen Manson, the simple-hearted, care-free school-girl, but the woman, strong to do and to endure, who walked, almost as rapidly as she had done to the station, out of the back street into the busier quarter of the country town that was her birthplace and home. My manner, in making my purchases, was high and calm; the voice in which I directed the articles to be charged to my father, easy, as if such a transaction were frequent and common.

The family was assembled at the supper-table when I got home.

"Did you have much trouble in matching the trimming, dear," inquired my mother.

"Less than I expected," I rejoined, carelessly.

My father made no comment upon my tardiness. He was serious and taciturn, eating as if his thoughts were far away. "Worried about business!" I said to myself. He had a searching eye, an authoritative manner, that would have tried my heroism to the utmost had he chosen to catechise me. I trembled anew at the thought, "What if he had seen me at the station?"

Providence, I fancied, conspired to favor my righteous cause. I carried my books up to my room, "for a long evening's study," when the meal was over. But at ten o'clock I was leaning from the open window, the gas-light lowered, that I might see the more plainly the through night-express, as it flashed across the end of our street. The row of lighted panes had never seemed so long before, or gleamed so dazzlingly, as when I tried to fancy, behind which of the yellow squares crouched the fugitive, the cowl drawn over the white face, the figure shaking with the fright-chill that had seized her when she talked of her imprisonment. It was raining, a cold drizzle with which my hair was soaked before I left my look-out. The night was ominously still when the rumble of the loaded cars died away to the westward. A long silence was upon me. In no direction were silence and darkness more intense than in the Eliot house and grounds when I stole from my bed at midnight to take a last survey of the quarter from which danger might come.

I harkened, delightedly, to the roll and rush of the rain upon the roof and in the gutters. It was a musical accompaniment to my dreams of the sequel of my adventure; of Reuben's recovery, his gratitude to me; his reconciliation with his father; the [illegible] the story would gain for me in our quiet town—perhaps elsewhere. It might even get into the papers! A spice of persecution from Mr. Eliot, of harshness from my parents, would intensify it into "Noble Self-Devotion of a young girl!"

The glow of excitement had faded somewhat by morning. My first waking thought was, "The poor mother is safely housed by this time with her son." My second, "I must tell mamma all as soon as papa goes down town." Breakfast was almost over when a queer fancy seized me.

What story had Mr. Eliot palmed off upon my father and other neighbors of his wife's illness? How had he, artful villain as he was, contrived to dupe those who knew and loved her? To tell the truth, my secret was becoming too weighty for me; a sense of personal importance too, sweet to be enjoyed alone much longer. All these motives had part in the birth of the awkward query:

"Mamma, when did you see Mrs. Eliot last?"

"A month ago, my dear. She is very nervous, unfit to see her most intimate friends." My mother sighed in saying it.

"I wonder," pursued I, [illegible]—bravely, I thought then—"if they have told her of Reuben's illness?"

My father looked at me suddenly and keenly, then at my mother, and [illegible]. What did they suspect?

"Who told you that he was ill, Helen?" asked my father, quietly.

He could not have framed a simpler question, nor one harder to answer.

"I met somebody on the street yesterday who mentioned it, sir." I articulated, my tongue becoming dry and thick.

"Who was it?"

One moment of terrible silence followed the three words. I could hear the crackling of the seed in the canary bird's bill as he ate his breakfast; the "tick! tick!" of the cooling urn. Six pairs of eyes, curious, surprised, imperative, bored into my guilty soul; then my mouth opened for itself, and a voice that was not mine uttered a lie,—

"I don't recollect."

"Do not recollect!" repeated my father, sternly.

The door opened as I was sliding into a freezing crevasse.

"Mr. Eliot wishes to see you, sir," said a servant.

"Recollect" by the time I come back, Helen," commanded my father, in leaving.

The squeaking and ticking were drowned by the slow thuds of my heart.

"How it rains!" remarked my sister Millie, kindly malapropos.

"Freezes as it falls," seconded Richard, eagerly. "I say, mother, have you seen the sign on the door of the new Methodist Church—'Slips and Sittings to be had?' A fellow can have both gratis on his way to school to-day."

They all laughed feebly. The tempest shook and wiped the north windows. The door opened again.

"Helen!" it was my father who called and beckoned me into the next room.

Mr. Eliot was walking up and down the floor, pale as a ghost, troubled as the March weather. My father did not offer me a seat, nor take one himself.

"Who told you yesterday that Reuben Eliot was sick?"

I was silent.

"Speak!" he ordered.

I would not.

Mr. Eliot took my hand. In the depth of his distress he could pity mine.

"The poor child is frightened, Manson. We will tell her why she is questioned. Helen, I am going to confide to you a fearful secret. My wife is deranged! She has not been sane for two—almost three months. Nobody knew it for a long while excepting the doctor, nurse, myself, and very lately, our daughter Pauline. Yesterday I told your father all, and consulted him about placing her in a private asylum. She has grown so restless of late that we feared what has happened. Within a week her fancy has been that our son is ill and in need of her. He is well, for I heard from him yesterday. She persisted in asserting that his letters are forged by me, poor darling!"

He stopped to recover hold of his voice, and hurried on. "Last evening she seemed calmer and more cheerful than for a month past; complained of drowsiness at nine o'clock, and asked the nurse to make her bed and arrange her for the night. I went in as usual to say 'Good-night' at half-past nine. She was apparently sleeping sweetly. I locked the door after me. The nurse slept in the dressing-room, with the door communication open. This morning it was still ajar, but my wife was gone!

"She has escaped by a window which opens upon the roof of the conservatory. She has not been dressed in three weeks, having kept her bed all the while. Her clothes were in another chamber. But she had taken the nurse's large waterproof cloak and her own wadded bedside slippers. These and her night-dress were all her protection against the storm"—shuddering, as he glanced at the window. "No one knew of her hallucination with regard to Reuben excepting ourselves, unless she contrived to communicate, secretly with some unknown person who may have aided in her flight. Helen, can you give us any light in this awful darkness?"

I caught at a spider-web in my agony.

"She is with Reuben! She is safe!" I said, in a smothered voice. I was choking with [illegible].

"No my child. I telegraphed to him and had an answer by eight o'clock. He had not seen or heard of her."

The self-contained heroine had dropped upon the carpet at "the villain's" feet, weeping aloud while she tried to tell what she knew and what she had done. I was conscious of, and grateful for, the gentleness with which the stricken husband raised me and thanked me for the confession that "gave him a hopeful clue." I remember it now with exceeding astonishment, and that in all that followed he never spoke a word of blame, even interceding with my father for my pardon.

By the time he reached the city, Reuben, alarmed by the first dispatch, put upon the right track by the second, had traced the wanderer to a police-station, three miles from the ferry where the mother had left the train. She had no money for omnibus or carriage hire, and unfamiliar with that part of the town, had wandered on and on until, drenched and exhausted, she lay down upon a door-step, such a draggled, distraught object Reuben hardly knew her when he found her, unconscious and speechless, in a corner of the station-house.

They brought her home—in her coffin—in one week from the evening of my interview with her. Exposure and mind-fever had wrought irresistibly upon the worn body. She might have regained her reason under favorable conditions, said the physicians. Many whose mental maladies were more serious, and of longer standing, had been returned cured from the "Retreat" in which her husband would have placed her.

I had undone everything; destroyed possibilities and hopes and the home-happiness of my best friends in this little quarter-of-an-hour beside the hemlock-hedge.—Youth's Companion.

A WOMAN WITH A WILL.

A woman with a will can make her way in the American world. In Ulster county, New York, there is a woman of real grit who inherited fourteen years ago a large estate, consisting principally of farming property, heavily encumbered with debt. It was the old homestead, and she could not bear the idea of seeing it pass into the hands of strangers, and was determined that it should not. Although then only twenty-four years old, and with no more practical knowledge of life than an ordinary country lass, she assumed sole charge of the estate, determined to clear it of debt. Having an old mother sixty-two years of age, a half sister, also helpless from old age, the two orphan children of a deceased brother, and a brother in the last stages of consumption to provide for, this made her task doubly hard. A little experience taught her that it was impossible to support the large family and keep up the interest arising from the heavy indebtedness of the estate from the resources of the farm. She decided upon school teaching. She was engaged to teach in her own neighborhood at $9 per month, and her salary in a short time was raised to $40 per month. She has continued school teaching ever since, directing the work of her farm, and during the summer vacations going into the harvest field with the farm hands to pitch on hay, rake, bind, etc. She has earned from teaching school over $3,500, paid off the debts of the old homestead, and greatly improved the property. She has been an extensive stock raiser. Her wheat crop averaged this year forty-two bushels to the acre, the largest yield in the county. A short time ago she learned that a brother-in-law living in Pennsylvania was in destitute circumstances. She went to him and found him helpless from an incurable disease, with a family depending upon him. "Ben," she said, "what can I do for you?" "Nothing, [illegible]," was the reply. "You have your hands full already. We will have to go to the county house, I suppose." "Never, Ben, as long as I live. Come and enjoy the comforts of the old homestead with me. I will keep you and your family as long as you live." She says she has enough to do now without having to support a husband too, which she might have to do if she were to marry.

QUEER.

There is something very suspicious about the Presidential vote in the City of New York.

In 1876, when a full vote was cast, the figures stood

Democratic 112,530
Republican 58,561—Total 171,091.

In 1880 they stand

Democratic 123,102
Republican 81,730—Total 204,832.

Democratic increase 10,572 or nine per cent.

Republican increase 23,165 or forty per cent.

The result, to say the least, is very suspicious.

THE EMPIRE.

"Will not the prophet of evil give us a rest on Grant and the Empire?"—exclaims a Republican editor.

No sir!

Because there is a wicked and living design to overthrow the Republic and enslave the people.

"Prophets of evil" are public sentinels.

The election of Garfield means Grant for a third-term and that omens the Empire.

Sure as sun-rise, Mr. Editor?

It is dangerous to idly rest when fetters are being forged.

A true prophet will sound the warning cry and every friend of freedom should heed it.

We are enlisted for a deadly war against Imperialism.

GUSH.

One of the Republican organs in New Jersey, in its florid exultation over the election of Garfield, gushed forth after the following fashion:

"But with its grand leader, the statesman, the scholar, the Christian, a man evidently born of God for this supreme hour in our National history,—with such a leader as James A. Garfield, we believe the party with its new lease of power will conduct the affairs of the country in that righteousness which exalteth a Nation."

That will do.

"James A. Garfield a man evidently born of God for this supreme hour."

It is time to close the services.

Let a collection of $329 be taken up for Colonization purposes.

NOW AS THEN.

Republican journalists commenting on the recent Presidential campaign, charge the Democratic party with waging a warfare of personal slander against Mr. Garfield. The assertion has no foundation in fact.

Democrats never slandered James A. Garfield, never invaded the sanctity of his private life, never misrepresented him as a citizen.

They severely condemned, as it was their right and duty to do, his wrong public actions, every cause for which is of record and stamped by Republican authority.

The Republican leaders could not during the canvass, and they cannot now prove the official delinquencies preferred against their Presidential candidate false.

It is sheer hypocrisy for them to talk about slander. In 1876, when Mr. Tilden was the Democratic candidate, the flood-gates of personal calumny were opened upon him regardless of common decency, and the same poison dipped arrows would have been hurled at General Hancock had there existed the slightest vulnerability.

On the strength of his clearly attested misdeeds as a Congressman, we pronounced Mr. Garfield unworthy to occupy the Presidential chair, and now he is formally elected, we honestly reiterate that opinion.

We praised General Hancock because of his unsullied reputation, and although defeated, we honor and admire him still.

We respect the office of President, be it filled by whom it may, but spurn the doctrine that an election to it can purge an incumbent's past record, or make clean the foul pathway through which he gained success.

New Jersey and Democracy Forever!

A thousand cheers for New Jersey.

New Jersey has a glorious fame. She clings to the Constitution and Democracy.

In view of all circumstances our friend Stover ran well. He may feel proud of the vote given him.

How many votes did the Prohibition candidate for President receive in Plainfield. Do Temperance principles consist in advocating Dow and voting Garfield?

* * *

A branch of Jewell and Dorsey's political Banking House was opened in Newark. It failed to pay a dividend. New Jersey went for Hancock and Ludlow.

That pure and noble Republican patriot, General Kilpatrick, expected to be elected to Congress. He lacked only 4391 votes. Why not make him United States Senator?

Post Office officials at Leadville, Col., have been arrested for stealing Government-funds to the amount of $6,000. We thought Republican defalcations were things unknown.

* * *

The splendid vote given Mr. Ludlow, the Democratic candidate for Governor, in his own City and County, was a real tribute to personal worth and ability. Money cannot purchase honor of that kind.

* * *

The election of George C. Ludlow Governor of New Jersey, in spite of the immense amount of money spent and mass of mis-representations circulated to defeat him, is a bright streak in the black political sky.

A number of strange colored gentlemen were in Plainfield last week. They smoked fine cigars and appeared to be flush. Were they delegates to the Garfield Colonization Society that assembled on election day?

A colored messenger of the Treasury Department in Washington has been arrested on requisition from North Carolina for forgery. He has served the party well, having conveyed 3,000 Garfield voters into Indiana under cover of the Southern Exodus. He is eligible for a high appointment.

Grant and Conkling called upon Garfield at his Ohio home and made a treaty. Its purport is surmised. Soon Conkling began to speak and Grant trotted after him for public exhibition. Applicants for office will do well to address Hon. Roscoe Conkling. They must all swear 1884 allegiance to Grant.

To make Seasons appear lovely and set stocks a booming for partisan effect, Secretary Sherman strained ability in order to purchase Government Bonds previous to the election, but after it was over, he suddenly paused. There is an old coon in the financial wood pile and he will be pulled out some day.

Rev. J. Hyatt Smith, of the Lee Avenue Baptist Church, Brooklyn, has been elected to Congress over the regular Republican candidate Hon. S. B. Chittenden. Mr. Chittenden is a firm believer in Republican methods, having a plethoric pocket-book. We are glad it failed of effect, and that, under the circumstances, the political parson has become an M. C.

"Julius, am de war ober?"

"What makes you ax me sich a silly question as dat, dar ain't no war now, Jim."

"Yes thar am, Julius, bekase I heerd dat white gemmen preach so in our Wigwarm, and furder, I seed a colored rigement in Plainfield lection day."

"Dey were visiting statesmen, not sojers, you blockhead."

* * *

A firm of provision speculators in New York and Chicago are said to have made several million dollars by monopolizing the pork market and putting up prices to suit themselves. They are also reported as heavy contributors to the Republican election fund. That is a sample of the Garfield-Sherman protection you are to receive, Workingmen! Truth is mighty and will yet prevail.

The duty on malt is 20 per cent, which affords fair protection and produces considerable revenue to the Government. The Malsters are seeking to make the duty much higher, so they can pocket excessive profits and, as a consequence, raise the price of beer. German citizens who were foolishly induced to vote for Garfield are beginning to ask—"Ish dot vat you calls Republican protection?"

* * *

After the most terrific exertions, political history records; the building of a mighty Wigwam and filling it with burning eloquence, both clerical and lay; the unlimited use of money; the singing of songs, beating of drums, and firing of rockets and guns; the formation of clubs, black, white and speckled; the marching and counter-marching of grand torch-light processions, gotten up and imported regardless of expense; colonizing, intimidating and beseeching, the Republican party secured about its customary majority in Plainfield. Honor to you true-hearted Democrats! Pick your flints and at them again!

Ludlow's majority [illegible]

*Certified by Cape May County Board of Canvassers.

In Lower township, Cape May county, the Clerk in filling up the return blank placed Ludlow's vote opposite the name of Carter, Dem., for Congress, allowing no vote for Ludlow for Governor, for whom there were 138 votes cast. The County Board of Canvassers refused to alter the returns and this made Potts' majority 454, when it actually was but 316. The State Board of Canvassers will make the correction and, if there is no change made in the figures given as to Warren county, the majority for George C. Ludlow will be just 651.

New Jersey Supreme Court—Patrick Sheridan, County Collector, &c., Pros. vs. Lewis E. Clark, City Collector, &c., and Jeremiah VanWinkle, City Treasurer, &c. Mandamus. The questions raised in the proceeding are whether the City Collector is bound to pay the State and County taxes out of the first moneys which come into his hands, when those monies are raised for city purposes under the charter; and whether he is liable for interest after the taxes are due. This case has been argued at the present-term before Justices Dixon, Reed and Parker, and decision reserved.

All of which is respectfully submitted,

Mr. Whiton, from Finance Com., had no written report of the city's finances, but reported verbally that $3,399.42 remained to the credit of the General Fund, and $802.92 to the credit of the Poor Fund. He also stated that there would be an excess of $1,000 over the sum authorized to be expended for running the city, and would like an expression of the Council whether the Finance Com. should put this $1,000 to help pay note standing of $3,500, or use the amount to pay off claims against the city.

Mr. Whiton also presented a res. that the Mayor and City Treasurer be authorized to renew the note of $2,500 for one month, coming due this month. Adopted. All aye.

An expression was had of members of Council in reference to the $1,000 excess, and were of the opinion that claims against the city should be paid as long as funds were available.

Mr. Whiton stated further that it was an impossibility to run the city on the present amount—$10,000, and would recommend that an election for an increase of $5,000, be held on the same day of the city election—Dec. 7th. Further consideration of this matter was laid over until Miscellaneous Business.

Mr. Finch, from Police Com., reported as correct the police claims presented this evening. Ref'd to Aud. Com.

By the same—A report as to existing nuisances in and about the city. On motion, referred to Board of Health.

Mr. Dunlap, from Aud. Com., reported as correct the following claims: Police bills presented this evening; Geo. M. Angleman, $50; A. T. Shotwell, $17.68; E. A. Vermeule, $6.75; Morgan Bird, $91.50; Plainfield Gaslight Co., $1,309.89, General Fund. Wm. B. Ayres, $36; D. Leeson, $23; Alex. M. Runyon, $33, Poor Fund. On motion, report received and warrants ordered drawn for the several amounts, with the exception of claim of Morgan Bird, which was referred back to Police Com. All aye.

Mr. Darling offered an amendment to amend the Lamp Ord., making it to read "more than 500 feet apart" in the erection of lamp-posts, instead of reading as at present—"not less than 500 feet apart," etc. Read first time. On motion, read 2d time and ref'd to Law & Ord. Com. All aye.

Resolved, That the Committee on Salaries, Offices and Elections be and they are hereby authorized and directed to make all necessary and proper arrangements for such election.

Adopted. All aye.

On motion, Council adjourned.

"THE SATTERLEE"
"U. S. A. GENERAL HOSPITAL,"
West Philadelphia, where DR. DAVID KENNEDY was one of the Surgeons on Duty.
Dr. David Kennedy, for the past ten years an active practitioner of Medicine and Surgery in Rondout, N. Y., was one of the resident Surgeons of the above-named Hospital during the war. No doubt many of his former soldier-patients are still living and will be glad to recognize the name of the friend and Surgeon of those early years in the proprietor of a medicine with which it has become associated. Dr. Kennedy performed hundreds of the most dangerous and difficult operations, and it's a simple fact that not one died, but all made splendid recoveries.
Dr. Kennedy is frank to confess now that his wonderful success was due to the fact that he gave his patients the medicine he now calls Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" in the after treatment. It was this that restored the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels to a healthy condition, affording tone and strength to the whole system, and thus enabled the soldier to once more enjoy life and meet the loved ones at home. Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" for sale by all druggists. $1.00 a bottle.

LOCAL DEPARTMENT.

Largest Circulation of any Weekly Paper in Union County.

LET us have peace.

SETTLE your little bets.

THANKSGIVING will soon be here.

LESS than four weeks before a winter month.

WE learn that among the numerous candidates for the Republican nomination of Mayor, is that of our worthy friend, Wm. H. Brower. Next!

THE Common Council order a money election to raise $5,000 additional tax. The people want to know all about it. Taxes are already heavy.

A VERY handsome profit amounting to $125, was gained for the Muhlenberg Building Fund, by the late amateur dramatic entertainment in VanDeventer Hall.

IT should be remembered that the sale of tickets for the Y. M. C. A. Course of 1880 and '81, commences at Reynold's drug store on Monday next, the 15th inst., at 7 a. m.

NOW is your chance to learn German, French and Drawing. Instruction in these branches by experienced teachers, is advertised in another column, at $5. a quarter.

JERSEY County, Illinois, follows the example of its namesake by giving a majority of 800 for Hancock and English, besides electing the entire county Democratic ticket.

THE Rev. Mr. Mayer, of Vineland, N. J., will occupy the pulpit of the Trinity Reformed church, next Sunday morning and evening. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

MR. Theo. Allen, of Peapack, son-in-law of the late John Layton, of Plainfield has been elected a Director of the First National Bank of Somerville, in place of John R. Emery, deceased.

BEFORE Councilmen blow themselves dry about the alleged non-enforcement of Ordinances, they had better investigate some that will not stand enforcing. Let them consult the Corporation Counsel and City Judge.

AND now that the election is over, we trust that all will settle down to work, and any coldness that might have arisen from political difference, may be looked over in our daily, social and business relations.

IT was the boast of some that Hon. Miles Ross would be badly beaten in this district, but a majority of nearly 3,000 don't look much like a defeat. The Robbins can now take a southern flight, as the season proved too late for their nerves.

IF Councilmen, in their own opinion, can do everything, including the suspending of gravitation, why do they not compel the City Judge to make monthly reports. That official treats the City Fathers with studious neglect and claims to have cause therefor.

MIDDLESEX county is the banner Democratic county of the year. It gives Hancock a majority of over 1100; Ludlow 1185; Ross 1016—and elects all three Democratic Assemblymen. Vancleef in 1st district gets 658 majority, Freeman in the 2d, 223, and Martin in the 3d, 413.

WE are glad to welcome to our editorial sanctum so neatly printed a sheet, and a journal so conservative in its tone, as the Metuchen Inquirer starts out with being. No. 2 is fully up to the standard adopted at the start, and its readers are promised more of the same in an enlargement.

THE ceremonies that united in marriage Mr. Isaac Harris and Miss Grace Randolph, were performed at the residence of the bride's father on Wednesday last, by the Rev. A. H. Lewis. A large number of friends were present, and wished for the happy pair a long life of continuous blessedness.

A PETITION is being circulated about Elizabeth, and is receiving signatures rapidly, asking for the pardon of Messrs. Leggett and Leeds, the delinquent ex-officials now in State Prison. The former is an aged man, and his imprisonment has told severely on his health. The Court of Pardons meets in a few days.

THE Daily Fredonian of New Brunswick is offered for sale on reasonable terms, and any one who wishes to experience the "ups and downs" (particularly the downs) of a country editor's life, could have no better opportunity. The paper is one of the oldest in the State, and its reputation for ability is firmly established.

VERNON writes from his surveying grounds that birds of many species still remain in that latitude and that the osprey and fish-hawks are yet fishing among many of the lakes, which is unusual at this season of the year. He therefore predicts that November will yet give us summer warmth, but with leafless trees.

SOME members of the Common Council evidently think they can make political capital for themselves by coarsely abusing the Mayor. If those aspiring local statesmen would take the trouble of consulting their Republican constituents, a wide diversity of sentiment might be discovered regarding the conduct of Municipal affairs.

THE sufferings of the live stock and the losses endured by the farmers and people of the manufacturing towns of New Jersey, because of the long drouth, ended with three days of rain. Streams and wells which have been dry for a month past are now replenished and factories which have been stopped for weeks are again in motion.

BUSINESS men should not be afraid to spend a few dollars in advertising their fall stock. You can not expect to do a large business by simply buying a good stock and sitting down behind the counters and waiting for customers to come along. Advertise! Show up through the columns of your home paper what you have in store. The small investment necessary to do this will pay you every time.

IT is an easy matter for Councilmen to throw mud at the Mayor, especially when there is no one present to defend him, but a hard and costly job will be on their hands when "mill ponds" are unlawfully suppressed and dams hastily knocked down. Water privileges possess value under the statutes of New Jersey. Better move cautiously, gentlemen, or you may have to ask the Taxpayers for more than one extra $5,000 to pay adjudicated damages.

THE Elizabeth Daily Herald suspended publication on Saturday last. Messrs. Drake, Cook and Hall, who from the first have been so successful in their endeavor to publish a paper calculated to supply the demands of the reading public, have our sincere sympathy upon their failing to receive the financial support they justly deserved. The citizens of that forsaken city of Elizabeth should join with us in hoping the Herald will not pass into hands less capable of managing it than its late proprietors.

THE severe gale of Saturday night last, succeeded in accomplishing what the political organizations of this city should have done for themselves some days ago. Election being over and the contest decided, the banners of Hancock, English, Potts, Robbins and other defeated candidates might have been drawn in last week undamaged, and packed in camphor to await the next campaign. Instead, they were left to the mercy of an unmerciful wind, and suffered accordingly. The one on North Avenue was taken in down, but those on Front street failed to pass to the same care.

WE are under obligation to the Central Times for journalistic favors.

WE present our readers in this issue with the official canvass of Union County, which they will find exceedingly valuable for purposes of reference.

IT is reported that an effort will be made by politicians in the lower part of the State at the next session of the Legislature to secure the passage of a law similar to that in New York to close the polls at sundown.

WE publish in this issue the advertisement of Killgore the druggist, presenting to the purchasing public great inducements in the way of low prices and first class goods. This merchant was the first to reduce the universal rates on patent medicines and toilet luxuries, and intends to follow the same plan in relation to other articles.

MR. Craig A. Marsh was appointed by the court to defend the colored man Shafer (alias "Hot") during his trial for shooting and wounding Michael O'Keefe—both of this city—which affray occurred in September of last year. The testimony was all taken during the early part of the week, and the case adjourned until to-day (Friday), when the opposing counsels will sum up and the Judge charge the jury.

A NEW enterprise has been introduced into our city by Messrs. Alex. Titsworth and Jeremiah Van Winkle, which cannot fail of being successful. These gentlemen are the appointed agents of the celebrated Philadelphia Clothiers, Wanamaker & Brown and Jacob Reed's Sons. At their office No. 41 West Front street, you can select a suit or overcoat from hundreds of samples of every style and grade of cloth, leave your measure, and in from five to ten days, receive perfect fitting garments.

Meeting for Young Men.

A meeting for Young Men will be held in the Y. M. C. A. Hall, Saturday evening, Nov. 13, at 7.45 p. m. All are earnestly requested to attend.

St. Mary's Services.

On the evenings of the four Sundays preceding Christmas, sermons will be preached in this church by pastors from other parishes. These discourses, it is promised, will be unusually interesting and instructive.

Postponed.

Miss Anna Bock's first piano recital at Steinway Hall, N. Y., announced in our last issue, for Thursday, Nov. 11th, has been unavoidably postponed until Saturday afternoon, Nov. 13th, at 2:30 o'clock. All tickets previously issued will be good for this occasion.

The C. R. R.

Judge Lathrop, the Receiver of the New Jersey Central Railroad Company, says that the earnings of this road for September were the largest of any similar month in the history of the road. The property, he thinks, will come out of the hands of the Receiver early in 1881, and in fact there is nothing to prevent it being done immediately. Mr. Lathrop and his immediate friends are said to hold over half of the capital stock, and he is credited with saying that it will sell at par early in the coming winter.

What a Difference!

When a Republican is nominated for office no Democratic newspaper or speaker must say anything about him, or allude to any incident detrimental, at all, as it would hurt his feelings, and he would order his paper stopped, or become so dignified that he could not speak to the person he conceives to be his offender. But when a Democrat is nominated, there is nothing that can be said or written, whether truthful or not, that is harsh enough in the estimation of this same class of Republicans. What a difference!—Rahway Democrat.

P. A. C.

Owing to the "inclemency of the weather," the first reception given to the public by the Gentlemen's Class of the P. A. C. Gymnasium on Saturday evening last, was not so largely attended as was justly expected. This class has gathered up the ends of its course of last year and continued in extent and proficiency the many exercises with such success as to promise remarkable accomplishment and perfection during the coming season. On Saturday evening of this week the public will again be given an opportunity to witness the class at work, all being cordially invited to attend.

Tier—Sturtevant.

On the evening of last Wednesday, at the residence of the bride's parents, was united in marriage by the Rev. Thomas H. Stockton of the M. E. Church, Miss Ida Sturtevant to Mr. John H. Tier Jr. A large number of invited friends were present, and the occasion was a most auspiciously happy one. Handsome presents from many sources and sincere congratulations and kind wishes were showered upon the pair. After an evening of social enjoyment with the guests assembled, the bride and groom left for an extended trip to Philadelphia and Washington.

The Y. M. C. A. Course.

The sale of tickets, beginning on Monday morning at Mr. H. P. Reynold's drug store in the Chautauqua Building, inaugurates the Y. M. C. A. Course of entertainments for the season of '80 and '81. The managers have been especially praiseworthy in their selection of the coming series, and will open auspiciously on the evening of Thanksgiving day with the Mendelssohn Quintette Club in one of their unequalled instrumental concerts. Following this will be brought forward an assortment of talent in all lines and forms of entertainment—closing on March 15th with the always popular and universally enjoyed John B. Gough. The rates of admission and price of course tickets, will be as usual.

Relief Associations' Anniversary.

On the evening of the 18th of Nov. the Relief Association will hold its anniversary meeting in the Methodist church. The speaker for the evening will be Chas. L. Brace, who has been connected for twenty years with the Children's Aid Society in New York. It is hoped that the reputation of Mr Brace and the interest felt in the Association will ensure a large audience. It is earnestly desired that all who are working in any department of this Society, as visitors or otherwise, will avail themselves of this opportunity to gain practical suggestions from one who has had so large experience in charitable work. Additional interest will be given the evening's programme by music from members of the Plainfield Vocal Society.

Incidentally Inconvenient.

The Plainfield Gas Light Co., does not seem to recognize the fact that in turning off the mains and then letting the gas into them again, without notice or warning, they jeopardize the lives of many and inconvenience more. Some weeks ago, a lady who was tending a sick daughter through the night, woke up from a doze in her chair to find herself suffocating. Had she been sleeping less lightly, death would have resulted. During the night the gas had been turned off and then on again. There being a light burning in the room this nurse and her patient were occupying, the deadly fumes of gas soon filled the apartment after it was once more turned into the pipes. On Tuesday evening last it was found impossible to light up at dark, because the gas failed to flow. Many merchants were thus compelled to suspend business until it suited the convenience of the P. G. L. Co., to furnish a supply

County Courts.

The sentence of Michael Sweeney, Jr., convicted of assault and battery will be rendered next Saturday.

Adam Fritz, convicted of assault and battery, was sentenced to pay a fine of $50 and costs of prosecution.

An Evening's Enjoyment.

On Wednesday evening last, Miss Avis Mosher of Peace-street was most pleasantly surprised by a number of her large circle of friends. For some days past, without the knowledge of the lady, arrangements had been perfected by Messrs. Joseph Merwin and David King, which resulted in an evening of intense social enjoyment. Prof. Frasse had charge of the music, and led the happy couples through a well selected series of dancing. It was nearing daylight before the pleasures of the occasion were exhausted, and the young ladies and their escorts bid each other good-night.

Obituary—Mary Augusta Everitt.

After a lingering illness, wasting in its effect upon the mortal form, all that remained of one who had been a cherished daughter and beloved sister, passed away on the evening of Monday last. The unremitting attention of able physicians and the untiring and affectionate nursing of those bound by ties of blood, were unavailing, and the dread consequences of a cruel consumption closed in its early stages a young life that seemed formed to brighten the world it occupied. The saddening blow falls none the less severe upon family and friends because its coming was realized, and although the enduring of tender ties was felt to be inconvertible, yet is left a house wrapped in the deep gloom of mourning, parents almost heart-broken with grief, brothers and sisters bowed in sorrow, and he to whom the lost one was to have been a cherished wife, finds no comfort or ray of light in what seems a future of melancholy darkness.

The deceased, during a residence of ten years in this city, had drawn around her by a never changing sweetness of disposition, a host of congenial friends whom ties of sympathetic feeling and christian-like sincerity united together in unchanging friendship and mutual adoration. In social and private life her presence claimed and received by reason of her worthiness, the respect and love of all. Amiable, intelligent and fervent, her death saddens all as in her life she won, charmed and loved those who numbered themselves among her friends and acquaintances. A happier lot and larger light surrounds her above, where, sheltered and safe from sorrow, her immortal soul awaits, with the sister and brother that have gone before, the coming of those to follow.

The funeral services were held at her late residence on East Front street, Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, from whence the body was removed, on Thursday morning, for interment in Greenwood cemetery.

Unusual Use of the Unicycle.

The wheelbarrow propelling of the loser by the winner of an election bet, to a greater or lesser distance, has become quite the correct and accepted way of late wherewith to discharge such obligations as are considered incurred by the defeat or victory of one candidate or another.—This mode of backing an opinion is quite popular, and justly so, as both winner and loser may receive their reward—the former in the satisfaction he experiences from being right in his judgment and obtaining a free ride, while the latter is not bound by any law or promise to keep the vehicle right side up when crossing pools of mud.

On Friday evening of last week, the first of these penalties arising out of the late presidential campaign was assumed by Mr. Chas. De Graw. That gentleman having unfortunately bet on the wrong man, was called upon to fulfill the agreement he had made and wheel, in consequence, Mr. Joseph Miller, of Laing's Hotel, from that point along Front to Somerset Street and back again. A well-known dry goods merchant had promised to furnish a band for the occasion but failed to do so. What remained of a political drum corps was engaged, however, which discoursed sweet music and sent its bill for such service to the merchant mentioned. Along the line of march the procession was accorded an enthusiastic reception from the crowd its presence attracted.

On Saturday afternoon at 3:20, it was rumored that a North Plainfield man intended to favor Mr. J. Q. Miles with a similar treat. The Democrat, who was to be the propelling power, claimed that the election of Garfield was not yet decided, and at last accounts he still held the same opinion. Consequently Mr. Miles was obliged to walk—which he did do—over the entire route, employing a colored brother to wheel the unicycle behind him. It is our private opinion (which we wouldn't express in public) that the Democrat who so meanly backed down, should be ashamed of himself.

On Monday, Mr. Vincent Frasse satisfied all claims against himself by pushing a unicycle containing Mr. Newton J. Randolph over the course decided upon. The same delegation of urchins and friends accompanied the pair, while the drummer was ordered to march behind. The many lady friends of the wheeler cast admiring glances upon him during the trip, and only the lateness of the season prevented their presenting him with a wreath of flowers at the conclusion of his task. The whole affair was so successful and entertaining that there is some talk of presenting the participants with a petition signed by prominent residents requesting them to repeat it.

Effective Educational Engraftment.

It was our good fortune recently to be permitted a personal inspection of the mode of tuition followed in the Public Schools of this city and to be able to realize thereby the great effects successfully achieved. Although hardly fair to judge of the ability of the classes so early in the term, the test was all the more thorough and complete for that reason, as it comparatively showed not what they had been daily drilled in, but what was remembered of past instruction. The studies apportioned the different grades are chosen with admirable judgment of the capacity of the mind during the early periods of its formation. From the lowest to the highest classes, only such tuition is brought to bear upon the scholars collectively as they are able to comprehend and absorb; nor is it lightly passed over without interpretation, description and frequent review. Familiar objects are used, wherewith the study is illustrated in a manner that explicitly defines its object and impresses upon the comprehension its relation to the intellectual future of the student.

Such an application was being made by Mrs. Halleck, when her room was visited by our representative. The class was in the midst of a lesson on physiology, which science was being cleared of its natural obscurity by the praiseworthy way in which the teacher was imparting its laws and functions. The entire inner constructive organs had been taken from a kitten, by Mrs. Halleck, and preserved in such a manner as to form a wonderfully fine specimen of the breathing and digestive auxiliaries necessary to promote and continue life and health. Possessing, as they did, a similarity to the same organs of the human being, the teacher was thus enabled to present many facts regarding their action in a manner that could not fail of bringing the information it was desired to impart within the perception of each scholar's intellect and understanding. In like manner, throughout the entire departments under Prof. Gross' care and direction, were to be observed the same well-judged methods of tuition.

Miss Wood's class of younger ones was found to be remarkably perfect in its multiplication tables—not only upon an oral examination, but an inspection of the scholars' ability to write the tables correctly on their slates, showed how happily had been combined with an early study of arithmetic, the relation of the figures to each other and their respective position and formation.

A class of little ones, under the instruction of Miss Willett, was engaged in writing. The thorough training it had already experienced being plainly observable upon a survey of its work. The principles of Spencerian penmanship seemed to be thoroughly instilled into the mind of the pupil, and was displayed to good effect in the shape, proportion and slope of the letters. Every individual scholar, almost without exception, was found to be in a fair way of achieving a perfection in writing that cannot fail of being a source of pride to its possessor. In Miss [illegible]'s class, the same study proved, upon examination, to be as fully followed in all the elements of its beginning.

And so we might continue through every grade in favorably criticising the results of the methods, modes and systems of tuition that are so admirably carried out by the corps of teachers engaged in our public schools. To Prof. Gross and his subordinates is due the praise entire that must be accorded the high standing of our city's educational institutions and the facilities they offer. Time and space, at present, allow us to record merely the above testimony, which expresses very unsatisfactorily to us our valueless approbation.

The Round Brook mill dam, which is charged with originating the malarial fevers with which that place was afflicted last summer, has been declared by the Grand Jury to be a nuisance, and ordered to be abated forthwith.

Personalia.

The long continued ill health of Mr. George Miller, proprietor of Laing's Hotel, is assuming a serious condition. The gentleman is at present confined to his bed, but a host of his friends still hope to see him about again in the enjoyment of the fine health and good spirits he deserves.

Gen'l Wm. H. Sterling accompanied Gov. Geo. B. McClellan upon a visit to Gen Hancock on Wednesday last. They found their comrade of the late war engaged at his duties as though an election had never taken place or his name connected with the candidacy for President. Personal reminiscences of the rebellion were exchanged, and the few words spoken in reference to the political contest, seemed only to show how much more disappointed were the visitors at the result than their host.

Mayor Harper.

The un-called for and un-dignified remarks of a Councilman last Monday evening, in open session of Council, against Mayor Harper, followed by those from other sources, has been the subject of much comment among our intelligent citizens since their occurrence, and have not reflected credit or renown upon the authors of the same. The organ of the Republicans, the Times, deprecates such proceedings, and justly remarks that Mayor Harper has done as well as any other Mayor, which is true, and truer still, he has done better than some predecessors. Probably because he is a Democrat, and some interested parties of the Republican faith are desirous of stepping into his shoes, is the reason of the late outburst of feeling (?) Mayor Harper's record as the Chief Executive Officer of the city of Plainfield, will bear the closest scrutiny during his administration. If the Common Council would enact fewer iron-clad laws for the city's government, the better chance will there be for their provisions being carried out by the proper officials. The Mayor is not omnipotent in municipal affairs.

Alexander Dunham—Deceased.

The death of Mr. Alexander Dunham on Thursday of last week, was an unexpected fatality that closed the life of one of the city's oldest residents and business men. Born here in 1811, he had just entered upon the last year of his three score and ten when called away. His boy-hood days were spent at school in Trenton, after leaving which he learnt and followed the hatter's trade until 1828. Three years subsequently he entered into partnership with Mr. Alfred Berry, and for 10 years the firm of Berry & Dunham carried on a successful business as dry-goods and grocery merchants. The next venture he followed was as junior partner in the clothing firm of Titsworth, Dunn & Co., which he only resigned to establish a grocery business of his own. In his employ at that time was Mr. Wm. H. Shotwell who is now engaged in the same line of trade in North Plainfield, and with whom Mr. Dunham was connected as book keeper up to the day he died. The deceased of late has preferred to serve in the position of clerk, and thus rid himself of the cares and vexations of business. His relations with Mr. Shotwell have covered a period of twenty-three years, during which time—as the deceased remarked one day recently—not a word of dissension had arisen between the two. His entire social life was of the same uninterrupted course; meeting all with a bright smile, kind word and hearty grasp of the hand.

The funeral services were conducted by the Rev. A. H. Lewis, at the Seventh Day Baptist Church, on Sunday afternoon.

FIRE MATTERS.

The new suction for Gazelle Engine Co. No. 1., has, at last, arrived.

Warren Hose Co. will unite with a number of invited friends in a parade and target shoot on Thanksgiving day. It is expected that about 30 members of the company will take part, and 75 others have been invited to join with them.

The officers of Gazelle Eng. Co., No. 1 are in receipt of an invitation to participate with the members of No. 1 Eng. Co. of Somerville, on the occasion of the Annual parade of the Somerville Fire Department, Nov. 25th.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Fire Commissioners has been postponed until next Wednesday evening the 17th. It being desirous that the Board should know just how it stands financially, the Treasurer will be allowed such time as will enable him to present a comprehensive statement of its condition.

A new thing in fire apparatus is the electric hose. A wire runs along in the cotton or rubber part of the hose, continuing the connection as each section is attached, and over this passes electricity generated by a flywheel on the engine. Connected with the nozzle is a contrivance by which the engineer can be directed, although a [illegible] distant from the man who is playing on the fire, to turn water on, shut her off, stop, go ahead or anything else that may be agreed upon by a signal which is struck on a gong attached to the engine.

Warner Van Goldberg, foreman of one of the mills at Dunellen, near [illegible], died on Thursday of last week from the effects of a dose of Paris green taken the day before. He was a Democrat, but yielded to the persuasion of his wife, and voted the Republican ticket, on representation that the Democrats, if successful, would abolish the tariff, and throw him out of employment. On the morning after election he heard that the [illegible] had been [illegible], and [illegible] himself for being [illegible]. He took enough poison to kill six men.

TESTIMONIALS:

. . . . . "You ask me to favor you with my experience and impressions of Miss NELLA F. BROWN. I seldom if ever yield to requests of this nature. I feel less hesitation in this instance because of Miss Brown's exceeding modesty and unpretentiousness, which are characteristics of genius.

I am informed that she never received instruction in the conventional school of elocution, which fact is greatly in her favor. In this she may be compared with Fanny Kemble and the late Charlotte Cushman, who were illustrious examples of what genius may attain without elocutionary training.

Miss Brown has appeared twice upon the "Star" Course in one season to the eminent satisfaction of vast audiences, and will appear again this coming season. This, I take it, is a sufficient endorsement. Yours very truly,

T. B. POND,

Manager of "Star" Course, Phila.

It is the custom in the higher class of newspaper offices, to follow certain rules in regard to the use of certain words in the columns of their journals. HIS EXACT AGE.

When Uncle Reuben Clay, an old colored man of about seventy winters, dropped into a Griswold street tobacco store a day or two ago, and was asked his age, he promptly replied:

'Wall, sah, I reckon I'se about as nigh 70 y'ars ole as dey can make 'em.'

'If you can't read, or write or cypher, how can you tell?'

'I'se kept de dates in my head, sah, an' if you'll take a pencil I can prove my age in no time 'tall.'

One of the loungers prepared himself with pencil and paper, and Uncle Reuben proceeded:

'Now, sah, in what y'ar did Columbus diskiver America?'

'In 1492.'

'Den sot dat down.'

'Why, what has the discoverer of America to do with your age?' asked several voices.

'It makes no diffunce, sah. I'se got to git some pint to reckon from, an' I take dat one kase it's de handiest. Put down 1492.'

'Yes.'

'Now, den, when was de revolushunary wa' fit?'

'In 1776.'

'Exactly. Take dat from 1492 and it leaves how many?'

'Just 284 years.'

'Dat's k'rect. Now, when did dey fight de next wa'?'

'In 1812-14. Take that out and it makes a differende of thirty-six years, and reduces the figures to 248.'

'Dat's all right,' said Uncle Reuben as he bent over the figures. 'Now, den, in what y'ar did my great-grandfather land in ole Virginny?'

'Why, how do I know? You must know if any one.'

The old man scratched his head, looked over the figures and said:

'Dat's kinder curus. De ole man comes in dar sum-whar?'

All the men began to laugh at him, and the old man got up and tied on his comforter and said:

'You white folks needn't feel so mighty peart kase you tink you've got an ole nigger in a box. I'se gwine ober to see my son George, an' George he'll take a piece o' chalk an' de bottom of a cheer an' begin wid de day dat Cain killed Abel an' run my age down to dis werry mawnin' quicker'n de smartest o' you kin rub a so' head!'

HANCOCK AND McCLELLAN.

For a man who had met the one crushing defeat of his life General Hancock sustains himself nobly. At nine o'clock, on the morning after election, he went to his official headquarters and was soon immersed in the daily military correspondence. He had read the morning papers at breakfast and knew the result. Not a word fell from his lips; not a movement of his impassive face gave token of emotion within. It was only by intuition that the members of the home circle remained silent throughout the morning meal. The General took his hat and did what every man will give him credit for doing—he went to work. Two or three visitors called, among them a representative of The Evening Express, and were received by General Mitchell in the office. At ten o'clock the ferry-yacht brought over to Governor's Island a gentleman who had once himself tasted the bitter experience of the soldier-candidate for Presidential honors, General George B. McClellan. It was a kindred feeling, doubtless, that drew these two men together, and as they stood there, manly, dignified and silent, they formed a picture that was at once impressive and illustrative of the vanity of all human greatness.

"Well, General," was the visitor's only greeting.

"Mac, I am glad to see you," responded Hancock.

"I am sorry."

"I am sorry, too, but only for the people and the party."

The other visitors withdrew, leaving the two Generals alone. A few minutes later General W. B. Franklin, Colonel [illegible], General McClellan, and the Express representative boarded the ferry-launch and came to N. Y. city.

There is that about the valor, devotion and never-give-up-ativeness of the Reb Jersey Democracy, that is [illegible] [illegible] and [illegible] and more [illegible] than [illegible].

POETRY.

THERE IS A NATURAL BODY.

Immortal is my friend, I know;
Nor summer's heat nor winter's snow
Nor depth of earth could turn to naught
So much of life and love and thought.

And yet that form I did inter
To kindred earth, the dust to dust,
And thither still my thoughts will tend,
As if to find my vanished friend.

Sacred the robe, the faded glove,
Once worn by her we used to love;
Dead warriors in their armor live,
And in their ruins saints survive.

And there I tenderly laid down
The hands that fondly clasped my own—
The eyes that knew and answered mine
With many a meaning, loving sign—

The lips familiar with my name,
That freely called me and I came—
The breast that harbored all good-will,
The loving heart now cold and still.

Oh, sheltering earth, henceforth defend
All thou hast garnered of my friend
Against the wintry tempest's beat,
Against the summer's scorching heat.

Within thine all-embracing breast
I hid one more forsaken nest,
While to the sky with folded wings,
The bird that left it soars and sings.

MADGIE'S HERO.

"So this is the end of all your romance Madgie? this is the 'hero' you so often vowed you would marry? Well, I confess I am surprised."

"And disappointed, too—why don't you add that, Nellie?" Mrs. Bentick said, as she led the way to a cosy little sitting-room where a cheery fire was burning. "Sit down, dear, and drink your tea, and have a little rest before dinner. Some day, perhaps, you'll have a better opinion of Phil, and even learn to admire him—who knows?"

"But, Madgie, he really isn't a bit handsome, nor romantic-looking, nor poetic, nor anything; and I did so hope and expect he would be different," and Nellie Grahame paused for want of a word to express fully all she expected Madgie Mason's husband to be.

Nellie and Madgie had been friends at school, and when they parted—the former to join her father in India; Madgie to take up her abode with her uncle, Captain Mason, at the Woodlands—they had vowed eternal constancy and exchanged schoolgirl pledges of affection and remembrance.

Scarcely six months after leaving school Madgie was alone in the world, heiress of Woodlands and all her uncle's wealth, and with Doctor Philip Bentick for her sole guardian. Nellie was in India, and there seemed no immediate prospect of Major Grahame returning, and as Madgie had no other "dear friends," to Nellie she poured out all her heart on paper, dwelling at great length on her delightful, solitary, romantic life at Woodlands, and her unalterable resolution to marry a real bona fide hero or remain forever Madge Mason.

And Phil Bentick was the end of all her dreams!

"He's decidedly ugly," Nellie said, glancing at a photograph which stood on the chimney-piece. "I'm sure if I had the misfortune to marry such a man, I wouldn't have his likeness in every conspicuous place in the house. I'm surprised at Madgie, with her love of everything beautiful and her own pretty face and fortune. She surely might have done better; and yet she seems happy and contented enough, though she was such a hero worshipper."

Nellie had come in accordance with a long-standing promise to pay Madgie a visit. It was their first meeting since they had left school, five years before, and she had expected to find her friend just the same as ever—gushing, sentimental, impulsive—with a dreamy, dark-eyed lover husband, fond of poetry, and with a decided air of mystery about him. Nothing could be more unlike her preconceived idea than Phil Bentick, with his rough, seamed face, cheery voice, hearty laugh and burly frame—a busy, active, energetic, hardworking, practical country doctor, ten years older than Madgie if he was a moment, and, oh! so ugly.

And yet Philip Bentick had had his romance too. He had been old Captain Mason's medical attendant, and after his death Madgie's sole counselor, "guide, philosopher and friend." Woodlands was a roomy, old-fashioned house, buried in pleasant woods, five miles from a village, thirteen from a town. The nearest neighbors on one side were only rough and ready farmers, on the other side poor fisher-folk who tried to wring a wretched subsistence from the sea and barren westerly shore.

But Madgie was not lonely. She loved Woodlands, loved to wander all day through the gardens with a volume of poetry or an old romance in her hand, loved the distant glimpses of the sea, loved the dreamy solitude, which she peopled with heroes and heroines of her own creating—very delightful but wholly impracticable individuals.

But with all her sentiment Madgie was very charming, and it was not surprising that Dr. Bentick—despite his being her guardian, and a poor, struggling country doctor into the bargain—should fall in love with her. It was what every one expected, and Madgie herself was the only person astonished or unprepared when one day, in plain honest fashion, he told her of the love and asked her to be his wife.

It was as if Madgie had been awakened from a very pleasant dream by a rough shake. During the two years she had been at Woodlands she had become accustomed to the doctor. He had always been at hand to counsel, to confide in, and take all responsibility off her shoulders. She was used to his honest face and kindly voice, to his constant attentions and occasional lectures, and in a way she liked them; but the first idea of loving or marrying had never entered her head, for the doctor was commonplace to the last degree, and entirely devoid of all sentiment and romance and Madgie set her whole heart on a hero.

But Phil Bentick was not destitute of feeling; and when Madgie, more plainly than politely, declined his proposal, the look of pain and sorrow in his clear, honest gray eyes would have accorded with the most extravagant protestations of despair and misery. But he did not give way to them—only apologized gravely for having troubled Miss Mason, and was taking his departure in the most matter-of-fact way, when Madgie burst into impetuous explanation.

"It's not that I dislike you, Phil, or like any one else better, and I know you're twice too good for me; only—"

"Only what, Madgie?"

Down went her brown head in confusion. It was not easy to tell a man to his face that he was not a hero, and that was the sole objection she had to Philip Bentick.

"Only what, Madgie?" he repeated slowly. "Is it wealth I lack, or am I too old—too ugly, or have I simply the misfortune to meet with your general disapproval? Tell me what my failings are, that I may try and mend them."

Madgie looked up into the grave, earnest face that bent over her, and burst into tears: "It isn't any of those things, Phil," she sobbed. "I'm sure you're handsome enough (just like Lara!) she added mentally, "and rich enough and—oh, Phil, if you could only do something!—something great, I mean, I do so want my husband to be a hero!"

"Ah, is that it, Madgie, dear?" after a long silence, "don't you think a man may be a hero without his name being familiar in men's mouths, his fame blazoned abroad by newspapers? Must he seek 'the bubble reputation even at the cannon's mouth'?"

"I love a hero, Phil—a great, brave, famous man! I should like the whole world to know and respect my husband—Can't you do something—anything, Phil?"

"Cannot you love me just as I am, Madgie? I don't want my wife to be a heroine, only sweet, and true, and lovable, just as you are, Madgie, dear. I was not 'born great,' and it is not given to every man to achieve greatness. My duty seems to lie straight before me here in this quiet little village, and I try to do it. Does that count for nothing, Madge?"

"Yes, yes, I know. But, Phil, I cannot marry a mere country doctor whom no one ever heard of. If you really love me, prove it. Do some brave, noble deed—even try to do something. You know how immeasurably."

"You do not love me, Madgie. Forgive me for having troubled you. Good-bye."

"Phil, you know I do care about you—a little, but I love honor more."

Doctor Bentick smiled sadly at the girl's silly fancies.

"It all comes of living so much alone, and reading nonsensical romances," he mused. "Madgie's heart is all right, but her head is sadly wrong, poor child! She'll be wiser some day, perhaps."

But as the months passed by Madgie showed no signs of improvement; indeed she became, if possible, more confirmed in her "heroic" ideas, avoiding all society, and feeding her fancies with all sorts of poetic visions. The doctor no longer visited Woodlands in the old familiar, friendly way, for he felt that Madgie avoided him, and when that was impossible, treated him with constrained civility.

"I'll go away for a time," he said one evening, the last of his guardianship, for Madgie would be of age on the morrow. "I'll volunteer for a few months' service on the Gold Coast. During my absence she may meet with her ideal 'hero,' or forget me—poor Madgie!"

The next day he went up to Woodlands to congratulate his ward on reaching her majority and have a final interview with her lawyer, and mentioned incidentally his intention of going abroad for a few months.

"Going abroad, Phil?" Madgie cried, the color rushing to her pale cheek; "when? where? why?"

"I have not been feeling very bright lately, and I fancy a change may do me good. An old college chum of mine, surgeon on the Aphrodite, has just married, and we're trying, if it can be managed for us, to exchange for a few months. His ship is ordered to the gold coast and he can't possibly have his wife either precede, follow or accompany him there. He'd enjoy a few quiet months here in Broadbay, and I should not mind having a peep at King Koffee."

"And when are you going, Phil?"

"If it can be arranged in about a fortnight. Clemens thinks there will be no difficulty, as he has some friends high up in the admiralty, and he has married the daughter of the captain of the Aphrodite. I have no doubt it can be managed; and if not I'll take a cruise to Ashantee on my own hook. I fancy I want a holiday."

"I hope you will enjoy it very much, doctor," Madgie said, her ardor considerably dampened by his cool, careless way of speaking. Evidently he was not going to make a hero or a martyr of himself on her account; and yet in her secret heart she was delighted. An adventure was the only thing Phil required to make him perfect in her eyes; and an adventure, even if it were only a touch of yellow fever, could scarcely fail to befall him on the gold coast.

"Good-by, Madgie. I thought a few weeks ago I should be taking a longer journey; but our separation will be no less effectual though only a few miles instead of a few thousand separate us."

"What do you mean, Phil? Aren't you going on the Aphrodite after all?" and Madgie glanced despairingly at the huge chest and the numerous small parcels she had packed with such care for Phil's comfort and consolation on the voyage. "You have not changed your mind at the last moment have you?"

"Yes, I have, but not altogether without a reason. You know poor Daventry?"

"Yes; what has he to do with it?"

"He's ill—down with the small-pox, poor fellow! He has worked like a giant night and day, this last fortnight at Millbay, where small-pox is raging. Daventry's wife is down, too, and their only child was buried yesterday. I must go over at once."

"Into the very middle of infection? You shan't—you mustn't, Phil! Why, it's frightful in Millbay—every house is infected!"

"And no doctor to look after the poor creatures; think of that, Madgie! Daventry, poor fellow, faced it all by himself—never so much as let me know the outbreak was serious; and it was only by the merest accident I heard of his illness. Now I must go, dear; every moment is precious. It may be long before we meet again, Madgie; we may never meet in this world. Heaven bless you always, darling; may you be as happy as I wish you."

"Phil, you mustn't go! What have you to do with Millbay? Phil! Phil! come back!"

But he was already far down the avenue obeying a far more powerful voice than Madgie Mason's—the voice of duty.

Millbay was a remote fishing village, about eleven miles from Broadbay, situated in a low marshy inlet of the sea, and surrounded by stagnant swamps. The people were poor, ignorant, ill-fed, worse-clad, and the low, unhealthy situation of the village, and undrained, unventilated houses, made them peculiarly liable to diseases of all sorts. It was there Phil Bentick turned his steps unhesitatingly.

With a brave heart he entered Doctor Daventry's residence, and took his duties on himself. For weeks the disease raged with unusual violence; whole families were carried off, young and old alike; and with want approaching famine and virulent disease, Doctor Bentick struggled alone. No help came from any quarter. The inhabitants of Millbay were always secluded, and the place was shunned as if plague-stricken. Even the postman who toiled through the marshes twice a week forsook the place. Rank grass grew thickly in the middle of the long, straggling High street; the boats drifted out with the tide unheeded; and the stealthy tread of some stricken parent or child, seeking assistance to bury their dead, was the only sound that broke the awful sultry stillness of the long, scorching August days.

"This is terrible!" Phil said to himself one evening as he walked wearily along the seacoast, gasping for a breath of fresh air. "Thank heaven, Daventry is nearly well, for I feel that I cannot stand it much longer. Mentally and physically I am worn out, and more likely to do harm than good. If I could only shut out this frightful picture for an hour and get one breath of untainted air, I should feel better."

At that moment a low moan sounded somewhere near, and pausing he leaned over the wall to see from whence it came. —Unconsciously he had reached the village graveyard, a lonely spot by the shore, only distinguished from the surrounding marshes by a few rude headstones and rugged wooden crosses, and row upon row of new made graves. By one of them a woman was kneeling, scratching with both feeble hands at a small fresh mound of earth, while now and again a low moan burst from her lips. She was ill, weak, emaciated, and the doctor recognized her as a woman who had suffered severely—recovering as by a miracle having lost her husband and five children. Three days before he had seen her with an infant in her arms, the only living thing left her; now it lay beneath the ragged cloak, the last of all her flock.

Vaulting over the low wall, the doctor approached her gently.

"My good woman, what are you doing here?" he whispered, laying his hand on her shoulder.

"Let me bury my dead," she cried, fiercely, pointing to her cloak. "Go away and leave me with my people."

"No, no—let me;" and taking a spade that lay near, he dug a grave, and reverently placed the tiny form, wrapped in in its mother's cloak, in it; then he covered it over hurriedly, and taking the wretched mother by the arm, led her from the spot.

"Heaven forever bless you, sir," she said, bursting into tears, as she took a last look at the little grave. "Now I am indeed alone, the last of my name and race—father, mother, husband, children, friends, all gone," and she sank down by the open gateway, and refused to move further. "Let me die here sir," she cried; "here beside my loved ones. What have I done that the almighty should leave me?"

Sick at heart the doctor turned away. Such scenes had not been uncommon in Millbay during the preceding month, but he had never witnessed anything like it, and the horror of it was on his mind during the weary weeks that followed, for he, too was seized with the frightful illness, stricken down as with a sudden blow. For weeks he lay hovering between life and death, and when he awoke to consciousness the first face he saw bending over him was that of the poor mother he had seen before his illness. Day and night she had tended him with unceasing care, and seemed to forget her own illness and sorrow in watching over him.

It was the end of August when he was taken ill, it was the middle of October before he was able to creep feebly out of doors and sit in the sunshine. Once only had he looked in the mirror, and then reflection of his seamed, scarred, livid face staggered him. Oh no one had the disease made such fearful ravages; yet not a soul who survived in the village of Millbay but blessed every seam, and reverenced every purple scar, and found a beauty in them that might be coveted by an angel. Surely it was their prayers and blessings, their looks of love and tears of gratitude, that reconciled him at last to his terribly altered appearance.

"If my love was hopeless before, it is doubly so now," he said to himself, one day. "Did any one ever hear, I wonder, of a pock-marked hero? and yet it was all wisely ordained. My duty lay straight before me, however it may end for me."

It was Christmas before the doctor thought it perfectly safe to return to his cottage at Broadbay. His own had been the last case of the disease in Millbay, and all signs of infection had long since disappeared. He had recovered his strength, too; his step was as light and free as of old, his voice as cheery, his smile as genial; but the deep discolored scars were still on his face, indelibly printed there, and it was only those to whom he had ministered in their sore need that saw a radiant beauty in them. For himself, he had almost forgotten them.

What was a scar or two on his face to the deep, deep, sore scars on his heart.

Who would care a jot whether a poor solitary country doctor was ugly or the reverse? Such was his thoughts as he drove up to his cottage, with Mrs. Norton, the poor solitary widow, beside him. She insisted on following him and serving him, and she was so utterly alone that he had not the heart to say to her nay. A blue line of smoke curled from the chimneys, a cheery glow of firelight danced on the window-panes, the door stood hospitably open, to his unbounded surprise.

"Ah! this is like coming home. What good fairy has been at work, I wonder," he said, stepping into the light and warmth.

"Madgie! ah, my darling, is it indeed you?"

"Me, Phil? Why of course, who else should it be?" Then drawing closer, "Dear Phil, can you forgive me?"

"Forgive you, Madgie?" he said huskily, "forgive you what?"

"My folly. I'm wiser now, Phil, and I think I know the value of the treasure I once despised."

"Come nearer to the light, Madgie, and look at me. I'm less like a hero than ever!"

"Phil, I wouldn't have one of those changed," and she laid her hand lightly on his cheek; "I would not give one unsightly scar for the cross of the legion of honor. You are the hero of my fancy and imagination. Forgive me, Phil, let us forget all my folly, for I'm heartily ashamed of it."

Just then the bells of Broadbay church rang out a joyous peal, and friends gathered round to welcome back the doctor and wring his hand heartily, looking the praises they could not speak. To go forth bravely in search of honor, and return victorious, is a great thing; to go forth and brave death at the call of duty is a good thing. And as Phil Bentick glanced round at the kindly faces about him, he felt he had his full reward.

A few weeks after, Madgie and Phil were married, and when Nellie Grahame came to pay her long-promised visit in the summer, and heard by degrees the whole story, she was forced to admit that Madgie's hero was a real hero after all, and one "whose like" we do not meet with every day.

It tells us that we must reverence our Heavenly Father—Hallowed be thy name.

It breathes the saints' reward—Thy kingdom come.

And a submissive, obedient spirit—Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven.

And a dependent, trusting spirit—Give us this day our daily bread.

And a forgiving spirit—Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us.

And a cautious spirit—Deliver us from evil.

And last of all, an adoring spirit—For thine is the kingdom, and the power and the glory, for ever and ever. Amen.

TO-DAY AND TO-MORROW.

To-day there are cattle upon a thousand hills—to-morrow they fall by slaughter.

To-day we gather bright and beautiful flowers—to-morrow they are faded and dead.

To-day the ripening fruit and waving grain—to-morrow "the land is taking its rest after toil."

To-day a wreath of leaves shades us—to-morrow sear, and fallen, they crumble beneath our tread.

To-day the earth is covered with a carpet of green—to-morrow it is brown with the withered grass.

To-day the vigorous stalk only bends before the gale—to-morrow, leafless and sapless, a child may break the brittle stem.

To-day we hear sweet songsters of meadows and forests, the buzz and hum of myriad insects—to-morrow breathe softly, all nature is hushed and silent.

"Of course not," she replied; "but don't you think, Harry, that smoking is offensive, and that it will be easier practicing economy after marriage, if it is practiced during courtship?" "You're right," he said; "I shan't smoke any more sweet," and she looked unutterable love at him as they resumed their stroll. Just then they came to an ice-cream saloon, and he said: "There, now, I meant to treat you to ice-cream, but, as you say, it is best to practice economy during courtship. Ten cents for a cigar, thirty cents for two ice-creams—forty cents saved in a single night. Let's go over to the fountain and take a drink of water?" They went; but she was mad enough to bite his head off.

PROCLAMATION
BY THE GOVERNOR.

"It has pleased the Almighty to bestow upon us during the past year the gifts of peace and plenty, immunity from pestilence, and a continuation of the temporal prosperity arising out of the bountiful crops with which He has blessed the land; it has also pleased Him to guide our people to come safely through a period of great political excitement; therefore, in compliance with good custom handed down to us from our ancestors, I, GEORGE B. McCLELLAN, Governor of the State of New Jersey, do hereby appoint THURSDAY, the TWENTY-FIFTH DAY OF NOVEMBER, instant, as a day of public thanksgiving and praise to the Almighty God for all his blessings, and as a day of humble prayer that, notwithstanding all our shortcomings, He will bless us according to the fulness of His love and mercy, and not according to our deserts.

Given under my hand and seal, at the Executive Chamber, in the city of Trenton, this twelfth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty, and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and fifth.

[L. S.] GEO. B. McCLELLAN.

By the Governor:
JOHN A. HALL, Private Secretary.

SHERMANIA.

There cannot be anything more injurious to permanent prosperity than Government interference with the finances of legitimate business. It not only overturns prudent calculations, but opens wide the door for official and private speculation at the expense of honest interests, and further than that, it fosters deception for the attainment of corrupt partisan ends.

It is an agent of terrible evil.

There was no stronger reason why a change of Administration should have been decreed by popular vote on the second of November, than the scandalous fact that the present Secretary of the Treasury is and has long been an active operator in Wall street.

He can make money plenty or scarce, and raise or lower the price of securities and commodities, as personal gain or party advantage may require.

Such unwarranted power is well calculated to subvert integrity and make a good man bad.

It ought not to exist for a single day.

For months previous to the recent Presidential election, the Treasury Department, with a grand flourish of trumpets, disbursed between two and three million dollars a week in the purchase of Government Bonds.

It was heralded as financial glory due only to the greatness of John Sherman and the Republican party.

Truth shows it to have been an artfully arranged political dodge.

That large weekly addition to loanable funds caused a free and easy money market, set speculative bubbles soaring high in air, induced the Banks to expand, and gave business affairs generally the appearance of extraordinary improvement, which the continuance of Republican management could only perpetuate, as hired party organs constantly affirmed.

That was the trick concocted at Washington and successfully played in New York.

Events prove that funds so liberally disbursed by Government were paid out for partisan effect, and should have been retained for the redemption of obligations maturing at the end of the year. The action of the Secretary of the Treasury, in stopping the purchase of bonds immediately after the election, plainly developes the trickster.

The election was over, the ballots deposited, Mr. Sherman had accomplished his party purpose by deceitfully inducing thousands of business men to believe a change was dangerous, and that their own immediate welfare demanded the abandonment of Hancock and the support of Garfield.

So much for one trick of the campaign. There are others to be exposed. Truth is mighty and will prevail.

HONORABLE MENTION.

It is an honor to be a citizen of New Jersey. In spite of the tremendous power of political corruption and hypocrisy exerted to prolong the Republican dynasty, New Jersey casts her electoral vote for Winfield Scott Hancock, the representative of integrity and patriotism and the saving principles of Democracy. Her well earned fame is acknowledged throughout the entire Union. Read the following editorial clipped from the Keokuk (Iowa) Constitution:

NEW JERSEY.

"In the midst of all the glare of illuminations, the stench of coal oil and drunken negroes, the chuckling of officeholders and the rejoicing of monopolists, it is really refreshing to turn to New Jersey.

How steady she is! How persistent in punishing thieves, hanging murderers and passing the verdict of her democratic majorities against radical hypocrisy and usurpation!

Jersey justice! How universal the proverb!

Notwithstanding the fact that she is very largely interested in manufactures, and notwithstanding the vast power of monopolies and government patronage, the sentiment of live and let live, of honor and charity, of peace and good will, of faithfulness in the maintenance of the spirit and letter of the compact between our fathers has, as ever there, once more triumphed. Her population is a long established one, and not descended from the fanatical and intolerant Puritans, but from the honest and peaceable Dutch and Quakers, with enough of the old cavalier element to give spirit and action to the whole.

Then there are her family and local traditions, running back to the dawn of our history, and her soil moistened with the blood of heroes in the darkest days of the revolutionary struggle. Here is Trenton; there Princeton; on the other hand Monmouth. There is the Delaware, over which Washington led his freezing and starving Continentals, and along whose banks can be pointed out the very rocks formerly reddened by the bare and bleeding feet of the battalions hurrying down to surprise the mercenaries of King George. There is old Nassau Hall the Continental Congress sought refuge, and there the highways and caravansaries still vibrate from the tread of Washington, Jefferson, Franklin, and all that glorious company of the apostles and champions of liberty, compared with whom the Grants and Colfaxes, the Garfields and Arthurs, the Conklings, Blaines, Logans, Camerons, Babcocks, etc., would seem to belong to some Darwinian species.

Yes; the people of New Jersey well know through what blood and tears constitutional liberty was won. They still remember the needs, circumstances, chances and intentions of the hour—when, in 1787, the representatives of the various independent states came together and planned that compact with just those concessions and compromises that were necessary to protect us from foreign insult and oppression; that compact which made us to the outside world a unit—a nation, if you please—but to ourselves a family, each member of which was sovereign and independent.

Living, then, on ground consecrated by blood; among such traditions; connected even directly with the past by sires and grandsires,—the yeomanry of New Jersey turn coldly away from sectional jealousy and hate, the rabid ambition of politicians, the greed of monopolies, the vulgar ostentation and display of ill-gotten wealth, the vaunting of successful fraud, shoddy gentility and Beecherian and Conklingian morality and ideas of progress in political and social ethics, and subscribe by their voices and votes to the constitutional doctrines maintained in their purity and simplicity by the Democratic party."

A thousand cheers for New Jersey! Let others do as they like, she stands loyal to the patriotic work of the Fathers. NEW JERSEY FOREVER!

Money or No Money is the question.

THE RESULT.

James A. Garfield is the President elect, and however much we may condemn the means employed to secure that result, the validity of his election cannot be set aside.

We sincerely believe that a Democratic administration at Washington would have been productive of far more general good, but a contrary verdict stands registered, and we must accept another four year term of Republican sway.

We shall criticise the actions of President Garfield justly, but fearlessly, commending whatever is right and censuring without stint all that is wrong.

Our confidence in Democracy is immovable. In defeat as in victory we sustain the grand old party of Jefferson and the People.

The proposed increase of duty on malt is causing a ferment in beer.

The last Grand Jurymen from Plainfield were all Republicans. Do you call that equity?

Examine closely into that $5,000 additional tax ere you vote a greater burden on your back.

Beware of Municipal Rings! To remain free from disaster a City must avoid them as the small-pox. Beware of Rings!

Tax-payers! Scan well the proposition to raise an extra $5,000! There is a very large animal in that heap of Councilmanic brush. Hunt him out!

Councilmen curtail the authority of the Mayor in every conceivable manner, and then some of them vulgarly abuse him for not doing the impossible.

Why has there not been a report made to Council on that Water Works scheme? The tax-payers must be fully posted before voting an extra $5,000.

The great desideratum of the present day is to find a Mayor for Plainfield who can make water run up hill. Some of our Republican friends are sanguine they can accomplish the feat.

The Ring organ says some members of the present Council should not be re-elected. Who is who? Let us have more preaching in the Wigwam? Call forth the glee clubs? Squelch treason on the spot?

How many Plainfielders are in the habit of using commutation tickets in violation of the rules of the Rail Road Company, and why are they allowed to go unmolested? Let us have even and exact justice?

Some of the business men who voted for Garfield in order to prevent a change, are now pondering the historic fact, that the most prosperous times this country ever experienced were under Democratic rule.

Malaria has been prevalent this year throughout the whole country, in the valleys and on mountain tops. There is not a place in the United States that has enjoyed greater exemption from the epidemic than the City of Plainfield.

The organ of the Ring slurs in its accustomed style a worthy, intelligent and zealous Republican citizen, who is prominently named in connection with the office of Mayor. That ought to raise him in the estimation of all sensible voters.

The Republicans in selecting candidates for City Offices need give themselves no concern about the excellence of personal character, as that insignificant qualification was by their party decreed unorthodox on the second of November. Vote for party, not integrity, is the latest interpretation of a moral idea.

Fearful is the strife among Republican aspirants for the honor of being Mayor. Each gladiator vows he killed Hancock and therefore deserves to wear the laurel wreath. Go it Chieftains! The Democrats are looking on, with the complacency of the woman who viewed the conflict between husband and bear.

There is a question of legality about one Council ordering an election for money to be assessed as a tax by another. Be that as it may, there cannot exist a reasonable doubt that such action lacks propriety. The Council of 1881 may find $10,000 tax and revenue from licenses amply sufficient to meet public wants, provided funds are economically and practically expended. Let every tub stand on its own bottom?

Robeson, of unsavory Grant Cabinet record, and some other congenial partisan spirits, are trying to invent a Legislative scheme to thwart the will of the people as expressed in the election of George C. Ludlow Governor of New Jersey. That game of fraud won't be tolerated in this State, and besides, if we are not greatly mistaken, Mr. Potts is a gentleman of too much character to allow himself to be made a party to any base intrigue. Mr. Potts has an honorable repute, not that of a Secorite.

The names of Republican gentlemen mentioned in connection with the Mayoralty are numerous. We have already heard of the following:

W. E. Potts,
L. V. F. Randolph,
F. Knowland,
E. L. Morris,
E. W. Runyon,
J. M. Whilton,
J. W. Murray,
W. Lithgow,
E. L. Finch,
J. B. Tracy,
A. Gilbert,
S. Alpheus Smith,
J. H. Ackerman,
E. R. Pope,
G. P. Suydam,
W. B. Stewart,
W. H. Brower,
J. B. Coward.

A dozen and half to commence with will do. We anxiously await an additional installment.

HEDDEN CONVICTED.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 18.—The trial of James Hedden, cashier of the late First National Bank of Newark, culminated to-day in his conviction. The indictment on which he was tried was for making a false report of the condition of the bank. United States District Attorney Keasby closed his argument, in which he claimed that the evidence supported the charge, that Hedden had been guilty of preparing an erroneous statement, by which he deceived the directors, stockholders and creditors, and that the assets, $300,000, had been wasted and he was acquainted with the wasting.

Judge Nixon delivered a full and comprehensive charge. The jury were absent only a short time. The result was a bitter disappointment. Hedden acted as if stunned by the announcement. His counsel gave notice of appeal. Hedden was released on bail and returned to his home in Newark on the evening train. District Attorney Keasby gave notice that he would move the trial of other indictments, fifteen in number.

General Hancock was presented with seven gold-headed canes during the campaign.

Its embalming or antiseptic property and aromatic fragrance makes it a toilet luxury. SOZODONT removes all disagreeable odors from the breath caused by catarrh, bad teeth, &c. It is entirely free from the injurious and acrid properties of tooth pastes and powders which destroy the enamel. One bottle lasts six months.

And now I am sad and lonely
Without my darling baby boy;
He is gone, but not forgotten,
From my tender love and joy.

What the Law Says About It.

Some people who allow their subscriptions to fall in arrears think that all they are obliged to do to get rid of the paper is to leave it in the post office. The law does not give any such power to evade a small but just debt. No matter whether it is taken out of the office or not, the publisher may send the paper to the address so long as the subscription remains in arrears, and the law holds good, the debt thus contracted.

The Park Avenue Bazaar.

As will be seen by reference to the advertisement in another column, the Ladies of the Park Ave. Baptist Church are progressing with the arrangements for their Bazaar on Dec. 1st, 2d and 3d. The fortunate securing of Prof. Ebert for the Concert night, and the added attractions of an Art Gallery, Curiosity Shop, and Telephone Service, to say nothing of what may be developed in the two weeks intervening, already insures the unbounded success the undertakings of this Church always deservedly receive.

Reckless Driving.

About 7 o'clock, Tuesday evening last, a team of horses being driven at a rapid rate, ran into an old lady at the corner of Front and Somerset streets and knocked her down. The driver continued on his course without stopping to ascertain what damage was done by the collision. A bystander, Mr. Stephen Davis, ran to the assistance of the lady, picked her up and carried her to Shaw's Drug store, where medical aid was rendered. It was some time before she was able to walk, seeming to have suffered injuries in her side. No police were present to investigate the careless accident.

A large number of invited guests assembled at the residence of Mr. John H. Tier, on Bank Place, last Wednesday evening, to welcome home from their wedding trip, Mr. & Mrs. John H. Tier, Jr. The happy couple received the congratulations of their many friends, while dancing was indulged in by those fond of such pleasure, to the inspiring strains of excellent music furnished by Prof. De Bona, of New York. It was in the small hours of morning before many of the guests tore themselves away from the enjoyments of the occasion and the hospitality of Mr. Tier's mansion.

P. A. C. Reception.

Last Saturday evening the rooms of the Plainfield Athletic Club, corner of Park and North avenues, were filled with a fashionable and appreciative audience on the occasion of the Reception given by the Gentlemen's Class of the Gymnasium. The exercises were of an interesting character and evidenced that under the skillful management of the instructor, Prof. Burnham, the class is making encouraging progress. It is the intention of the Club to give similar receptions during the winter. Our citizens should take an interest in and encourage this institution by lending their aid and assistance in the formation of large classes.

Hon. Miles Ross.

The handsome majority received by Hon. Miles Ross for a fourth term in Congress from the Third District in the late election is certainly gratifying to the Democracy of the District, and those non-partisans who appreciate Mr. Ross' worth as a legislator for the people. It was through his indefatigable work that such handsome Democratic majorities were secured in Middlesex and Monmouth counties. Mr. Ross has certainly proven that he is one of if not the best campaign organizers in the State. He not only looked after his own interests, but saw that none of his associates on the ticket suffered by cutting, even if he suffered himself. Such unselfishness in a political candidate for office is commendable.

County Courts.

Saturday last was sentence day in the County Courts at Elizabeth, and several Plainfield parties came in for a share of them.

William Shafer (alias "Hot") a colored man, convicted of shooting a white man named O'Keefe, in the hand with a pistol, on the corner of Second street and Park Avenue, one night in September last, was sentenced to nine months in State Prison and pay costs of prosecution.

Michael Sweeney, Jr., convicted of assault and battery, failed to appear on sentence day. His case was postponed.

Nicholas Mullen and Patrick O'Brien, of Summit, charged with assault and battery on members of the Westfield political club, commanded by Mr. Otis G. Webb, was sentenced to pay a fine. Mullen received $20 and O'Brien $5 fine and costs of prosecution.

In the case of L. B. Boice vs Parker B. Miller and Edward Jukes, on Wednesday of last week, on a charge of assault and battery, Jukes was acquitted and Miller convicted. The cause of the suit has been before stated in these columns. Mr. Boice purchased of a man named Apgar, a growing crop of rye on ground at Fanwood, leased by Apgar from the Central R. R. Co. Before the rye was cut the ground was re-leased by the Co. to Edward Jukes. When Mr. Boice attempted to harvest the grain he was arrested by constable Miller, and suffered great indignities from the arrest. Hence the suit.

He announces "The Best Goods for the Lowest Prices." His advertisement came too late for insertion in our columns this week. Look out for it next week.

The Old Folks' Sociable.

St. Mary's Hall, (the new name given the former Catholic worshiping place) was the scene of unusual enjoyment last Thursday evening, in consequence of an "Old Folks' Sociable" being held there. Handsome and appropriate decorations adorned the walls, and inspiring strains of music from the harper, violinist and bagpiper, gave occupation to the feet of the merry throng present, until the "wee sma' hours of the morning." Refreshments were to be obtained in abundance at booths erected for the purpose. Father Morris was present and did all in his power to make the occasion to those present what it was—a really enjoyable one. We learn that it is in contemplation to repeat the "Sociable" at a not very distant date. Success to the enterprise.

Bro. Jameson, of the Somerset Messenger, and ex-Surrogate Wm. S. Potter, paid our sanctum a visit yesterday. They pronounce the appointments of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST office as complete.

Our sanctum was visited on Saturday by an old friend, Mr. Jessie Thorn, formerly of North Plainfield, now a resident of Dunellen. Mr. T. attained his 89th birthday the day before the late election, voted the Democratic ticket, and is as hale and hearty as many a man at 40 years of age.

North Plainfield's popular druggist, T. S. Armstrong, Esq., was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Miss Kate F. Kline on Wednesday last. The newly wedded pair started the same evening for Wilmington, Delaware. We extend our hearty congratulations to the newly wedded pair.

A Damaged Head.

Tuesday morning last, Constable Wm. Pangborn, residing at Short Hills, near the Fair Grounds, was informed by a neighbor, Mr. Ira VanBlskirk, that a stranger, almost nude, was running up and down the road, gesticulating violently, in the vicinity of the latter's residence, and desired the constable to come and take charge of him. This Mr. Pangborn proceeded to do. He found the stranger as stated, with nothing but his underclothing on, with scratched face and frost-bitten ears and cheeks, wandering aimlessly about and unable to give any account of himself. About half a mile from where he met the stranger, the constable found a heap of clothing, beneath which lay a valuable gold watch. From appearances it was evident that the man had disrobed at this spot and lain down in the bushes which lined the roadside, probably the night before. Dressing the stranger, and giving him a warm breakfast at his house, he hitched up his horse and conveyed him to Mr. Heidloff's hotel in this city, trusting that some one could be found who could understand or identify him. Mr. John Steiner, the tobacconist, happening to enter the hotel, was confident that he recognized the man as a German merchant of Williamsburg, he had known years ago. Acting on this clue a telegram was forwarded to the locality as near as could be remembered. No answer was received and at 5:48 o'clock, p. m. Mr. Pangborn started for Williamsburg with the stranger, who had meantime been tenderly cared for at the hotel. Arriving at the part of the city suggested by Mr. Steiner, the stranger's friends were found in the firm of Vollkommer & Co., dealers in Hay, at the junction of Broadway, Johnson & Union aves. Brooklyn, E. D. The unfortunate turned out to be the father of the senior member of the firm, named Joseph Vollkommer. Several years ago his mind became affected and his large business passed into the hands of his son and son-in-law. The family are wealthy, and had purchased a farm at Griggstown, N. J., whither the old gentleman was taken and cared for by attentive friends. Sunday morning last he was missed from his home. He was traced to New Brunswick where all track of him was lost. He must have wandered to the spot where found, loosing his overcoat in his journey. He had no other personal effects about him than the watch, having carefully changed his clothes when he left home, those which he discarded containing a small sum of money. The anxious family were profuse in their thanks and reward to Mr. Pangborn for his kindness and efforts to find the wanderer's home, while the old gentleman was soon put in more presentable shape and was reposing peacefully in bed when the constable returned home.

City Courts.

The case of Mary Stephen vs James F. Layton, in debt, demand $100, was tried by J. Oakley Nodyne, Esq., Justice, on the 15th inst. The plaintiff was represented by the Hon. Wm. B. Maxson, and the defendant by Craig A. Marsh, Esq. Numerous spectators, friends of the respective parties, members of the legal profession, witnesses, reporters and so forth, filled all available seats in the court room, and lined the walls. The reason assigned for the unusual interest is the popularity of our friend "Fis." The case was an ordinary suit on book account, to which defendant replied that a part was improperly charged to him, a part was not due plaintiff from anybody, and the rest had been paid. He also pleaded that in order to get rid of the constant unjustifiable "dunning" of the plaintiff, he finally made a proposition to "buy peace" for $45, which was accepted by the plaintiff, and the money paid. The plaintiff did not remember this agreement, but when pressed by opposite counsel, she refused to swear that she had not made it. Defendant then claimed that this agreement must be taken as proved, and as there was, to say the least, a dispute as to the amount due, if any, the agreement was valid, and binding. Decision on Thursday a. m.

At that date a written opinion was delivered by the Court, for which we have not space in this issue. Judgment was rendered for defendant with costs.

In the City Court before Judge Runyon, the case of the City vs Michael Spillane was called on the 16th inst., George P. Suydam, Esq., for the City, Craig A. Marsh, Esq., for the defendant. The complaint alleged a violation, by defendant, of a city ordinance by throwing stones, one of which struck one Mrs. Baird on the head. Mr. Suydam stated that defendant had decided to plead guilty, and that Mr. Marsh desired to be heard in behalf of the prisoner before sentence should be pronounced, to which he had no objection. Defendant's counsel then addressed the court suggesting various circumstances of extenuation, including extreme youth, previous good character, the [illegible] of parents, &c., and requested that sentence be suspended until the next offence. His Honor addressed the boy at length, and all present conceded the wisdom and force of the remarks. Sentence was suspended.

Upon complaint and affidavit made by Charles Greeder, Justice Nodyne on Thursday issued a search-warrant against one David C. Frazer of New Market. Captain Dodd served the warrant and brought the property of Mr. Greeder, together with the body of the defendant, into court. The property referred to consisted of numerous bottles stamped with Mr. Greeder's name and the words "This bottle not to be sold." The papers in the case were prepared by Craig A. Marsh, Esq., who also conducted the trial as counsel for Mr. Greeder. The action was brought on N. J. Statutes of 1854 and 1863, enacted for the protection of mineral water, [illegible] and others. After complainant's counsel had opened the case, and submitted the statutes to the court, the defendant admitted that the case had been made out too clearly to admit of any contest, and so pleaded guilty. The judgment of the court was for a fine of 50 cents for every bottle of Mr. Greeder's found in defendant's possession, and the costs of prosecution, defendant to stand committed until judgment should be satisfied. Mr. Frazer paid the amount demanded for 13 bottles and was discharged.

It is thought the fire was of incendiary origin. The loss is very light.

A barn and slaughter house, belonging to Mr. R. Totten, situated west of Mountain avenue, North Plainfield, were totally destroyed by fire about 8 o'clock, Wednesday night. The fire companies had a long run before they reached the scene, procuring a scanty amount of water for the steamers upon their arrival, from a frog pond and small stream of water. A small house near by, narrowly escaped destruction. The burned buildings were insured for $800, one half of which was in the Manhattan of N. Y., Wm. Woodruff, agent, and the other half in the Liverpool, London & Globe, O. B. Leonard, agent. The origin of the fire is unknown.

A curious scene was witnessed in Willis street, Paterson, on Thursday afternoon. Although there were many people in the street passing to and fro, two owls and a hawk flew swiftly through the street in a race after a chicken. There are 347 packs of hounds in England, Scotland and Ireland. These packs embrace 10,000 couples of hounds. Their maintenance is estimated at a cost of $2,500,000. The private expenditures of those that follow is fully equal to the amount spent in maintaining the hounds.

The sculling match between Trickett, of Australia, Champion of the World, and Hanlon, of Canada, Champion of the United States and England, for the Championship of the world, came off at noon on Monday last over the Thames course, from Putney to Mortlake, about four and one-eighth miles. Hanlon took the lead and kept it throughout, and won easily, beating Trickett four lengths. Trickett's friends lost a great deal of money, as they had backed their man heavily to win. The river banks were lined with people, and great excitement prevailed all along the course.

Concerning Fishermen.—A case of great interest to people engaged in fishing business has just been decided by the New Jersey Supreme Court. An act passed April 5, 1873, prohibits the use of seine nets in the Shrewsbury and Navesink Rivers. More than a year ago George Curtis, Fish Warden of Monmouth County, caused the arrest of John F. Cooper for dragging a seine in the Navesink River, and judgment was given in favor of the fish warden. The case was removed to the Supreme Court, which has affirmed the judgment. The defendant will not refer the case to the Court of Errors and Appeals.

One of the best localities in the State for game is Morris county, and it was the pleasure and good fortune of the Ed. of this journal, to enjoy a couple days' sport in hunting in the neighborhood of Chester after the recent excitement of election. Sojourning at the hospitable residence of Mr. Hiram H. DeCamp, (well-known to our Plainfield people as having the charge of Laing's Hotel for several years) who resides within a mile of the above mentioned town, we were soon at ease and forgetful of business cares or politics in the eager pursuit of the frisky cottontail, the whirring quail and grouse and whistling woodcock. In the two days, accompanied by Mr. DeCamp's son Johnnie, and a friend or two, and forgetting Chester's famous hunter, [illegible] Esq., who can tell more truthful (?) stories about game and the amount he kills (?) when he goes out with a party, a very large bag was secured, which when brought to this city, made the mouths of envious ones water. Full aware, however that the election was over, we were not to be bribed in surrendering any part of the game to those anxious ones desirous of securing some of it in consideration of one being a good fellow if we were a Democrat. It was too thin. The attempted bribery was rejected with scorn! We say to those who desire to enjoy a few days of good shooting, with the pleasure of returning home with a fine bag of game, and who have no such kind friend and hospitable mansion to visit as we did, to go straight to the Chester Cross Roads Hotel, kept by Charley [illegible], than whom there is no more genial or whole-souled landlord in the State, and put up with him, and if he does'nt send you home loaded down with game and render you a bill so small as to make your eyes water, then call us late for breakfast when buckwheat cakes are ripe.

Judge Wheeler, of Red Bank, has been examined and admitted as attorney-at-law to the bar of New Jersey, by the Supreme Court. We congratulate him.

The Lighthouse Board has just issued a notice that after November 24 there will be exhibited on the new lighthouse at Great Beds, Raritan Bay, near South Amboy, a fixed red light of the fourth order, illuminating the entire horizon, and visible in clear weather from the deck of a vessel fifteen feet above the sea, about thirteen nautical miles.

A painter who was engaged in painting the steeple of the Bergen Point church one day last week, slipped while he was descending. His clothes caught in the minute hand of the large clock and he hung suspended until rescued by his fellow workmen.

A locomotive which is expected to make ninety miles an hour, has just been completed in Paterson, N. J. The driving wheels rests on another wheel, which in turning rests upon the track. In this way the motion of the driving wheel is magnified by the peculiar arrangement of the wheel it rests upon. The inventor believes that his locomotive, if it were not for the increased resistance of the air, could be run at the rate of 107 miles an hour.

Constant Somers, of Bargaintown Atlantic county, has an apple tree, of the "Lippincott Early" variety, which has borne a second crop of apples the present year.

The ladies' cabins on all the ferryboats of the Pennsylvania railroad ferry are being carpeted by the company. The ferryboat New York has already received its carpets. This is the first time that ferryboats on the Hudson river has been carpeted since 1823, when the boats of the old Hoboken ferry were furnished with carpets and open fireplaces.

The 200th anniversary of the settlement of Somerset is soon to be celebrated.

The Board of Canvassers of Monmouth county, on Saturday night, furnished a recount of the Third Assembly District, and gave the certificate of election to Charles Allen, Democrat, he having a majority of one vote. Grover H. Lafourrow, the Republican candidate had a recount before Judge Scudder last week, and it was found that he had a majority of seven. He will therefore take his seat when the Legislature meets.

Robert G. Miller, the indicted collector of taxes, of New Brunswick N. J. has not resigned his office.

The Baker mine, on Mine Hill, Morris County, was recently started for the first time in seven years. The mine is operated by the Crane Iron Company, of Catasauqua, Pa. This mine is 300 feet deep and presents some singular features. There is not a drop of water in it, except what is carried down to drill with.

The surveyors of the Pennsylvania Railroad have been surveying a route for a new road from the coaling station near Whitehead's to Newtown. We understand that their idea is to take the coal traffic to South Amboy off the main track and pass it through by way of Hamilton Square and Newtown to Amboy.

Frank Lammens and Mrs. John Meierhoeffer, who were convicted in the Essex Oyer and Terminer of the murder of John Meierhoeffer, the woman's husband, during the first week of May, 1880, were arraigned last Saturday before Judge Depue and sentenced to be hanged on the 6th day of January next.

The State Board of Canvassers will meet in Trenton on the 23d inst.

Paterson, N. J., Nov. 15.—The wife of Samuel David, son of H. J. David, a prominent New York city lawyer, was found dead on the porch of his home at Wyckoffe, a few miles north of Paterson, yesterday morning. Her head was crushed, as if with a club, and she was covered with blood. Her husband, who was within all night, gave no clue to the tragedy. It is thought to be a case of murder. He has been arrested.

MOTHER, HOME AND HEAVEN; Golden Thoughts on; Edited by Rev. Theo L. Cuyler, D. D., is our first choice among the new Gift Books. It is appropriate at all times and places and suitable to every condition in life. In reviewing Holiday Books, The New York Herald says of it: "Of all the books of the season, not one has a name more beautiful or more suggestive than the one now before us. It is but fair to say, however, that the volume is not unworthy of the name it bears. It is not an original book, but it is better than original books usually are, for it is a collection of approved literary gems, of the choicest things which have been spoken or written, in prose or in verse, on these choicest of all themes. Over three hundred Authors have been laid under contribution, and the selections have been made with excellent taste." Price $2.75. Agents Wanted. E. B. Treat, Publisher, 757 Broadway, New York.

The A. S. T. Co's Black Tip for children's shoes, is superior to all others for the following reason: They protect the toe, from wear just at point where the wear comes, and do not give the shoe a [illegible] and patched appearance, as do the caps sewed on to the upper.

CONCORD, Mass., Nov. 15.—It is reported that Jesse Pomeroy has been frustrated in another scheme to escape from his strong cell by sawing through the thick boiler-plate casing lining it, with a saw improvised from a knife used in his cell; and that he succeeded in cutting an aperture through 18 inches long and 9 inches wide. He was discovered in season by a yard officer, who stopped his further progress.

HALL'S Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer is a scientific combination of some of the most powerful restorative agents in the vegetable kingdom. It restores gray hair to its original color. It makes the scalp white and clean. It cures dandruff and humors, and falling-out of the hair. It furnishes the nutritive principle by which the hair is nourished and supported. It makes the hair moist, soft and glossy, and is unsurpassed as a hair dressing. It is the most economical preparation ever offered to the public, as its effects remain a long time, making only an occasional application necessary. It is recommended and used by eminent medical men, and officially endorsed by the State Assayer of Massachusetts. The popularity of Hall's Hair Renewer has increased with the test of many years, both in this country and in foreign lands, and it is now known and used in all the civilized countries of the world. For sale by all dealers.

PUT AWAY THE LITTLE TORCHES.

The Boston Post talks this way:

Now at last the fight is ended,
  Let the land with peace be blest,
Let transparencies be rended:
  Give the bands a needed rest.
Take the names from flags now waving,
  They have had their little day.

Are your uniforms worth saving?
  Then let them be packed away.
Put the drums where none will take 'em;
  Hide the torch behind the door.
See that none can find and break 'em;
  Trot 'em out in '84.

Trust it Every Time.

A grateful patient, living under the shadows of the Highlands of the Hudson, writes to Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y.: "Your medicine recommends itself so thoroughly that you may hardly care for a statement from me, yet from my own experience of the excellence, and from what I know of its operation in other cases, I should like voluntarily to say that 'Kennedy's Favorite Remedy' deserves its high reputation. TESTIMONIALS:

"You ask me to favor you with my experience and impressions of Miss NELLIE F. BROWN. I seldom if ever yield to requests of this nature. I feel less hesitation in this instance because of Miss Brown's exceeding modesty and unpretentiousness, which are characteristic of genius.

I am informed that she never received instruction in the conventional school of elocution, which fact is greatly in her favor. In this she may be compared with Fanny Kemble and the late Charlotte Cushman, who were illustrious examples of what genius may attain without elocutionary training.

Miss Brown has appeared twice upon the "Star" Course in one season to the eminent satisfaction of vast audiences, and will appear again this coming season. This, I take it, is a sufficient endorsement.
Yours very truly,
T. B. PUGH,
Manager of "Star" Course, Phila."

St. Nicholas for 1881.

5000 For England, 100,000 For America.

St. Nicholas, the charming magazine for boys and girls, edited by Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge, has increased so much in size and number of pages during the year past that the publishers have been obliged to issue the yearly volume in two parts, instead of one as heretofore. As to its circulation, they report a gain of 10,000 in the average monthly editions of 1880 over 1879. The announcements for the coming year include a capital serial story for boys, full of exciting adventure, "In Nature's Wonderland," or, Adventures in the American Tropics; Stories of Art and Artists, by Mrs. Clara Erskine Clement, a faithful outline of the history of European Art, with many illustrations; "Phaeton Rogers," a delightful and humorous serial by Rossiter Johnson; "Mystery in a Mansion," a six months' serial; the Treasure-Box of Literature, directing and encouraging young people in the best reading; The Agassiz Association, fully explained in the November number; "Two English Queens," by Mrs. Oliphant; "The Land of Nod," a children's operetta, with music,—full of charming tableaux and effects; A series of beautifully illustrated Ballads for Young Folks, beginning with the Christmas number; A Special Budget of Fairy Stories by Frank R. Stockton—the first of which is in the November number; An Indian Story by "Bright Eyes," the Ponca Indian maiden; a splendid holiday story, "A Christmas with the Man in the Moon," by Washington Gladden. Open-air Papers, stories of sports, and games, will be continued, with all the popular departments.

Subscriptions beginning with the November issue will include "the wonderful Christmas number," of which the edition will be 5,000 in England and 100,000 in America. The price of this number, to be issued about November 20th, will be 30 cents.

Regular price $3.00 a year; 25 cents a number. For sale, and subscriptions received, by all dealers, or the publishers, Scribner & Co., 743 Broadway, New York.

A man was sawing wood in a back yard. He severed two sticks as thick as your wrist and then went into the house. "Mary," said he to his wife, "my country needs me;—there's no use of talking; we've just got to slaughter all those Injuns; no true patriot can be expected to hang around a woodpile these days." "John," said his wife, "if you fight Injuns as well as you saw wood and support your family, it would take one hundred and eighteen like you to capture one squaw, and you'd have to catch her when she had the ague and throw pepper in her eyes." John went back to the woodpile wondering who told his wife all about him.

A BEAUTIFUL VOLUME has come to our notice entitled Golden Thoughts on Mother, Home and Heaven. Edited by Theo. L. Cuyler, D. D. Our opinion of it is very cleverly expressed in the review given by The Detroit Christian Advocate:

"We scarcely can tell which is most attractive about this volume, itsparexcellent title, its 300 literary gems on the themes named, its brilliant array of distinguished writers, or its beautiful mechanical execution. It is a splendid book every way. A copy should be in every house, where every mother and every mother's friend can have access to it." Price $2.75. Agents are wanted by the Publisher, E. B. Treat, 757 Broadway, New York.

Investigation fails to reveal the cause of the accident at the Mountain View Powder Works at Passaic. Persons who witnessed the accident say that when it occurred one of the men who was killed was leaning on the window-sill looking out, and, of course, had nothing to do with the accident. The other man was out of sight, and they could not see what he was doing.

Patrick Duffy, convicted of murder in the second degree at Jersey City, for the killing of Morris Walsh, who, he alleged, had seduced his wife, was sentenced to the State Prison at hard labor for ten years.

In Clayton are a man and his wife who were born in the same house, rocked in the same cradle, and brought across the ocean, when young, in the same vessel.

Holman's PAD.

Cures without Medicine. Simply by Absorption,

TRADE MARK.

THE ONLY TRUE MALARIAL ANTIDOTE.

DR. HOLMAN'S PAD is no guess-work remedy—no feeble imitative experiment—no perloined hodge-podge of some other inventor's ideas; it is the original and only genuine curative Pad, the only remedy that has an honestly-acquired right to use the title word "Pad" in connection with a treatment for chronic diseases of the Stomach, Liver and Spleen.

By a recently perfected improvement, effected by the addition of vegetable ingredients of newly-discovered remedial value and absorptive adaptability, DR. HOLMAN has greatly increased the scope of the Pad's usefulness, and appreciably augmented its active curative power.

This great improvement gives HOLMAN'S PAD (with its Adjuvants) complete and unfailing control over the most persistent and unyielding forms of Chronic Disease of the Stomach and Liver, as well as Malarial Blood-poisoning.

HOLMAN'S PADS have cured—and are daily curing—diseases of so many kinds, that the list is well-nigh interminable. It includes Malarial Poison of every type, from Aching Bones and Low Fevers to Chills and Dumb Ague; Stomach Diseases, such as Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Sour Stomach, Chronic Diarrhea, Flatulency, Heartburn, &c., &c.; Liver Disorders, like Biliousness, Bilious-Colic, Dangerous Fevers, Sick Headache, Pains in the Side, Bilious-Fevers, Torpid Liver, &c., &c. Well does this mighty remedy justify the eminent Professor Loomis' high encomium: "IT IS NEARER A UNIVERSAL PANACEA THAN ANYTHING IN MEDICINE!"

The success of HOLMAN'S PADS has inspired imitators who offer Pads similar in form and odor to the genuine Holman Pad. Beware of these bogus and imitation Pads, gotten up only to sell on the reputation of the GENUINE Holman Pad.

Each genuine Holman Pad bears the Private Revenue Stamp of the HOLMAN PAD COMPANY, with the above Trade-Mark, printed in green.

FOR SALE BY ALL FIRST-CLASS DRUGGISTS, Or sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of $2.00.

"THE SATTERLEE"

"U. S. A. GENERAL HOSPITAL,"

West Philadelphia, where DR. DAVID KENNEDY was one of the Surgeons on Duty.

Dr. David Kennedy, for the past ten years an active practitioner of Medicine and Surgery in Rondout, N. Y., was one of the resident Surgeons of the above-named Hospital during the war. No doubt many of his former soldier-patients are still living and will be glad to recognize the name of the friend and surgeon of those early years in the proprietor of a medicine with which it has become associated. Dr. Kennedy performed hundreds of the most dangerous and difficult operations, and it's a simple fact that not one died, but all made splendid recoveries.

Dr. Kennedy is frank to confess now that his wonderful success was due to the fact that he gave his patients the medicine he now calls Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" in the after treatment. It was this that restored the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels to a healthy condition, affording tone and strength to the whole system, and thus enabled the sufferer to once more enjoy life and meet the loved ones at home. Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" for sale by all druggists. $1.00 a bottle.

How to Correct and Improve

YOUR  SIGHT

IMPROVEMENTS OF THE DAY.

One of these is found in KING'S PATENT COMBINATION SPECTACLES.

As the name indicates, they consist of a combination of silver and steel frames, the silver bridge making a more elegant, durable and flexible frame and enabling any dealer to adjust it to any face, so that the centre of the lens is in the direct line of vision, thus giving the greatest benefit possible to be derived from the use of spectacles.

It also enables anyone to adjust it themselves to the position where it best corrects the sight.

All persons buying the COMBINATION SPECTACLES have their eyes fitted by KING'S NEW SYSTEM, the method used by Professional Oculists and the only true means of accurately testing the vision.

THIS SYSTEM IS COPYRIGHTED, and can only be used by Mr. King's Agents, all of whom are instructed in its use.

The KING SPECTACLES are the first to merit over a million pair now being in daily use.

POETRY.

FANCY'S CHANCES.

Come, brothers, let us sing a dirge—
A dirge for myriad chances dead;
In grief your mournful accents merge—
Sing, sing the girls we might have wed.

Sweet lips were those we never pressed
In love that never lost the dew
In sunlight of a love confessed—
[illegible] were the girls we never knew.

Sing low, sing low, while in the glow
Of fancy's hour those forms we trace,
Hovering around the years that go—
Those years our lives can ne'er replace.

Sweet lips are those that never turn
A cruel word; dear eyes that lead
The heart on in a blithe concern;
White hand of her we did not wed.

Fair hair or dark, that falls along
A form that never shrinks with time—
Bright image of a realm of song
Standing beside our years of prime.

When you shall go, then may we know
The heart is dead, the man indeed;
Life can no other charm bestow
When girls we might have loved turn cold.

—ROSE HAWTHORNE LATHROP, in Harper's Magazine for December.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

HOW HE PUNISHED HIM.

There once lived in a certain neighborhood a roystering, rowdy, bully, called Jim Blander. Jim was "some" in a fight, a kind of pugilistic Napoleon. Many and bloody were the affairs he had had in his time, and he had invariably come off first best. Jim not only considered himself invulnerable, but all the fighting characters in the surrounding country conceded it was no use fighting Jim, as he was considered to be a patent thrashing machine that could not be improved on. In Jim's neighborhood was settled quite a number of Quakers. From some cause or other Jim hated the "shad-bellies," as he called them, with his entire heart—he often declared that to whip one of these inoffensive people would be the crowning glory of his life. For years Jim waited for a pretext. At last the longing desire of his soul was to be gratified. One of Jim's chums heard a "young" Quaker speak in disparaging terms of him. This report soon came to Jim's ears, not a little magnified. Jim made desperate threats of what he was going to do with Nathan, the meek follower of Penn, on sight—besides various bruises and contusions he meant to inflict on Nathan's body. In his chaste language, he meant to gouge out both his eyes and chaw off both his ears.

Nathan heard of Jim's threats, and very properly kept out of his way, hoping that time would modify Jim's anger. It seems, however, this much desired result did not take place. One day friend Nathan was out riding, and in passing through a long lane when midway, he espied Jim entering the other end. Nathan might have turned and fled, but his flesh rebelled against this proceeding.

"I will pursue my way peaceably," said the Quaker, "and I hope the better sense of the man of wrath will not permit him to molest me, or allow him to do violence to my person."

Nathan's calculations as to to the lamb-like qualities of his adversary were doomed to be disappointed.

"Oh, ho!" thought the bully, as he recognized Nathan; "I have him at last. Now I'll make mince meat of Shad-belly. I will salt him and pickle him too."

"Wilt thou please dismount from thy horse," said Jim, seizing the bridle of Nathan's horse, and mimicking his style; "my soul yearneth to give you the darndest mauling ever a man received."

"Friend James," replied Nathan, "thou must not molest me, but let me go my way quietly—let me pass on."

"Get down," persisted Jim, "down with you; I want to beat some of your darned religion out of you—I must give you a d—l of a flogging before I leave you. I think by the time I am through with you, you will pass for a tolerably honest man; I will teach you, in a short and easy lesson, the importance of minding your own affairs and the risk you run in slandering your neighbors."

"I will not dismount," said Nathan, firmly; loosen thy hold from the bridle.

"You won't, won't you?" said Jim, "then here goes," and he made a desperate lunge to collar the Quaker.

Nathan was on his feet in an instant on the other side of the horse. The Quaker, although of much smaller proportions than his prosecutor, was all sinew and muscle, and his well knit form denoted both activity and strength. His wrath was evidently enkindled.

"Friend James," he implored, "thy pertinacious perseverance in prosecuting me is exceedingly annoying; thou must desist, or peradventure I may so far forget myself that I may do thee some bodily harm."

"By snakes!" said Jim, coming toward Nathan, "I believe there is enough fight in 'Broad-brim' to make the affair interesting. I wish some of the boys were here to see the fun. Now," continued Jim, "friend Nathan, I'm going to knock off the end of your nose—look out!"

Suiting the action to the word, Jim, after various pugilistic gyrations with his fists, made a scientific blow at the nasal formation of our Quaker friend, but Tom Hyer couldn't more scientifically have warded it off. Jim was evidently disconcerted at the ill success of his first attempt—he saw he had undertaken quite as much as he was likely to accomplish. Jim, however, straightened himself out, and approached Nathan more cautiously. The contest began again. Nathan stood his ground firmly, and warded off the shower of blows skillfully which Jim aimed at him.

"Friend James," said Nathan, in the midst of the contest, "this is mere child's play. It grieves me that thou hast forced me into resistance; but I must defend myself from bodily harm. I see that there is but one way to bring this scandalous and wicked affair to a close, and that is by conquering thee; in order to do this I will inflict a heavy blow between thine eyes, which will prostrate thee."

Following out his suggestion, Nathan at once struck Jim a tremendous blow on his forehead, which brought him senseless to the ground.

"Now," said Nathan, "I will teach thee a lesson, and I hope it will be a wholesome lesson, too. I will seat myself astraddle of thy breast—I will place my knees upon thy arms, thus, so that thou canst not injure me when thou returnest to consciousness. I hope I may be the humble instrument of taming thy fierce, warlike nature, and making a better and more peaceable man of thee."

As the Quaker concluded Jim began to show some returning signs of life. The first impulse of Jim when he saw his condition was to turn Nathan off. He struggled desperately, but he was in a vice—his efforts were unavailing.

"Friend thou must keep still until I am done with thee," said Nathan. "I believe I am the humble instrument in the hands of Providence to chastise thee, and I trust when I am done with thee, thou will be a changed man. Friend James, dost thou not repent attacking me?"

"No by G—!" cried Jim; "let me up and I'll show you."

"I will not let thee up, thou impious wretch!" replied Nathan; "darest thou to profane the name of the Maker? I will punish thee for that—I will check thy respiration for a moment."

Nathan, as good as his word, clutched Jim by the throat. He compressed his grip, a gurgling sound could be heard, Jim's face became distorted, a tremor ran through his frame. He was evidently undergoing a process of strangulation. The Quaker relaxed his hold, but not until the choking process had sufficiently as he thought, tamed the perverse spirit of Jim. It took some moments for Jim to inhale sufficient air to address the quaker.

"I will knock under said Jim; "enough! let me up."

"No, thou hast not got half enough," replied Nathan. "Thou art now undergoing a process of moral purification, and thou layest until I am done with thee. Thou has just profaned the name of thy Maker, friend James, continued Nathan, "confess, dost thou repent thy wickedness?"

"No, darned if I do," growled Jim.

"Wilt thou not," replied the Quaker, "must I use compulsory means? I will compress thy windpipe again unless thou givest me an answer in the affirmative—say quick, art thou sorry?"

"No, I—y-e-s!" shrieked Jim, in a gurgling tone, as the Quaker's grip tightened, "yes, I am sorry."

"Is thy sorrow a Godly sorrow?" inquired Nathan.

Jim rather demurred to giving an affirmative answer to this question, but a gentle squeeze admonished him that he had better yield.

"Yes," replied Jim, "my sorrow is a Godly sorrow."

"A Godly sorrow leadeth to repentance," replied Nathan; "we are progressing finely. Thou said but just now," he continued, "that I was a canting, lying, cowardly, mischief-making hypocrite. Thou wronged me in asserting those things, and slandered my persuasion. Dost thou recall these assertions?"

"Yes," replied Jim, "I do; now let me up."

"I am not done with thee yet," replied Nathan. "Thou hast been a disturber of the peace of this neighborhood—thy hand raised at every man; thou art a brawler. Wilt thou promise me that, in future, thou wilt lead a more peaceable life, and that thou wilt love thy neighbor as thy self?"

"Yes," said Jim, hesitatingly, all but the Quakers."

"Thou must make no exception," replied Nathan; "I insist on an affirmative answer."

"I'll be darned," said Jim, "if I say yes to that—I'll die first."

A struggle now ensued between the two, but Jim had his match.

"Thou must yield, James," said Nathan "I insist upon it," and he again grasped Jim by the throat. "I will choke thee into submission; thou must answer affirmatively—say after me, 'I promise to love my neighbor as myself, including the Quakers.'"

"I won't promise that," said Jim, "I'll be cursed if I do."

"I will check thy respiration if thou do not," replied Nathan.

"No I won't; I'll be blasted if I do!" answered Jim.

"Thee had better give in," replied Nathan, "I will choke thee again if thou dost not—see my grip tightens."

And Nathan did tighten his grip, and the choking process went on. Jim's face first became distorted, then purple—his tongue lolled out, and his eyes protruded from their sockets—his body writhed like a dying man's. Nathan persisted in holding his grip until Jim became entirely passive, he then relaxed his hold. Jim was slow in recovering his speech and his senses; when he did he begged Nathan, for mercy's sake to release him.

"When thee will make the promise I exact from thee I will release thee, but not sooner," replied Nathan.

Jim saw he was powerless, and that the Quaker was resolute. He felt it was no use to persist in his stubbornness.

"I will give in," he replyed, "I will promise to love my neighbors as myself."

"Including the Quaker," insinuated Nathan.

"Yes, including the Quakers," replied Jim.

"Thou mayest arise then, friend James," answered Nathan, "and I trust the lesson thou has this day learned will make a more, peaceable citizen of thee, and I hope, a better man.

Poor Jim was completely humbled; he left the field with his spirits completely cowed. Not long after this occurrence the story became bruited about. This was more than Jim could bear. He soon left the scene of his many triumphs and his late disastrous defeat, and emigrated to the "Far West." The last I heard of him, he was preparing to make another move. Being pressed for his reason why he again emigrated, he said a colony of Quakers was about moving into his neighborhood. He was under an obligation to love them, but he was of the opinion that distance would lend strength to his attachment.

A FATHER WHO MELTED.

The other evening a citizen of Detroit beckoned to his twelve-year old son to follow him to the woodshed, and when they had arrived there he began;

"Now young man, you've been fighting again! How many times have I told you that it is disgraceful to fight?"

"Oh, father, this wasn't about marbles or anything of the kind," replied the boy.

"I can't help it. As a Christian man it is my duty to bring up my children to fear the Lord. Take off your coat."

"But, father, the boy I was fighting with called me names."

"Can't help it. Calling names don't hurt any one. Off with that coat!"

"He said I was the son of a wire puller."

"What! what's that?"

"And he said you was an office hunter."

"What! What loafer dared make that assertion?"

"It made me awful mad, but I didn't say anything. Then he called you a hireling."

"Called me a hireling? Why, I'd like to get my hands on him?" puffed the old gent.

"Yes, and he said you was a political lick-spittle!"

"Land o' gracious! but wouldn't I like to have the training of that boy for about five minutes!" wheezed the old man, as he hopped around.

"I put up with that," continued the boy, "and then he said you laid your pipes for office and got left by a large majority. I couldn't stand that, father, and so I sailed over the fence and licked him bald headed in less'n two minutes! Thrash me if you must father, but I couldn't stand it to hear you abused by one of the malignant opposition!"

"My son," said the father, as he felt for half a dollar with one hand and wiped his eyes with the other, "you may go out and buy you two pounds of candy. The Bible says it is wrong to fight, but the Bible must make allowance for political campaigns and the vile slanders of the other party. I only brought you out here to talk to you, and now you can put on your coat and run along."—Free Press.

DO GOOD WORK.

The path to fame by honest merit is a slow and tedious one. A manufacturer who is so careful about his products that he has to put a higher price on them than his less-conscientious neighbor can sell for, may be repaid at first by small sales and smaller profits. It takes a long time to build up a reputation by excellence, but once acquired it is like the pearl of great price.

It is much the same with the workman as with the manufacturer. If every stroke he strikes is solid work; conscientiously performed, he will acquire a reputation, limited as it may be, that is sure to pay in the end. We would not conceal or deny the fact that some men labor under peculiar disadvantages. All men are not born equal, either mentally or physically. One is naturally skillful in one direction, another is expert in many things. One man may do his level best, and yet he will not turn out as good a piece of work as his more skillful brother who only half tries. Let him not be discouraged because he is handicapped in the race, and may not be able to reach the top of the ladder. There is room for honest workmen everywhere; even respectable mediocrity pays better than brilliancy coupled with trickery.

The native American is distinguished by his ingenuity and with half a chance he makes his mark everywhere. Yet he sometimes loses the race in competition with less-able men of other lands, because their careful training and early drill in their profession, there long and severe apprenticeship, has more than compensated for the want of natural tact and ingenuity.

Perseverance will not conquer all things, but it goes a long way toward success. While luck seems to favor the few, most men have to carve out their own success by hard labor, in which a full determination to do everything to the very best of one's ability counts for more than is generally supposed. Above all things don't waste time in regretting that another trade was not chosen. If it is an honest one, stick to it and it will pay.—Scientific American.

A CORD OF WOOD, MORE OR LESS.

An innocent, hard-working man yesterday [illegible] a situation which he had held for [illegible], and which he believed secure for [illegible] another year to come, and if this [illegible] the eye of his late employer perhaps the man will be taken back. As soon as the [illegible] had gone the citizen borrowed a [illegible] of a cord of the same sort of [illegible] of a neighbor and added to his pile [illegible] then rode down to the wharf and [illegible]:

"[illegible] Blank, I see you have delivered [illegible] wood."

"Yes, sir—yes, sir—we always deliver [illegible] earliest moment," was the reply.

"How much did you send?"

"A cord, sir—a full cord. We never [illegible] on measure."

"But I am not satisfied with it."

"Can't help that, sir; I sent a cord. I [illegible] it loaded myself."

"I've measured it and—"

"Can't help your measure. There's a [illegible] of wood there."

"I was going to say—"

"Can't help what you were going to say. [illegible] been in the wood business too long to make any mistake."

"I was going to say there is over a [illegible]."

"Over a cord? Ah! that's a different thing. That needs looking into. Get into my buggy and we'll drive up and measure it. I am glad to find one honest [illegible] in Detroit."

The pile overran a quarter of a cord, [illegible] to the dealer's amazement. When [illegible] of the fact he could only scratch his head and say:

"Never heard of the like before—never, and I've been in the business a long [illegible]."

Within five minutes of his return to the [illegible] one of the drivers had his balance of wages and was walking off with the [illegible]:

"How dat seben-eights of a cord got swelled up dat way am mo' dan I kin see into, an' Ise got to go bar'footed this Winter to pay for it!"

A DIREFUL DISEASE.

One of the South Lawrence census enumerators, says the Eagle, stopped at a [illegible] the other day where, from the front door knob, hung a fold of crape, showing that the grim messenger had called and summoned a soul to the far beyond. Had he not been a Government employee he would have shrinked his duty in this instance, but with the due respect for the relatives of the departed dead one, he stepped lightly to the rear door, rapped and was admitted. He found there, seated in a chair, with his head bowed down, in [illegible], an aged man. After stating his business he asked the necessary questions, which were readily answered. Finally he inquired who was dead.

"My wife, sir," sorrowfully replied the old man.

"What did she die of?" was the next question.

"Of what?" again asked the enumerator, who thought the man did not fully understand his question.

"Of improvements," was the reply.

"Of improvements, sir, of improvements," again was the reply, more emphatic than before.

"How could that be," asked the enumerator, his curiosity now thoroughly aroused.

"Well," said the man slowly and thoughtfully, "the doctor came Monday night and said she was improving, he came Tuesday morning and said she was improving. Tuesday night he came and told me she was improving, he came Wednesday morning and she was dead. Yes," continued the old man, "she died of improvements."

The enumerator did not press his question further.

NOT IF IT WERE MY BOY.

Some years ago the late Horace Mann, the eminent educator, delivered an address at the opening of some reformatory institution for boys, during which he remarked that if any one boy was saved from ruin, it would pay for all the cost and care and labor of establishing such an institution as that. After the exercises had closed, in private conversation, a gentleman rallied Mr. Mann upon his statement and said to him:

"Did you not color that a little, when you said that all the expense and labor would be repaid if it only saved one boy?"

"Not if that were my boy," was the solemn and convincing reply.

Ah! there is a wonderful value about "my boy." Other boys may seem to require more pains and labor than they will ever repay; other boys may be left to drift uncared for to their ruin, which [illegible] near at hand—but "my boy"—it is worth the toil of a life time, and the lavish wealth of a world to save him from trial, and would bless every hand that was stretched out to give him help and welcome. And yet every poor, wandering outcast, homeless man, is and was some fond mother called "my boy." Every lost woman sunken in the depths of sin, was somebody's daughter in her days of childish innocence. To-day, somebody's son is a hungry outcast, [illegible] to the very verge of crime and sin. To-day, somebody's daughter is a weary, helpless wanderer, driven by necessity into paths that lead to death. Shall we shrink from labor, shall we hesitate at cost when the work before us is the salvation of a soul? Not if it is "my boy," not if we have the love of Him who gave His life to save the lost.

THANKSGIVING.

The day annually set apart by Executive appointment for the rendering of thanks to the Supreme Ruler of the Universe for the countless blessings we as a people are permitted to enjoy, has again arrived.

It is a day deserving of grateful observance, for never before did the American people have greater cause for thankfulness than at the present time.

Abundant harvests of all kinds have blessed the tillers of the soil and augmented national wealth; after long depression industry is again assuming wonted activity and reaping just reward; our land has been unscourged by pestilence, and throughout its wide limits peace and plenty reign.

Truly are we in duty bound to ascribe heart-felt thanks unto Him who is the author and dispenser of every temporal good, and with them should be blended the poetic aspiration:—

"For the hidden word o'er-written
With one dear name adored;
For the heavenly in the human—
The spirit in the word;
For the tokens of Thy presence
Within, above, abroad;
For Thine own great gift of being,
We thank Thee, oh, our God!"

DEMOCRACY.

Some deluded Republicans think the Democratic party is dead

It is the liveliest corpse ever known, as time will make manifest and cause them to hear and feel.

Democracy will never die.

All the Grants, Conklings, Garfields, Arthurs, Blaines, Logans, Camerons, Beechers, Ingersolls and Davenports on the face of earth cannot even wound the Democratic party.

It is stronger to-day than it was a month ago.

A party that, in spite of the combined power of falsity and corruption without, and of treachery within, on the second day of November came so near defeating 100,000 desperate office-holders and a like number of office-seekers, all backed by millionaire monopolists and the whole Treasury of the United States, cannot be killed.

The thing is impossible.

The Democratic party will fight on for the People and Victory.

The Constitution, the Union and Freedom are its rallying cries.

The Republic, as originally founded, must and shall be preserved by Democracy.

The principles of Jefferson are immortal.

AN OMEN.

At a meeting of the Republican Central Committee, held in New York last week, the following resolution was introduced:

"Resolved, That in the opinion of this Committee, steps should be taken by our Representatives in Congress to so amend the Constitution of the United States as to provide that the Presidents and Vice Presidents on their retirement from office shall be admitted to life membership of the Senate."

That clearly shows the aristocratic tendency of partisan Republicanism, and fore-shadows a design to cause radical and fatal changes in our wisely established system of representative government.

Senators for life!

Such was the theory of Hamiltonian Federalism, and such was carried into effect by Louis Napoleon, the perjured Emperor of the French.

It is imperialism.

Down with it!

Senators without constituencies!

Which would at once destroy the life preserving power of State equality and independence.

Crush Imperialism in the bud!

Monarchy was the cherished idea of some in this country eighty years ago.

An Empire or dictatorship is the living purpose of others now.

It becomes freemen to watchfully guard the Republic.

TARIFFANIA.

In New Jersey and Connecticut, to an especial extent, the tariff question was artfully used by Republican leaders to influence workingmen against voting for the candidates of their choice, Hancock and English.

They were told, and legions of them foolishly believed the prepared falsehood, that the success of the Democratic party meant destruction to all industrial pursuits, because a tariff for revenue was in reality free trade.

It was a story framed to deceive, as none knew better than its partisan authors that the raising of tariff revenue to meet the wants of government would necessitate the levying of duties amply sufficient to protect every legitimate interest, and besides, they were fully aware that the present tariff needed thorough revision.

Vote for Garfield and a high protective tariff or be ruined, was the Republican cry.

Thousands of Democrats were caught in the trap, and the incubus of Republican misrule is again fastened upon the country.

Among the Garfield journals that favored any and every political dodge to defeat General Hancock was the New York Graphic. Now the election is over and false issues have triumphed, that paper thus speaks:

"It was three consecutive good harvests mainly which brought resumption and made the good times—not the Republican party or a protective tariff, and thousands of citizens who voted for Garfield and Arthur know it. Thousands of consumers throughout the United States feel that a war tariff is being imposed in peace times, and, while not desiring free trade, they do feel that the tariff ought to be lowered and simplified. At present it gives a few manufacturers exorbitant profits and makes the general public pay for it. It is all very well to talk about high wages for American artisans, but nothing is said about the high cost of living which a high tariff necessitates, and a decent regard for the interest of the agricultural and general consuming classes would seem to dictate a lowering of the tariff as well as simplifying its present intricate and onerous provisions."

Why did not the Graphic utter such sentiments before the election?

It furnishes additional evidence of the unprincipled means adopted by the Republican managers to perpetuate power.

Truth will yet prevail, and the victims of deception have just revenge.

* * *

Public opinion is decidedly adverse to the newly invented idea of one Council discounting the financial wants of another.

* * *

It is an easy thing to talk about knocking away mill dams and "damning the expense." There is law in New Jersey and very unpleasant judgments are apt to issue from her Courts. Go slowly and surely, gentlemen! Pay as you go and mind where you tread!

* * *

Beware of debt liabilities and legal damages against the City! Look sharp for whom you vote!

* * *

We learn there is a private speculation on foot to introduce water into Plainfield, provided the right kind of Mayor and Common Council can be secured. How far the City may become involved or held liable we cannot say. Mind for whom you vote. Safety counsels care.

* * *

We understand that the controversy among Republican seekers after the Mayoralty nomination is warmly personal and daily growing hotter. If the water in Sylvan Lake could only be discharged, what a splendid opportunity that locality would afford for political brethren to throw genuine mud at each other? The Board of Health might then resign, and Plainfield's Doctors emigrate en masse.

* * *

Before voting for an extra tax assessment of $5,000, it would be wise for every citizen to ascertain, if he can, the precise purpose for which the money is demanded. The Common Council is ordering the election strangely withheld from the people proper information. An increase of fifty per cent in City taxation is not a trivial matter. It requires thorough ventilation. Probe it to the very bottom, Tax-payers!

COL. FORNEY A DEMOCRAT.

Col. John W. Forney cheerfully expresses himself upon the result of the election to a Philadelphia Times reporter: "I do not feel at all depressed. My support of Gen. Hancock was entirely disinterested, and I regard his defeat as very unfortunate for the country. As I was not an office-holder and did not expect any honors I am not personally disappointed. The cause of the defeat I attribute to one thing—money. The capital of the country has arrayed itself against labor, and if the capitalists can stand it I am sure we can. The country has trampled upon a pure, grand man, and elevated a man who is known to be a great rascal. Garfield's election means the empire—the empire of money, a local aristocracy. It means also, I think, the re-election of Gen. Grant in 1884. I shall part with reluctance from Gen. Grant, but I mean to back up the Democratic party in the future. I shall at once advise them to recognize and meet the Republicans at every step. The Democratic party is bound to obtain control eventually, although I may not live to see the day. I look down from this window on the people who are shouting themselves hoarse over Garfield, and simply pity them, for what would their lives have been worth in 1863 but for the man who they are decrying and ridiculing, and whom they succeeded in defeating?"

THE NEXT NEW STATE.

It is not improbable that the next Congress will erect a Territory of Dakota into a new State. It is one of the noblest parts of the American domain, and is destined to be one of the greatest and most prosperous States in the Union. It contains now nearly 150,000 inhabitants, or more than the ratio of population under the present apportionment of representation. But the tide of emigration to that State is not only large but continuous. There are at present five railroads extending their lines westward across the Territory, and all will within a few months have their tracks laid to the Missouri river. The climate and the soil are similar in all respects to that of Minnesota, and the coming Spring will witness the settlement there of whole swarms of emigrants from the Eastern States, from Canada, and from Europe.

The present Territory is too large for a single State. It contains somewhere in the neighborhood of 200,000 square miles of land, or nearly five times as much as Illinois. The plan is, we believe, to form a state by drawing a line through it from east to west, and continuing the northern and less populous half under the Territorial Government. It is confidently expected that, before the preliminary proceedings of forming a State Government can be concluded, the new State will have all the population entitling it to a Representative in Congress, even under the new apportionment necessary under the census of 1880.—Trenton State Gazette.

* * *

The Presidential Electors will meet at their several State Capitols and cast their votes for President and Vice-President on the first Wednesday in December. Congress is directed by law to open and count these votes on the second Wednesday of February, and to declare the result.

The Pension Report shows that on the 30th of June last there were 250,802 persons receiving pensions from the Government, the list being composed of army and navy invalids, widows, minor children, etc., surviving soldiers and sailors of the war of 1812 and widows from that war. During the past year 8,940 names were added to the list, and 19,545 new pensions allowed. $37,046,185.80 were paid in pensions during the year, and including the arrears the total amount paid was $57,026,904.12. The commissioner estimates that it will require upward of $50,000,000 to pay the pensions for the current year.

The New Jersey Official Canvass.

The Board of State Canvassers met at Trenton, Tuesday afternoon last, at 2 o'clock, Gov. McClellan in the chair. A good deal of time was spent in correcting the errors between the township and the county returns. In Cape May County the clerk of the election in Lower Township had made an error in putting 156 votes cast for Governor to the credit of the Democratic candidate for Congress, Mr. Joseph Carter. Mr. Ludlow was credited with the vote cast for Congressman. A letter was read from all the election officers in Cape May showing that this was an error and submitting a supplemental return correcting it. A resolution was offered to give the vote in Lower Township the full force and effect intended by the voters. This was opposed by E. C. Pitney, of Morris, and S. H. Grey, of Camden, and advocated by Judge Rankin, of Hudson, who appeared for the citizens. The resolution was adopted and the vote counted. A protest was filed against this action for the reason that it was beyond the legal power of the board to correct the return. The vote for Governor was then canvassed. The total vote for electors was announced to be—Democratic, 122,565; Republican, 120,555; Greenback, 2,617; Temperance, 191; Democratic plurality, 2,010.

The total vote for Governor was announced to be: Ludlow, D., 121,666; Potts, R., 121,015; Hoxsey, Gr., 2,759; [illegible], Temperance, 196. Ludlow over Potts, 651.

The telegraph announces the death of Governor Williams, of Indiana. This event, the result of a severe attack of malarial fever, complicated with other diseases aggravated by it, closes a remarkable career. He was of Scotish descent, and was born in Ohio in 1809. His full name was James Douglass Williams, but he was popularly known as "Blue Jeans Williams." His public life began in 1839, when he was elected a Justice of the Peace. Subsequently he was successively elected to the State Assembly, the Senate, to Congress, and in 1876 he was elected Governor, after a severe contest, by about 5000 majority. Governor Williams was a man of peculiar appearance, being six feet four inches in height, and yet so thin that he weighed only 170 pounds. He settled in early life on a quarter-section in Indiana, and at his death he had two thousand acres in full cultivation. He was married many years and leaves several children, his wife having died a short time since. He was a man of private and public integrity, he served his State well in every capacity, and he leaves a memory respected by every one.

A Fine Thing for the Teeth.

Fragrant SOZODONT is a composition of the purest and choicest ingredients of the Oriental vegetable kingdom. Every ingredient is well known to have a beneficial effect on the teeth and gums. Its embalming or antiseptic property and aromatic fragrance makes it a toilet luxury. SOZODONT removes all disagreeable odors from the breath caused by catarrh, bad teeth, &c. It is entirely free from the injurious and acrid properties of tooth pastes and powders which destroy the enamel. One bottle lasts six months.

LOCAL DEPARTMENT.

Largest Circulation of any Weekly Paper in Union County.

Democratic Executive Committee.

The members of the Democratic Executive Committee of this city, are requested to meet at their headquarters, Saturday evening, Nov. 27th, at 8 o'clock. Business of importance.

By Order of The Chairman.

Get out your furs!

Skates at Vanderbeek's.

Who will win "Young Jersey."

The ice men and small boy are happy.

Raffling for turkeys is now in order.

Advertise your holiday goods in The Constitutionalist.

There was a thunder storm at Long Branch on Sunday evening.

It is said that we are to have 74 snows, large and small, this Winter.

Another local option bill will be presented in the Legislature this Winter.

Overcoats are in demand. Read the Clothier's advertisements in these columns.

Now that election is over with, we hope to hear more frequently from our correspondents.

A visit to our public schools will always be hailed with joy both by teacher and scholar.

The ice is about three inches thick on the ponds, and the small boy is skating over the same.

Thanks to ticket agent Gibson, at the depot, for favor received in the way of time table card.

The evenings are getting decidedly lengthy. Good books and newspapers are now in order.

Lovers during the Summer and Fall had a gate time of it; now it will be a grate time for them.

Mince pies are a little backward this year, and great fears are entertained that early frosts have injured the vines.

This is a good season of the year to begin practicing upon the almost "lost art" of shutting the door after you.

Robert G. Miller, indicted for embezzlement at New Brunswick, has made application to the Court for a bill of particulars.

State Superintendent Apgar will commence the holding of Teachers' Institutes in the several counties of the State next month.

Lewis A. Dunham has been appointed Deputy Collector of New Brunswick as a compromise of the difficulties in which that city is involved.

We see occasionally horses tied to trees. This is a bad practice. A horse can in a few minutes kill or ruin a tree which it will take years to replace.

There is public school property in New Jersey amounting to $6,500,000, and about $1,900,000 is expended annually for the support of the schools.

Now is the time to remove weeds, leaves and any vegetation blighted by frost from your gardens, and filth of all kinds from your cellars and premises.

Christmas comes on Saturday this year—some distance off still, but then it is interesting to know that our principal holidays this year fall on Saturday and Sunday.

The Rev. George M. S. Blauvelt, of Tappantown, N. Y., will occupy the pulpit of the Trinity Reformed Church, next Sabbath morning and evening. All are cordially invited.

The Rev. A. V. V. Raymond, of Paterson, N. J., preached two able sermons in the Trinity Reformed Church last Sabbath morning and evening. His discourses were highly appreciated by those present.

The "Jolly Three" will hold a Grand Hop at Laing's Hall, the evening of Dec. 3d. Neat invitations have already been issued, and an enjoyable occasion is sure to be the result, as the affair is in the hands of a competent and gentlemanly committee.

It is expected that a large crowd will be present Thanksgiving morning to witness the shooting match in North Plainfield, near Blatz's Hotel, for the celebrated stallion, "Young Jersey." Pigeons and glass balls will be furnished also to those desiring to shoot at same.

Vennor, the weather prophet, is at it again and predicts that the "latter part of December, January and March will give us the most snow, and December and January the greatest cold. February looks warm and snow may rapidly disappear during that month. An early Spring. Ice crop good."

Poor Sewell, how the "crackers" go for him on the U. S. Senatorship. Nevertheless, we would not be surprised if William got the nomination, after all. He is more fit for the position than some persons the "crackers" want to see get it. Nevertheless again, it's none of our affair who has the position.

The "Morris Guards" will receive the "Halsey Guards" of Newark, at the depot Thanksgiving morning, and escort them to the target ground in this city, where handsome prizes will be competed for at target practice, after which the "Morris Guards" will entertain their guests at the Wigwam, where a handsome collation will be served.

Business men should not be afraid to spend a few dollars in advertising their Fall and Winter stock. You cannot expect to do a large business by simply buying a good stock and sitting down behind the counters and waiting for customers to come along. Advertise! Show up through the columns of your home paper what you have in store. The small investment necessary to do this will pay you every time.

All persons identified with or interested in the Relief Association, are invited to meet in the Parlor of the Crescent ave. Church Tuesday, 30th inst., at 3 o'clock p. m. The purpose of the meeting, is for general conference in reference to the best methods of promoting and conducting the best interests of the Association.

By order of the Board.
Mrs. H. D. Burlingham,
Secretary.

The "Chatauqua" building, in which is located The Constitutionalist office, is heated by steam throughout from the boiler in the engine room of our quarters. Mr. John N. Schenck, machinist, who put in the boiler and pipes, made a good job of it, and is known as a most competent mechanic. He has ingeniously contrived to heat his own dwelling house by steam from a small boiler of his own construction, the water in which has been the means of generating steam without change for 35 days up to last Tuesday. Parties in need of the services of a competent machinist will do well to call upon Mr. Schenck at his shops in North Plainfield.

The new holiday book; Mother, Home, and Heaven, Edited by Rev. Theo. L. Cuyler, D. D. From an examination of its merits we heartily endorse the sentiment of Wm. M. Taylor, D. D., Pastor of Broadway Tabernacle, expressed in a personal letter to the Publisher, E. B. Treat, 757 Broadway, New York:

"This book is as valuable in its contents as it is beautiful in its external appearance. There is something here for almost every experience, and the lessons for earth are all made to point towards the rewards of heaven. The book, as a whole, is worthy of all acceptation, and is especially timely in an age when the glory of the home is so frequently forgotten in the glitter of what is called society."

Price $2.75. Teachers, Ladies and Agents are wanted to introduce it.

The Republican primary meeting for the selection of candidates for city officers, will be held in Vandeventer Hall next Monday evening. It is expected that there will be interesting exercises on the occasion. None but Republicans will be allowed to participate. It is their pudding, and the Democrats propose to let them eat it. The chief plum in the feast is the Mayoralty. Who will get it is a question. The candidates are numerous, we might say, very numerous. It is gravely asserted by "great heads" outside the "Ring," that a "dark horse" will carry off the honor. Candidates for Council are also numerous. The Prohibitionist, the anti-saloon-licenser, the health, (?) water, sewer and non-committal candidates are all in the field. Whoever is nominated, however, is expected to be supported by the "party." It would never do to give the political minority a chance to govern the affairs of the city. Oh! no! They would give the Street Commissionership, or a policemanship to some rebel brigadier. Keep 'em out, they say. Well, we guess the Democracy are not hankering after any of the positions. The Republicans have the rule. But then it is fun to sit on the fence and watch the row and note the uneasy glances cast toward the Democrats by aspiring office seekers, wondering how "those fellows on the fence will vote on 'lection day." It's hard to tell.

Read White's advertisement in another column.

The new color called moonbeam is a soft silver green.

The nights furnish us "cold, frosty weather," if the days do not.

All papers directed to foreign countries can now be sent for one cent.

Governor George C. Ludlow of New Jersey. How do you like the name.

Now is the time to have your sleighs done up, and L. M. French is the man to do it.

Remember the Bazaar in the Park Avenue Baptist Church the evenings of Dec. 1st, 2d and 3d. Many novelties.

The members of the Democratic City Executive Committee are requested to meet at headquarters on Saturday evening, Nov. 27th at 8 o'clock, "sharp."

Henry Baker has been appointed by the Grand Patriarch as D. D. G. P., over the Encampments in New Brunswick, Perth Amboy, Jamesburgh and this city.

Another attempt will be made this Winter to have the Legislature create the office of State Insurance Commissioner, at present vested with numerous other offices in the Secretary of State.

An effort will be made to secure a law from the next Legislature which shall make all directors of savings and other financial institutions wherein deposits are made responsible for all losses by defalcation.

The employees of the Celluloid Brush and Comb Factory of Newark, will visit this city on a target excursion to-day (Thanksgiving). They will shoot for prizes in North Plainfield and dine at Miller's Hotel.

The messenger boys of the Western Union Telegraph Company at the station in this city, are proud and happy over new frontispieces for their hats presented to them by the company. They are faithful employees.

The best clam chowder in the city is now to be obtained every morning (except Sundays) at Smith's Lager Beer Saloon, on Front street, next to corner of Somerset. Fresh beer, of the best brewing is dispensed at "Smithy's."

The performance of the "Two Orphans" by Clark's Opera Troupe, in Vandeventer Hall, last Monday evening, failed to bring together the large audience that the performance deserved. The actors all did credit to their several parts in the play.

The opening entertainment of the Y. M. C. A. Course for 1880-81 will be held in the M. E. church to-night (Thursday) when the celebrated Mendelssohn Quintette Club will be present, assisted by the talented Soprano, Miss Marie Nellini. Go hear her.

The new edifice of the Park Avenue Baptist Church congregation of this city, was formally dedicated last Tuesday afternoon, the dedication sermon being delivered by Rev. W. W. Everts, D. D. The ceremonies were very interesting and the attendance large.

The anniversary of The Children's Home will occur at the Crescent avenue, Presbyterian church, Thursday evening, Dec. 2d. Rev. H. M. Gallagher, formerly of Elizabeth, will deliver an address. The singing will be rendered by the infant class of the Sunday school.

Lilienstern, the clothier, sends a change of advertisement too late for this week's issue, in which he calls special attention to his stock of overcoats for men, youth's and boy's wear, in which he states that he cannot be undersold, and that his stock is large and complete.

For attempted bulldozing, give us Cape May County. There they were so anxious about the election of Congressman that the officials gave the Governor's vote (Ludlow) to Carter, who was running for Congress, and then the Rep. members of the State Canvassing Board wanted the vote to stand as sent in.

The present cold wave, it is said, comes to us from Minnesota, and, barring the temporary discomfort caused by its somewhat unexpected arrival, brings a good deal of life and animation with it, for the keen air quickens the blood, conduces to outdoor exercise, and brings the roses to cheeks that have been pale.

The Plainfield Turn Vereine had an enjoyable time at Blatz's Hall, North Plainfield last Monday evening. After exercises in gymnastics, dancing was indulged in until the small hours of morning. The occasion was a really enjoyable one, and "the Committees concerned in its management are deserving of praise.

To-night (Thursday) at Van Deventer Hall, Slavin's Combination Troupe will give one of their first-class entertainments. All who desire a good laugh and wish to enjoy an evening of genuine entertainment should not miss this opportunity. The troupe is first-class and deserve a full house to witness their performance.

A special sermon to the merchants, clerks, mechanics and laboring men of our city, will be preached next Sunday evening by Rev. Thos. H. Stockton, pastor of the M. E. church. The subject to be presented will be "Life Insurance." Middle-aged married men, young married men and all young men who expect to be married, should be present. Services begin at 7:30 o'clock.

Under the New Jersey law the wife inherits one-half of the personal property of her deceased husband. The other half goes to the dead man's father; if his father is not living, then to the mother, brothers and sisters equally. One-third of the real estate goes to the wife during life, and the rest to brothers and sisters of the deceased; if none, then to the father; if no father, then to the mother for life.

Among the wise Democrats who found the time had come to forsake the party that had forsaken its principles was Father (sometimes irreverently called "Dad") Cornell of New Market. Not afraid to stand by his [illegible] he marked his ticket as follows: "First Democratic ticket voted in 1844. First Republican ticket 1880."

The above is taken from the Plainfield Times. We wouldn't be surprised to find more than one Democrat in Piscataway township who would willingly make affidavit that he did not believe the latter portion of "Dad's" inscription to be true. —New Brunswick Times.

Quite right. The office of Constable was an incentive for "Dad's" "change."

The engineers of the Pennsylvania Railroad are now engaged in making surveys to relieve the main line and shorten distances for travel. The survey for the first improvement is from Coalport, on the main line, to Newtown on the Camden and Amboy Railroad, a distance of four miles, over which it is proposed to transport coal instead of sending as now by way of Monmouth Junction to Amboy. The second is for a connection from New Brunswick to Jamesburg, a distance of eight miles, for passenger traffic to the seaside, instead of by way of Monmouth Junction, which will shorten the route about five miles.

The many friends of Mr. Robert Perry, a former resident of Plainfield, will learn with sorrow that he has suffered amputation of one of his legs. It will be remembered that several months since Mr. Perry sustained injuries in consequence of a fall while engaged in painting an elevated railroad structure in N. Y. city, which necessitated his removal to a hospital for treatment. He progressed favorably until about the 20th of last month, when his nurses took him on an easy chair to a corridor for the purpose of giving him fresh air. While doing so the chair giving way and poor "Bob" fell and again received such injuries in his before wounded limb as to require amputation of the same at the hip joint.

Last Friday night, as Mr. Wm. Moore was returning to his home on Second street, about half past ten o'clock, he heard stealthy footsteps behind him. Turning quickly, he found Wm. Jordan, alias "Booty," recently relieved from duty in an institution at Trenton, at his heels in a supplicating attitude. As Mr. Moore carried a new pair of boots under his arm, and the time of night not favorable to giving alms to such an applicant, he informed officer Hapenny of the circumstance and "Booty" was lodged in "Castle Dodd" for the night. Next morning he was discharged as no evidence could be produced that highway robbery was intended.

There was a lively time at the meeting of the "Morris Guards" last Tuesday evening, and several naughty words were used by members. The meeting was called ostensibly to make arrangements for receiving the "Halsey Guards" of Newark, to-day, on the occasion of their visit here as a target company, but interested ones brought up the subject of the Mayoralty, and then there was fun. The "discharged (?)" German took the floor and "pitched into" one of the candidates for "His Honor." The gentleman alluded to, happening to be present, arose, took off his coat, and gave the talker a [illegible]. Then others talked, and the subject of "who shall we support for Mayor" was well ventilated. Legal talent was brought into requisition, and [illegible] for the "Judge" there is no telling what the affair might have culminated in. The question of "who will be our candidate next Monday night?" was not definitely settled.

Attention, Boys!

The following law is commended to the attention of mischievous boys:—"That any person caught mutilating, destroying, tearing down or removing any show bill, poster or advertisement, posted on any wall, fence, billboard or other structure, shall be fined not less than twenty-five nor more than one hundred dollars for the first offence, and for the second offence, the penalty shall be imprisonment in the county jail not less than three nor more than six months."

Plainfield's Carriage Manufactory.

It has become known far and wide, that the carriages turned out from the factory of Mr. L. M. French, on Somerset street, this city, are of superior make and endurance, and in consequence Mr. F. is overrun with business. He employs none but the best of workmen and uses only the best of material. His reputation for building light coupe Rockaways for winter use, also light and durable sleighs and cutters is also well-known. The sleighing season is approaching, and we would suggest to those who are in search of such an article to call upon Mr. French. He will guarantee satisfaction in all cases. His work shows for itself.

Banner Presentation.

On Tuesday evening last, at the residence of Mr. John Chandler, a very sociable gathering was present, the occasion being a presentation of the Banner carried by the "F. A. Potts Mounted Guards," during the late campaign, to Lieut. Chandler. The affair was very pleasant, and enjoyed by all who were lucky enough to receive an invitation. The music furnished by Prof. Franze for dancing, was in his usual good style. The Committee, Messrs. J. Merwin, J. W. Morton, C. W. Tallman and D. W. King, are deserving of considerable praise for the admirable manner in which everything was conducted to the close of the evening's entertainment.

Plenty to Do.

Messrs. Isaac Melbourne, mason, and Jeremiah Manning, carpenter, seem to have all the building they can attend to at present, having now in course of construction six new dwellings. They have just completed a fine brick house for Job Male, Esq., on First Place, corner of Ninth street. Also about completed one for the same person on Broadway, near Presbyterian church. They have the contract for erecting a large brick house for the same party corner Second Place and Crescent avenue, 30x60 feet in size. Also, they are building a fine residence for Wm. H. Rooms, Esq., on Park Place, North Plainfield, and a handsome dwelling house on Craig Place for Berry & Thorn is near finished by them.

Sanitary.

The New Jersey Sanitary Association will hold its sixth annual meeting in the Y. M. C. A. Rooms, Library Hall, Elizabeth, on Tuesday and Wednesday, Nov. 30th and December 1st.

The important subjects to be discussed are as follows:—

Inspection of Buildings.

Subsoil drainage in Cities and Towns.

Examination of Wells, and control of their use in Cities.

Diseases of Animals in their relations to human diseases.

Drainage for health, and the power to condemn lands for this purpose.

The meeting promises to be of great public interest, bringing together as it will some of the ablest writers and thinkers in New Jersey, including Profs. Cook and Atherton, of New Brunswick, and Doctor Hunt, of Metuchen.

After the Election.

Since the election, three carpet mills of Philadelphia have reduced the wages of their hands one cent per yard. The Ingrain Carpet Trade Association met on Tuesday evening of last week, to protest against the injustice, but that will do no good. No doubt these mill owners obliged their hands to vote for Garfield on the ground that the election of Hancock would injure their business and reduce the wages of the men.

The Phillipsburg Sheet Iron Works, since election of Garfield, has been closed by the Sheriff, and hands thrown out of work. Is this a sample of the good times promised by the Republican party?

A leading manufactory of Newark, which bulldozed its employees into voting for Garfield, against their consciences, has reduced the men to nearly half time. The silk mills of the same city have cut down the pay of their weavers twenty per cent., so that they are unable to earn more than eight dollars per week for the year around.

The New Through Line.

It is understood that the new arrangement between the Baltimore and Ohio and New Jersey Central Railroad companies will go into effect as far as passengers are concerned, about December 1, but not as to freight until January 1. The delay in moving the merchandise and cattle business is due to the necessity of reconstructing the shedding and buildings of the Communipaw stock yard, which, some years back, was the principal stock yard in the neighborhood of New York, used by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company when that company shipped its cattle over what is known as the Allentown route, but which has since fallen into disuse in consequence of the withdrawal of the cattle wanted to its own line after the Pennsylvania Railroad Company leased the United Railroads of New Jersey. The above arrangement will greatly augment the business of the Reading and New Jersey Central, those lines forming, with the Baltimore and Ohio main line, with its connections west, southwest and northwest, practically a fourth trunk line out of New York, the others being the Pennsylvania, the Erie and the New York central. It is stated that the New Jersey Central is making arrangements for largely increased terminal facilities to meet the business of the new line.—New Brunswick Fredonian.

Plainfield Relief Association.

Last Thursday evening the M. E. church was filled to overflowing with interested spectators, the occasion being the anniversary exercises of the Plainfield Relief Association. The meeting was opened by singing by the Vocal Society, and reading of a part of the Scriptures by Rev. Dr. Yerkes, followed by prayer by the same divine. Rev. Dr. Ketcham then read the Secretary's report, and Rev. Dr. Bliss the Treasurer's report, followed by Rev. T. H. Stockton reading the report of the Secretary of the Employment Bureau. From the report of the latter it appears that during the past year the Bureau has had 38 applicants representing 348 persons. On investigation, 14 applicants were dismissed as unworthy. 70 women have received sewing and quite a large number of men and women have been given work at regular service or day's labor.

The garments made number 1,653; of these 314 were ordered and brought to the association 15 per cent on the cost of making. The others were paid for in healthy food and plain garments from the stores of the association or given in charity in needy cases. Garments not appropriated to the poor have been sold from the rooms of the association, bringing an income of......$184 19
Receipts from ordered work......125 53

Total receipts from sales......$309 72

The proportion of nationalities is as follows; Americans, 37; Irish, 27; colored, 38; German, 3; Danes, 2; French, 1.

Of these applicants 71 were Protestant and 37 Romanists.

Mrs. B. J. Shreeve is the Secretary of the Bureau.

The Treasurer's Report, Mrs. Jos. M. Myers, was as follows:

Mr. Geo. Miller has not improved any from his illness since our last issue.

Church Debt Raising.

After the dedication services of the Park Avenue Baptist Church on Tuesday last, the sum of $8,000 was raised by subscription among those present to relieve the debt against the church. There is still a mortgage debt of $12,000 on the property.

Thanksgiving Service.

A Thanksgiving service will be held in the Y. M. C. A. Hall next Saturday evening at 8 o'clock. All young men are requested to attend and take part in the exercises. It is intended to make this meeting one of the most interesting of the series now being conducted by the Y. M. C. A.

The Cold Snap.

Within the memory of one of the oldest inhabitants in this city we have never experienced such cold weather at this date—Nov. 23. The river and canal has never been known to have frozen over previous to this date in any year. The ice in some places in the canal and river is over one inch in thickness, and we understand that the upper Lehigh canal and river are frozen over solidly. This will prevent the coal companies from filling their orders by canal should this cold snap continue.—New Brunswick Fredonian.

The New Railway on the Coast.

The survey by the Pennsylvania R. R. engineers of the Philadelphia and Long Branch Railway is practically finished. The line adopted begins at Manasquan, the terminus of the Freehold and Jamesburg branch of the Pennsylvania R. R., and the road will pass through Point Pleasant, Seaside Park, Toms River and Whitings. The building of the road will be put under contract within ten days. G. M. Dorrance, President of the new company, says that trains will pass over the route from Philadelphia to Long Branch by June 1, and that the trip from Camden to Seaside Park will be made in an hour. Within five years a stone ballasted double track will be completed, and Seaside Park will be nearer Philadelphia by 12 miles than is Atlantic City.

Grand Lodge I. O. O. F., of New Jersey.

The annual meeting of this body, which was commenced at Taylor Hall Assembly Rooms Trenton on Wednesday of last week was concluded Friday. It was one of the most largely attended sessions of the body ever held, and the order was announced to be in a very prosperous condition.

The following were elected Grand Officers for the ensuing year:

Women for School Trustees.

It is known to a great many people—of course—that women are eligible to the office of School Trustee in any school district in New Jersey, and it is believed in some quarters that a great many women who are not elected to this office would be better trustees and do more to advance the public school interests than a number of the men who have been selected to this office. Section 31, page 1075, of the revised statutes says: "But women who are residents in the district and over the age of twenty-one years shall also be eligible to the office of School Trustee, and may hold such office and perform the duties of the same when duly elected by the legal voters of the district."

Perhaps this act may also permit women to be elected as members of the Board of Education in cities. That's a point for lawyers to argue, if it has not already been settled.—Eliz. Journal.

Queen Victoria's Gift to the President.

Washington, November 23.—A large box containing a massive desk or writing-table, a present from Queen Victoria to the President of the United States, was received at the White House to-day. The desk is made of live oak, weighs 1,300 pounds, is elaborately carved and a magnificent specimen of workmanship. Upon a smooth panel is the following inscription: "Her Majesty's ship Resolute, forming part of the expedition sent in search of Sir John Franklin in 1852; was abandoned in latitude 74 deg. 41 min., longitude 101 deg. 22 min., west, on the 15th of May, 1854. She was discovered and extricated in September, 1855, in latitude 67 deg. north, by Captain Buddington, of the United States whaler George Henry. She was purchased, fitted out and sent to England as a gift to Her Majesty, Queen Victoria, by the President and the people of the United States, as a token of good-will and friendship. This table was made from her timbers when she was broken up and is presented by the Queen of Great Britain and Ireland to the President of the United States as a memorial of the courtesy and loving kindness which dictated the offer of the gift of the Resolute."

The Week of Prayer—1881.

The Evangelical Alliance, as representing Protestant Christendom throughout the world, have for years suggested a programme for the Week of Prayer, so that, as far as possible, all praying people might unite on the same day in the same petitions. The Branch Alliance of the United States adopt, with slight modifications, its programme, and suggest the following themes and order for the approaching Week of Prayer, January 2—9, viz.:

January 2.—Theme: Christ the only hope of a lost world.

Monday, 3.—Thanksgiving for the blessings, temporal and spiritual, of the past year, and prayer for their continuance.

Tuesday, 4.—Humiliation and confession on account of individual, social and national sins.

Wednesday, 5.—Prayer for the Church of Christ, its unity and purity, its ministry; and for revivals of religion.

Thursday, 6.—Christian education:—Prayer for the Family, Sunday-Schools, and all educational institutions, for Young Men's Christian Associations, and for the Press.

Friday, 7.—Prayer for the prevalence of justice, humanity, and peace among all nations; for the suppression of intemperance and Sabbath desecration.

Saturday, 8.—Prayer for Christian Missions and the conversion of the world to Christ.

Sunday, 9.—Theme: On the Ministration of the Holy Spirit.

FIRE MATTERS.

At a meeting held in the parlors of "Gazelle Eng. Co. No. 1" last Monday evening, a new hose company was organized to take charge of the hose carriage attached to the steamer of the above mentioned company. The officers elected are as follows:

Foreman—Charles Johnson.
1st Assistant—Geo. Frazee.
2nd " —Fred Clark.
Secretary—Walter Clarkson.
Assistant Sec.—Frank Hedden.
Treas.—Geo. Roberts.

Twenty members enrolled their names and the company starts off under favorable auspices. They desire their orders from the Foreman of the Eng. Co.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

A very sad and serious accident occurred above Stillwater on Saturday last. Benj. Martin, a citizen of that township, and brother of P. B. Martin, of Paulina, while out gunning stopped to talk to a friend, and resting the stock of his gun upon his foot placed both hands over the muzzle. From some cause the gun slipped from his foot, discharging it. The charge blew off both hands and entered his right side, passing around the ribs and coming out at the shoulder. A few of the shot it is thought have penetrated his right lung. Help was immediately summoned and he was carried to his home, where a doctor dressed his wounds. At the present writing he is doing as well as could be expected under the circumstances. Mr. Martin has the sympathy of the entire community over his misfortune.—Blairstown Press.

San Francisco, Cal., Nov. 20.—Gov. Leland Stanford's two-year-old stallion Fred Crocker to-day trotted against his time of 2:[illegible] for a purse and record. He was allowed three starts, and on the third effort trotted the mile without a skip or a break in 2:[illegible]. He reached the quarter in 37 seconds, the half in 1:[illegible], and the three-quarters in 1:[illegible]. Gov. Stanford presented Marvin, Crocker's driver, with $200.

Milton P. Pierce, of Weymouth, the South Jersey Fish Culturist, has recently been appointed Assistant United States Fish Commissioner, and is assigned the special duty of distributing the [illegible] and European Food Carp in the Southern half of New Jersey, and the southern portion of [illegible] County. Parties in the surrounding [illegible], having suitable ponds for these remarkable fish, can be supplied by applying to Captain Pierce. Small ponds are preferable, and they must contain no other fish whatever, not even minnows. The ponds should have muddy bottoms, and if they do not already contain a supply of aquatic plants, they should be supplied, for the Carp is a vegetable feeder. Wild rice is one of the best possible plants for their food. The increase and growth of Carp is astonishing. They are a fine food fish, can be taken with hook and line, but are not specially gamey. An acre of water stocked with Carp will yield double the amount of an acre of land with the same attention and outlay.

The William Goat.

FROM THE PHILADELPHIA TIMES.

Mary had a William goat,
And he was black as jet;
He followed Mary round all day,
And [illegible] her! you just bet!

He went with her to school one day,
The teacher kicked him out;
It made the children grin, you know,
To see the goat about.

But though old Wheckem kicked him out,
Yet still he lingered near;
He waited just outside the door
Till Wheckem did appear.

Then William ran [illegible] the man—
He [illegible]!
And [illegible] just behind, you know,
Down a [illegible].

Old Wheckem turned a somersault;
The goat stood on his head,
And Mary laughed herself so sick
She had to go to bed.

Immigration to the United States during the last two years amounted to 1,812,177 persons. Of these, 2,036,979 were landed at Northern ports on the Atlantic, 145,819 at Pacific Coast ports, 485,025 at ports on the lakes, and 144,354 at Southern ports. If to these numbers were added the land immigrants by way of Canada, it would be found that the immigration for the past ten years has reached at least 3,830,000 persons—a total never exceeded in any decennial period.

An old man who was taken for a tramp died in a wagon house, near Schenectady, N. Y., a few days ago. He was shabbily dressed, having on two ragged woolen coats and two pairs of faded trousers, and was covered with lice and filth. Yet when the coroner held an inquest, $339.77 were found in the old man's pocket, and in a tin box, which he had carried about in his hands, were secreted $19,950 in 4½ per cent. bonds. A gold watch and a handsome chain were also found on his person. Strangest of all, the old tramp turned out to be a minister.

TESTIMONIALS:

* * * * * "You ask me to favor you with my experience and impressions of Miss Nella F. Brown. I seldom if ever yield to requests of this nature. I feel less hesitation in this instance because of Miss Brown's exceeding modesty and unpretentiousness, which are characteristics of genius.

I am informed that she never received instruction in the conventional school of elocution, which fact is greatly in her favor. In this she may be compared with Fanny Kemble and the late Charlotte Cushman, who were illustrious examples of what genius may attain without elocutionary training.

Miss Brown has appeared twice upon the "Star" Course in one season to the evident satisfaction of vast audiences, and will appear again this coming season. This, I take it, is a sufficient endorsement.

Yours very truly,
T. B. Pugh,
Manager of "Star" Course, Phila.

Mrs. Mary A. Livermore is a woman of superior intellectual power. She is wise, womanly and eloquent, and in my opinion the most able, natural and effective of all the women speakers now on the American lecture platform.

GENERAL NEWS.

Senator Chaffee has presented his son-in-law, Ulysses Grant, Jr., $100,000 in government bonds.

The first snow in England came unusually early this year—during the third week in October.

The election of President and Governor in this State will not occur again in the same year till 1892.

A large amount of work awaits the action of Congress; 1,594 bills and resolutions are now on the Calendar.

Glenburg, in Hood county, Texas, is the Democratic banner town. The vote on President stood: Hancock, 2136; Garfield, 0000.

The present Congress will re-assemble for its last session Monday, December 6. The new Congress will not meet until a year from that time, unless called together in extra session.

It is reported from Ozark, Ark., that "on the top of White Oak Mountain, two miles north of Ozark, stones two pounds or less in weight have been rising from the earth and falling like hail, driving families out into the fields."

The Titusville (Pa.) Herald gives the number of completed wells in the oil region for October as 339; production, 8351; new drilling wells, 388; new rigs up and building 388; dry holes, 8. There is a slight falling off from the September figures.

A society of Mormon girls, having for its object the securing of monogamic husbands, has been discovered and broken up at Salt Lake. The members took a vow to marry no man who would not pledge himself to be content with one wife. Five grand-daughters of Brigham Young had joined it.

21 NUMBERS of SCRIBNER'S for $5.

The richly illustrated November number of Scribner's Monthly, the Decennial Issue, appears in a new cover, and begins the twenty-first volume. The increasing popularity of the magazine is strongly evidenced by recent sales. A year ago the monthly circulation was about 90,000 copies; during the past nine months it has averaged 115,000, while the first edition of the November issue is 125,000.

The first Part of the new famous serial by Eugene Schuyler, "The Life of Peter the Great," was finished in October. With November begins Part II., "Peter the Great as Ruler and Reformer," which will be an advance, in point of popular interest and wealth of illustration, upon the part already published. To enable readers to secure Part I. the publishers make the following special offers to new subscribers after October 20th, who begin with the November number.

(1) New subscribers may obtain, for $5.00, Scribner's Monthly for the coming year, and the previous nine numbers, February to October, 1880, which include Part I. of "Peter the Great," Mrs. Burnett's "Louisiana," etc. In accepting this offer, twenty-one numbers will be had for $5.00.

(2) They may obtain the previous twelve numbers of Scribner's, elegantly bound in olive-green cloth (two volumes), containing Part I. of Peter the Great, all of Cable's novel, "The Grandissimes," with the numbers named above, and a year's subscription, for $7.50. (Regular price, $10.00)

All book-sellers or news-dealers will take subscriptions and supply the numbers and volumes mentioned in the above special offers, without extra charge for postage or express; or the publishers, Scribner & Co., 743 Broadway, New York, may be addressed direct. The regular price of Scribner's is $4.00 a year, 35 cents a number.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

Holman's PAD.

Cures without Medicine. Simply by Absorption,

THE ONLY TRUE MALARIAL ANTIDOTE.

DR. HOLMAN'S PAD is no guess-work remedy—no feeble imitative experiment—no patchwork hodge-podge of some other inventor's ideas; it is the original and only genuine curative Pad, the only remedy that has an honestly-acquired right to use the title-word "Pad" in connection with a treatment for chronic diseases of the Stomach, Liver and Spleen.

By a recently perfected improvement, effected by the addition of vegetable ingredients of newly-discovered remedial value and absorptive adaptability, DR. HOLMAN has greatly increased the scope of the Pad's usefulness, and appreciably augmented its active curative power.

The great improvement gives HOLMAN'S PAD (with its Adjuvants) complete and unfailing control over the most persistent and unyielding forms of Chronic Disease of the Stomach and Liver, as well as Malarial Blood-poisoning.

HOLMAN'S PADS have cured—and are daily curing—diseases of so many kinds, that the list is well-nigh interminable. It includes Malarial Poison of every type, from Aching Bones and Low Fever to Chills and Dumb Ague; Stomach Diseases, such as Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Sour Stomach, Chronic Diarrhea, Flatulency, Heartburn, &c., &c.; Liver Disorders, like Biliousness, Bilious Colic, Dangerous Fevers, Sick Headache, Pains in the Side, Bilious Fevers, Torpid Liver, &c., &c. Well does this mighty remedy justify the eminent Professor Loomis' high encomium: "IT IS NEARER A UNIVERSAL PANACEA THAN ANYTHING IN MEDICINE!"

The success of HOLMAN'S PADS has inspired imitators who offer Pads similar in form and odor to the genuine Holman Pad. Beware of these bogus and imitation Pads, gotten up only to sell on the reputation of the GENUINE Holman Pad.

Each genuine Holman Pad bears the Private Revenue Stamp of the HOLMAN PAD COMPANY, with the above Trade-Mark, printed in green.

FOR SALE BY ALL FIRST-CLASS DRUGGISTS, Or sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of $2.00.

HOLMAN PAD CO.,
P. O Box 2112. 93 WILLIAM ST., N.Y.

"THE SATTERLEE"

"U. S. A. GENERAL HOSPITAL," West Philadelphia, where DR. DAVID KENNEDY was one of the Surgeons on Duty.

Dr. David Kennedy, for the past ten years an active practitioner of Medicine and Surgery in Rondout, N. Y., was one of the resident Surgeons of the above-named Hospital during the war. No doubt many of his former soldier-patients are still living and will be glad to recognize the name of the friend and Surgeon of those early years in the proprietor of a medicine with which it has become associated. Dr. Kennedy performed hundreds of the most dangerous and difficult operations, and it's a simple fact that not one died, but all made splendid recoveries.

Dr. Kennedy is frank to confess now that his wonderful success was due to the fact that he gave his patients the medicine he now calls Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" in the after treatment. It was this that restored the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels to a healthy condition, affording tone and strength to the whole system, and thus enabled the soldier to once more enjoy life and meet the loved ones at home. Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" for sale by all druggists, $1.00 a bottle. nov1ml

POETRY.

THE LOOM OF LIFE.

All day, all night, I can hear the jar
Of the loom of life, and near and far
It thrills with its deep and muffled sound,
As tireless the wheels go always round.

Busily, ceaselessly, goes the loom,
In the light of day and the midnight's gloom,
And the wheels are turning early and late,
And the woof is wound in the warp of fate.

Click, click!—there's a thread of love woven in;
Clack, clack!—another of wrong and sin;
What a checkered thing this life will be
When we see it unrolled in eternity!

When shall this wonderful web be done?
In a thousand years, perhaps, or one;
Or to-morrow! Who knoweth? Not thou nor I;
But the wheels turn on and the shuttles fly.

Ah, sad-eyed weavers, the years are slow,
But each one is nearer the end, I know;
And some day the last thread shall be woven in—
God grant it be love instead of sin.

Are we spinners of good in this life-web—say?
Do we furnish the weaver a thread each day?
It were better, O my friends, to spin
A beautiful thread than a thread of sin.

GREED OF GOLD.

"Is this you, Gipsy?"

The slight girl turned her roseate face, with a glad involuntary cry.

"Yes, it is I, Cesare. Did you think it was a water-nymph?"

But the gay tongue trippled, and the roseate bloom rose up to the ripples of brown hair which shaded Veta Rane's pretty forehead.

Cesare D'Arcil saw and understood, and drew the dripping girl under his umbrella with the proud imperiousness of possession. The satisfied and happy look was far more becoming to his splendid beauty than the usual sneer and frown his perfect features wore.

Of Italian parentage, his American birth had done little toward reconciling him to poverty in his land of great probabilities.

He was music teacher in the little town of Oakborough, and Veta Rane, an orphan girl, had been his sweetheart from a child. The most careless observer could read, as he ran, that Cesare D'Arcil, this young man of singular beauty, luxuriant and cynical, the stepson of the richest man in town, was all in the world to her.

"I thought I should get home before the shower came," laughed Veta, happy on his arm under the sheltering umbrella. "You see what a wretched guesser I am!" the raindrops sparkling on the long eyelashes.

But already the cloud of discontent had gloomed Cesare's dark eyes. Veta, chattering on, saw in a moment that his mind was far away from her. Her mobile face became shadowed, her silvery tongue silent as they walked rapidly down the green country road in the pelting summer rain.

"Has Doctor D'Alembert's funeral yet taken place, Cesare?" she asked at length.

"Yes, and the will read."

"And you?" she asked, quickly.

"I am left out in the cold, of course," he answered, with a short, unmusical laugh.

She murmured a word of sympathy.

"Oh, I am not in the least disappointed Gipsy. There was never any love lost between my stepfather and myself."

"And Doctor D'Alembert's great wealth is left to—"

"His son Ignace, of course. Fortunately for the ducats. He won't make ducks and drakes of them as I would."

"He is a very fine young man, isn't he?" ventured Veta, timidly; but Cesare did not hear.

"There was a proviso that the inheritance of the Roses, etc., depended on Ignace marrying Miss Wayne within a year; otherwise the property reverted to me. But that is nothing. Of course, Ignace will marry Mabyn."

Gipsy's brown eyes dilated, but her tongue hesitated to express her surprise.

"Do you know her?"

"Mabyn Wayne? Yes."

"Is she good? Is she pretty?"

"She is an angel, and very beautiful."

The brown eyes, raised with an instant's penetration, sought the ground again.

Cesare was too cool and careless to be in love with Miss Wayne himself, whosoever might be. That was not what called up his bone of discontent.

But in the hillside farmhouse, whose comfort and quaintness pleased him, he found a temporary balm for his woes. The sweetest and most innocent girl in the world loved him—was his slave. The great youth and tender beauty, the dependent nature and exquisitely feminine traits of Veta Rane suited him perfectly. Unlike him, she was not ambitious, had no quarrel with fate, since she might love and be loved, and something of her happy content banished his unrest that evening.

"You are necessary to me, Gipsy," he said, snatching her suddenly to his breast. "I am never so good or happy as when with you."

And with a woman's devotion, she responded in her utter happiness:

"And I will never fail you, Cesare. I never can be anything but what I am, you know."

Yet at that moment the future seemed not bright, but vaguely ominous to both.

Cesare D'Arcil walked back to town by moonlight. Leaving behind him at last the long road of glittering vines and dripping tree-boughs, he reached the large, silent house and suite of rooms he called his home.

It had been years since the Roses had been his home. He had been part of the unhappiness which his handsome Italian mother had caused there.

She hated her husband's son, and, in return, Doctor D'Alembert hated hers. A prudent and just man, he held the most decided disapproval of his step-son's hauteur, extravagance and selfishness, and gave him no part of his plans for the future.

His own boy was gentle, frank, generous, with self-possessed, deferential manners which made him every master of the situation; and for years before Theresa died he had determined that Ignace only should inherit at the Roses. She divided this, and actually died in a fit of passion. Long before that the doctor had planned another mistress for the Roses.

Mabyn Wayne was the daughter of his stepsister, connected, but not related to him by blood. From a gentle and pretty child, she had developed into a good and beautiful woman. For six years she had been abroad. Ignace had not seen her since her fourteenth year, when she was a school girl, but he had ever flushed with pleasure at the least reference to his father's well known—[illegible], at a suitable age, he should marry Mabyn Wayne.

Her family acknowledged him, in every respect, a suitable match for her and from time to time there came from Mabyn [illegible] some pleasant word or token for her old playfellow. So the case [illegible] at Doctor D'Alembert's will.

And now Mabyn was coming home.—Called to New York in the selection of a musical instrument for a pupil, Cesare D'Arcil accidentally met her in the very hour of her landing. Transfixed by her beauty, which was a wonder, there arose within him such passionate jealousy of Ignace D'Alembert that a sudden madness took possession of him.

Why should another man have the priceless possession of the Roses and Mabyn Wayne, and he nothing of this world's goods?

Not that he loved her. Love for himself only devoured him. But he imagined himself satisfied and exultant, the master of the Roses, with this peerless woman his wife, and was utterly possessed by the thought.

Mabyn had not heard of Doctor D'Alembert's death, and was greatly shocked.

"I am very, very much pained!" said Mabyn. "And Ignace—I suppose he is in great affliction?"

A faint blush tinged her cheek.

"Doubtless," replied Cesare, affably.

Something in his manner arrested Mabyn's attention. She was looking at him, attentively, when he added:

"I should have thought Ignace would have accompanied me to New York and made an early call upon you. I mentioned it, but he has gone to Redwood, hunting. Probably you will see him as soon as he returns from his expedition."

A burning blush, succeeded by a snowy paleness, betrayed to him her secret.

"She remembers—hopes to love him," he said, under his breath, and added: "She is offended."

He had deceived her in speaking the truth.

He was upon barely speaking terms with Ignace. At the time he had mentioned going to New York Ignace had not known that Mabyn's arrival in that city was so near. He was going hunting, out of courtesy to guests staying a few days at the Roses, not that he was then inclined to the sport, or especially fond of it at any time. The inference that he had preferred a gunning expedition to meeting Mabyn Wayne was an utterly false one, which he would have resented with spirit if aware that he had been drawn.

But the mischief was done. A certain subtile sweetness had gone out of Mabyn's coming home. And when week after week passed, and no tidings or token came from the Roses, she was passionately humiliated by her strong disappointment and sadness.

"He shall never dream that I cared so much," she murmured with a burning cheek, and in a week was the belle of the set.

And Cesare D'Arcil still remained in New York. He had grown thin and pale, with restless, burning eyes. Every day he contrived to see Mabyn. Sometimes it would be during her morning drive or shopping expedition; oftener at some gay evening reception.

And Mabyn—she never met him without a faint change of color, and something in her manner which betokened sincere emotion. But those keen eyes of Cesare D'Arcil's were deceived. He knew the fading and the coming of the roses in those beautiful cheeks were not for him. It was only of the profound association in her mind of himself with Ignace D'Alembert that made her pale and falter at his approach.

But, whatever the truth was, it gave him access to her presence when others could not approach her. He spent long mornings in the parlors of the rich mansion which was her home. He danced frequently with her in public; he was seen in the Wayne carriage.

At the Roses, Ignace D'Alembert moodily watched the mails. For Cesare had said to him: "I will let you know when Miss Wayne returns." Simple and straightforward himself, the thought of treachery had never occurred to him when Cesare D'Arcil's wish had become a defined and confirmed plot. Mabyn had returned in November. It was now January when he determined to go to New York and from a brother of Mabyn's learn when she was to arrive home.

On his way uptown he passed the Wayne mansion. It was evening. It being a period of thawing weather a window was raised to admit fresh air into the artificially-heated rooms. The radiant light streamed out upon the sidewalk, and revealed a table, a table with a gilded book, a bouquet and a woman's white glove, which stood very near the window. It suddenly took possession of Ignace that the glove was Mabyn's. He turned back, ascended the steps, rang the bell, and asked for Miss Wayne. In return he was shown into the room with the open window, and Mabyn rose from a sofa to receive him.

Cesare rose also from an easy-chair.

"Curse it! I have worked like a dog, and yet delayed their meeting only two months," he muttered, yet coolly proceeded to put another spoke in his own wheel.

"I have been wondering, Ignace, why you did not come before."

"How long has Miss Wayne been home?"

"Two months," replied Mabyn.

"Have you written me, Cesare!"

"Certainly."

"I did not get the letter."

He turned eagerly to Mabyn's beautiful eyes then; but there was an unmistakable ice in her manner. Not his rarest gentleness could melt it; yet after the sweetest evening of her life, when she had yet been very silent, Mabyn Wayne locked herself in her chamber to burst into passionate weeping.

"He is good and noble, as I thought him. I love him with all my heart. Yet I do not believe he cares a straw for me!"

And Ignace, pacing the floor of his hotel chamber, was brooding these thoughts:

"Beautiful, yet utterly indignant to me. I had hoped—I know it now—that she would be prepared to regard me with some favor; for I have loved her from a child. I could fall on my knees and offer her all this moment."

Business demanded his return to Oakborough upon the following day, but he dined that day at Colonel Wayne's. Mrs. Wayne was very fond of him.

"You will come to the Roses and visit me, though my father is not there?" he said to her, but his eyes wandered to Mabyn's face.

"We will come, yes, and try to cheer you up, poor boy," said the elder lady, affectionately.

And the colonel chimed in: "Yes, yes! whenever you please. Ignace, set the time."

But Mabyn never raised her beautiful eyes.

Yet he knew she would come. She could not refuse without singularity; and under that roof, of which she would so fittingly be the mistress, would he not hope and gain courage to ask her to be his?

He went away with a grave face—returned to Oakborough, leaving Cesare D'Arcil again master of the field; yet Ignace never dreaming of being jealous. He had known Cesare from a child—knew his selfishness, his untruth. Mabyn was so pure, so soft and fair. There seemed no possibility of any geniality between the two. He merely wondered how the latter could afford to stay so long in town; then dismissed all thought of him, and settled down to the Roses, with a heartache which made him numb and dull to all the best of the world but beautiful Mabyn Wayne.

* * * * *

"To the roses? No, six miles, miss."

A broken carriage before a country inn; an old gentleman with a broken leg, upheld by two men; an elderly lady weeping dismally, and a beautiful girl, collected and brave in the general distress.

"If you wanted to go to the Roses, miss, ye ought to have got out at the next station," said the driver of the broken carriage with an air of sullen civility.

"It is so long since I have been here, I have forgotten; and I think that we were told yesterday that Hamilton was the station," said Mabyn, absently, distracted by her father's groans and her mother's sobs though she yet appeared quite calm.

It was Cesare who misdirected the party.

"At least we are fortunate to be near a clean and respectable tavern, dear father," she continued, and gave direction to have the men bring in the colonel and go for the doctor.

Outside the surly coachman scratched his head and surveyed the broken carriage.

"I told that black-eyed furriner that it would snarl the whole vehicle ter pull out the linch pin, an it has. Well, I don't care if he pays me as he says he will, to do the whole job. Here goes for a look out fur letters."

In the hall he already met Miss Wayne with a brief note for young Mr. D'Alembert. He received it with faithful promises of delivery, went outside to secretly destroy it, then sped away to communicate with the "black-eyed furriner."

Cesare was soon on the scene. Of course, under the circumstances, he could make himself invaluable.

"Waiting to hear from Ignace? My dear Mrs. Wayne, you are very foolish. You know nothing of Oakborough physicians—and they are simply know-nothings. You should return to New York at once."

He had hustled them to the point of departure, when there came an unlooked for apparition. It was Ignace D'Alembert, with a face utterly colorless.

He had been sitting in his library the night previous, when a servant showed in a young girl. She was pale, gentle, timid; her beauty dimmed with recent weeping.

"You know me, I think," with a dignity beyond her years. "I am Veta Rane."

"Yes, I know you," giving her a kind hand. "Will you be seated?"

She seemed making a great effort to be calm, then said:

"Mr. D'Alembert, you will understand me. You are very unhappy because you love some one; and so am I."

Ignace started.

"Can I serve you?" he asked, at last.

"No; but perhaps I can serve you. Cesare D'Arcil has been devoting himself all winter to Miss Wayne, and that is the reason she has become estranged from you. Do you ask me how I know this; but I do know. And they are all at Hamilton now—at the Post House. I wish you would go there at once, and see if what I have told you is not true."

A few words more of explanation and she was gone.

It was true. He knew it the moment his first eye blazed their accusation into Cesare's false ones. But for a time he held his post.

Devoting himself to reassuring Colonel Wayne, he promised him that he should be attended by his own physician at the Roses; and placing him with his wife in the most luxurious of cushioned carriages, with a careful driver, he gravely asked of Mabyn the privilege of driving with her in a separate carriage.

She assented, with a sudden sense of security and protection, for late Cesare seemed drawing nearer and nearer into her life, with a fascination in his black eyes which held her freedom. She glanced behind her now with almost a look of fear as she stepped into the carriage.

But Cesare was not there.

On the narrow cliff road a figure suddenly arose among the bushes. The high-mettled horses reared and plunged, the buggy rocked, for the animals were held from dashing away by the vice-like grasp upon the lines.

But Ignace uttered a groan of moral anguish, for the cushion of blue velvet beside him was empty.

Without a cry, Mabyn had gone over the wheel!

The next instant he stood upon the ground where she lay. There was a stain of blood on her white lips.

The strength left the brave man's limbs suddenly.

"She is dead!"

But she moved, and murmured!

"Can I be of any assistance?" said a voice.

But Cesare's craven cheek was white; his bones shook! Had the death he planned in frightening the horses come—and to her, not his rival?

"Stand aside," exclaimed Ignace, sternly. "Do not in my presence lay a finger upon her helpless and unconscious form. If she lives she shall choose between us! Let that be enough for the present. For the past you have played me falsely. You professed to play a brother's part, yet used every effort to supplant me. Yet I cannot believe she ever could have loved you."

Even in his passionate speaking, he had found a little snow at the roadside, and pressed it upon Mabyn's temples until she opened her eyes.

"Who told you that lie?" demanded Cesare, sullenly.

"Veta Rane," replied Ignace, mechanically.

For Mabyn had lifted her eyes to his face with a faint, grateful smile, and he knew nothing else for a moment but the sweetness of that gaze.

Cesare gazed at the two faces with a muttered curse of bitter despair, and then turned and was lost in the winter gloom.

Night found him at the farmhouse garden before Veta Rane.

"So you played tell-tale! So you spied upon me! Who gave you the right I would like to know?" he sneered, brutally.

"I have watched you, and it was true," she murmured, her hand upon her heart.

He was mad with excitement and his own bitter thoughts—ay, he had been mad with an evil scheme for months; now he was simply raging.

Take care, weak, passionate Cesare D'Arcil! You know not what those bitter word-blows are doing to that tender girl who stands so helpless before you.

First she reeled a little away from him. All unheeding he went on with his bitter taunts and reproaches.

Oh, man! She loved you, and your lightest displeasure ever struck cold to her heart.

He paused suddenly, for she had sunk down, and lay still at his feet.

SORRY AFTER ALL.

Once during the war, a Northern regiment encamped in Louisiana, was visited by a black nurse carrying the baby of her mistress. In a few minutes she was surrounded by soldiers, each anxious to hold the baby for a minute. There were many moist eyes, for the infant brought before "the mind's eye" the babes far away in the North. The effect of a child on the roughest of men is illustrated by this story:

Old Jack Mills, engineer on the Madison and Indianapolis railroad, is noted for his irritability and bluffness. He has always claimed that "any pesky fool who persists in getting run over, ought to get run over."

One day as Jack was driving his engine near Columbus at the rate of thirty miles an hour he saw approaching the track, on a country road a two horse wagon with a man and woman for occupants.

He did not dream of danger, for the wagon was some distance from the track, with plenty of time for the train to sweep past. But suddenly the driver of the wagon stood up and whipped his horses into a run—directly into the jaws of death.

Jack's hand was half thrown up to whistle down brakes. He hesitated, muttered, "The fool!" and let his engine drive. On flew the farmer and on roared the train.

The engine struck the wagon between the wheels, knocked it to a thousand splinters, killed man and woman, and mutilated the horses so that both died.

The passengers sprang out to find Jack in a towering passion; but while looking at the wreck, his eyes caught sight of a tiny pair of baby shoes clutched in the woman's hand.

A flood of tears leaped from his eyes. He staggered up against his engine and said in a trembling voice:

"Just look at them little shoes, Charlie. I—I didn't mind so much runnin' over that drunken fool who tried to cross ahead of us when he couldn't, but the little one, Charlie, the little kid, that's waitin' for 'em, that's too rough."

A HINT TO GRUMBLERS.

"What a noisy world this is!" croaked an old frog, as he squatted on the margin of the pond. "Do you hear those geese how they scream and hiss? What do they do it for?"

"O, just to amuse themselves!" answered a little field mouse.

"Presently we shall have owls hooting; what is that for?"

"It's the music they like best," said the mouse.

"And those grasshoppers; they can't go home without grinding and chirping; why do they do that?"

"O, they are so happy they can't help it," said the mouse.

"You find excuses for all. I believe you don't understand music, so you like hideous noises."

"Well, friend, to be honest with you," said the mouse, "I don't greatly admire any of them; but they are all sweet in my ears compared with the constant croaking of a frog."

It is better to do something than to project many things.

The road that leads to destruction is the route of all evil.

"Many are called but few are chosen" to occupy political office.

When you ask some single ladies how old they are, their rage is manifest.

Men are more inclined to ask curious questions than to obtain necessary instruction.

The earliest barbarian bucket was somewhat quite outside the pail of civilization.

"Constituency, thou art a jewel," remarks the candidate when he is returned to Congress.

The most brilliant qualities become useless when they are not sustained by force of character.

"Preserve the privacy of your house, marriage state and heart from relatives and all the world.

"I don't mean to reflect on you," said one man to another. "No," was the reply, "you are not polished enough to reflect on any one."

If an untruth is only a day old it is called a lie; if it is a year old it is called a falsehood; but if it is a century old it is called a legend.

A man who paints signs on fences and rocks fell from a precipice in Colorado last week, and was killed. Precipices should be encouraged.

Music touches every key of the memory, and stirs all the hidden springs of sorrow and of joy. We love it for what it makes us forget, and for what it makes us remember.

Poor child! She never knew how his yet maddler cry of remorse rang on the night air, when he turned her still face to the moonlight, kissed her unbreathing lips and found her dead of heart disease.

So he was not all bad? No! Few are. He was only one of many who curse their lives, and those of others, with greed of gold.

It was on the Burlington railroad train, and politics had given way to theology, and the young man with the turban hat had the floor, and was denouncing the old-fashioned idea of hell. "I tell you," he cried, "man was never intended for such a fiendish punishment. God never made me for kindling wood." "Reckon not," said the old parson back near the stove, "too green." He didn't go and elaborate and explain what he meant, but somehow or other everybody seemed to understand him, and the conversation gradually drifted back to politics.

They had not been married long, so they sat down to play "checkers." In the middle of the game she said:

"Then do I jump these two men and get a king? Of course I do. Crown me."

I've got the first king and she chuckled hysterically.

"No you ain't either: I didn't mean that move," said he, "if you can't play checkers without cackling like a hen you'd better give it up. I'll take that back and move here; now, so. Now you can move here."

"Over here?" asked the wife.

"Certainly. That's very good, and he [illegible] grabbed two men.

"I didn't see that: I'd rather put it here," said she.

"Too late, now," said he, pegging away for the king row. "You should study your moves first."

NEW JERSEY.

Democratic journals throughout the country are earnest in their praise of New Jersey.

The tribute is justly bestowed.

Gallant New Jersey! The State that stood firm for Constitutional Government, popular rights, public honesty and personal purity, by casting her electoral vote for WINFIELD SCOTT HANCOCK.

The deed stands now to her honor and it will hereafter redound to her advantage.

The safety of freedom and the best interests of all the people will yet demand a Democratic Administration.

The power of money and partisan corruption may postpone the day, but come it surely will.

The people cannot be forever deceived and intimidated.

New Jersey shines as a Democratic star of the first magnitude and time will increase its lustre.

All hail! New Jersey!

IN A GRAVEL PIT.

The Central Times of last week, in a lengthy double-leaded editorial strenuously advocating the claims of a highly respectable citizen of Plainfield for the Mayoralty nomination, spoke thus with reference to the long and loudly echoed "Gravel Pit" nuisances:

> "At length, however, his unabating interest stimulated the City to take action, and they spent four hundred dollars to relieve the neighborhood of the nuisance temporarily by throwing a few layers of earth in the bed of the pits. This was the sum Mr. Randolph asked the city to furnish in co-operation with him to remove the nuisance forever, and for which he is now maligned by malicious persons, and by those who are ignorant of the facts, but who have given willing ears to the slanderer."

As those remarks do not ventilate the subject, and by implication commit injustice, we deem it right to truthfully state the case.

The gentleman named by the Times vehemently and persistingly urged the immediate filling up of the gravel pits on his own plan, and proposed, if the Common Council would appropriate to him four hundred dollars for the ostensible purpose of grading Midway, the old line of Rail Road, he would obligate himself to furnish the balance of money required and make the larger pit (Voorhees) flush with the surrounding ground.

The Corporation Counsel, after careful examination, gave as his official opinion, that Council possessed no authority under the Charter to grade Midway at the public expense.

The Board of Health maintained that their duty consisted in merely abating nuisances, not in grading streets or making building lots, and for whatever sum they expended the owners of property involved must be held liable.

The Common Council shared like sentiments, and voted $400 to the credit of the Board of Health to be used for the abatement of gravel pit nuisances according to law.

Thereupon the Times gentleman indignantly withdrew all proposals, ignored legal obstacles, and belabored City Officials as a set of ignoramuses.

So ended the first act.

The Board of Health issued, in due form of legality, notices requiring the respective owners of the pits to fill them up to an extent requisite for the prevention of unhealthy effects.

The Land Improvement Company promptly obeyed the summons, but the owner of the larger pit did not.

Then the Board of Health publicly solicited proposals for filling in, and finally awarded the contract to the lowest bid, which was ten cents per cubic yard.

The work is done and well done. Over four thousand cubic yards of good gravel were deposited in the Voorhees pit, not "a few layers of earth," and the nuisance is effectually suppressed, although not converted into a valuable building site.

The $400 expended is a lien in favor of the City against the property.

That was acting in strict compliance with law.

The gentleman's plan, if carried out, would have subjected every Councilman who voted for it to an indictment by the Grand Jury for the illegal appropriation of public money.

A hundred fold safer and better is it to go slow and sure, than to impetuously rush forward and stick fast in the mire of violated law.

During the past year the vessel tonnage of the United States decreased 101,566 tons, and the amount of shipbuilding was 35,629 tons less than that of the preceding year. So sinks to ruin an important national interest, which under Democratic auspices added renown and wealth to the country.

* * *

It would undoubtedly be a public benefit, were the two ponds known as those of Randolph and Cadmus removed, the mud carted away, and Green Brook cleaned out and made a running stream of pure water. The work must, however, be done strictly in accordance with law. "Darn the expense" is not a satisfactory argument for taxpayers.

* * *

Malaria has been everywhere prevalent the present year, in town and country, and throughout districts heretofore exempt. We boldly re-assert, that a populated locality cannot be found to show a cleaner bill of health than the City of Plainfield. It is remarkably free from disease creating agencies, notwithstanding its dismal croakers.

* * *

Were the multitude of small nuisances, all prejudicial to salubrity and comfort, that have been abated through the prompt and intelligent interference of City Physician Lowrie, acting under the direction of the Mayor and Board of Health, during the past two years, publicly known, possibly some wordy Councilmen might tone down their indecent denunciation of City Officials.

* * *

There is much senseless talk in this City just now about the preservation of public health and the suppression of its imaginary foes. Such is to be condemned, because at variance with existing facts and calculated to inflict injury. Plainfield stands unrivaled as a beautiful and healthy place of abode, and there is no material cause to jeopardize her well earned reputation.

* * *

It is the apparent aim of certain gentlemen in Plainfield to manufacture local political capital out of the question of public health, or, as it has been termed—Sanitary Reform. To accomplish whatever may be their purpose, they are agitating with more zeal than prudence, magnifying by tongue and pen trivial matters into giant evils, and without good cause seriously hazarding the public welfare.

* * *

The Common Council some months ago instructed its Health Committee to inquire into the subject of alleged detrimental nuisances. That Committee carefully discharged the duty assigned them and submitted to Council on the 8th of November a detailed report, which was read in open session and then declared unsuitable for publication. Such action on the part of Council was certainly unwise, giving credence as it did to unmerited suspicion. There was no valid reason why the report in question should not have been laid before the people. It contained nothing new or startling, and discoursed principally on Mill Ponds and the Brook, which subjects had previously claimed the thoughtful consideration of the Board of Health.

Biennial Sessions.

The concurrent resolution of the Legislature proposing amendments to the State Constitution will now come before the new Legislature and if again passed will be submitted to a vote of the people at a special election to be held some time the following Summer. The amendments provide that, beginning with the year 1882, the members of Assembly shall be elected for two years, and biennial sessions shall be held thereafter. The Senate will, at the session of 1883, be divided by lot into two classes, one class to serve two years, the other class four years, and the term to be four years thereafter, one half the Senators to be chosen biennially. Should the amendments be adopted, the Senators to be elected in 1882 would serve either two or four years, according to his luck in drawing. Public sentiment appears largely to favor the proposed change, but there will doubtless be difference of opinion in the Legislature as to the propriety of the submission of the question to popular vote. Connecticut last year rejected a similar proposition.

Democratic Doctrines in Indiana.

At a meeting of the Democratic Editors of northern Indiana, held in Fort Wayne recently, it was unanimously agreed that the following points should at once be pressed on the attention of the American people:

First—A change in the constitution of the United States, providing for the election of President and Vice President by popular vote.

Second—The election of United States Senators by the people of the several States, instead of the Legislatures.

Third—A judicious revision of the present tariff in the interest of the producing and industrial classes.

Fourth—Vigorous opposition to the introduction of cheap Mongolian labor.

Fifth—Appropriate legislation by Congress for the taxation of greenbacks.

Sixth—Opposition to the controlling of elections by dependents of the national administration, high or low, and against coercive measures on the part of corporations, in interfering with the elective franchise of their employees.

Seventh—Securing the holding of elections in all the States on the first Tuesday after the first Monday of November.

Eighth—A protest against any tinkering with the finances of the country, and expressing unqualified condemnation of the presumptuous propositions of Secretary Sherman.

Ninth—A demand upon the present Congress to institute a thorough and searching investigation of the charge that the apparent majority for Garfield and Arthur in the State of New York was obtained by fraudulent and illegal means, to the end that justice may be done to all parties.

* * *

Pennsylvania has a law, old and almost forgotten, providing that stake-holders of election bets can be prosecuted against by poor boards for the amount put in their hands. The poor board of Scranton has agreed [illegible] on several prominent citizens, restraining them from paying out any money deposited in their hands by bettors. This proceeding has established a great sensation. Winners of bets are naturally dissatisfied to have the money turned into the poor fund.

The driven well at the Paterson Rolling Mills has reached a depth of 2,000 feet, at a cost of $15,000, and the only result has been the discovery of a saline spring resembling salt water. The geologists have been interested in the rock found, and it is now surmised that the salt water is from the ocean by a subterranean channel.

THE members of the Saenger-Bund enjoyed themselves in "tripping the light fantastic toe" to fine music, at their rooms on Front street, Thanksgiving Eve. There was a large attendance and the occasion an enjoyable one.

WE publish in another column a new advertisement for Edsall & Price, with a call for attention to special items. Our citizens would do well to examine these goods, for all of us are looking for the best goods for the least money.

A GOLD chain bracelet was lost between the corner of Second and Peace streets to Tier's pond, or else on the ice of the pond, on Thanksgiving Day. The finder will receive the thanks of the owner by leaving the article at this office.

"The Plainfield CONSTITUTIONALIST is a picture of prosperity. It enjoys a large advertising patronage, and its ads. are set up in a tasty manner."

So says the Washington Star, an excellent family journal published at Washington, Warren County.

LOVERS of peanuts—and the devotees of this delicacy are more numerous than the open avowals show—will be glad to learn that 1880 has been another great peanut year, like its predecessor. Last year's crop was nearly two and a quarter million bushels, worth nearly two and a quarter million dollars.

AN annual fair for the benefit of "The Children's Home," will be held in the Sunday School rooms of the M. E. Church, the afternoons and evenings of Dec. 7th, 8th and 9th, 1880. The afternoon admission for children, under 12 years, will be ten cents. Evening admission for all, fifteen cents.

PEOPLE are now going down into the depths of their pocket-books to see what they can do about Christmas presents. If you want to make the most of your money read the advertisements in THE CONSTITUTIONALIST. You may be sure that all local tradesman who do not advertise in it give superior to a desire for business.

THERE was fine skating on the ponds during the past week, and Tier's Lake has been the scene of much enjoyment by lovers of such sport. Skaters should remember not to throw rubbish or filth on the ice while enjoying themselves in their exhilarating sport, as such action is detrimental to the interests of the ice merchant.

MR. Noah W. Pike, of this city, feels proud over the fact of his having in his possession a letter sent him by President Garfield, acknowledging the compliment of Mr. Pike naming his newly born son after him (Garfield). The latter's signature resembles closely that signed at the bottom of the Chin——Hold on, though; the election is over.

WITH to-day's issue will begin the publication for one year, of testimonials and other evidence relative to the merit of "Ely's Cream Balm" as a sovereign catholicon for Nasal Catarrh and Hay Fever.

The cures "Cream Balm" effects, and the simplicity of its application has already made it a household remedy in many localities.

THE friends of the Heavenly Rest Mission Chapel at Evona, contemplate giving an entertainment at VanDeventer Hall on Dec. 13, in aid of the Building Fund. It will consist of some very fine Tableaux, Music and Recitations. The Evona people have a talent of getting up affairs worth seeing and hearing, and we hope the Plainfield people will aid them in building their church.

THERE are people who think that sign boards forbidding hunting, fishing or trespassing upon private lands are of little account, and that they may be disregarded with impunity. This is a mistake, as the law makes it an act of trespass to go upon cultivated or enclosed lands for any purpose without permission of the owner who is entitled to recover damages for such trespass.

The editor of the Plainfield Constitutionalist says: "Our confidence in Democracy is unshaken. In defeat as in victory we espouse the grand old party of Jefferson and the People." Bro. Force is a brick, and he has our sympathies.—Gloucester Reporter.

Sympathies for what, Bro. Hamilton? don't deceive yourself with an idea that the Democratic party is dead. The Republican party in New Jersey found that out at the late "Waterloo." Up and at 'em again, is our motto.

THERE was a "bum" show at Vandeventer Hall, Thanksgiving night, which drew together a respectably large audience, under the impression that the show was under the management of Slavin, as advertised. That showman had nothing to do with it. The "combination" was picked up in New York and foisted upon our public by an agent as the genuine "Slavin Combination Troupe." The performers were treated to a shower of stale grapes at the depot upon their departure for New York on a late train.

THE first real snow fall of the season in this vicinity, occurred Wednesday night of last week, the ground being covered with snow to the depth of about two inches. There was an excellent bottom to make good sleighing, had the fall of snow been greater. As it was, many parties took advantage of the smooth condition of the macadamized roads to bring out their sleighs and enjoy for a short time the "first sleigh ride of the season." About one o'clock p. m. the snow began again to fall, continuing for some three hours, but held up before sufficient had fallen to make the sleighing good. A rain storm Saturday evening and Sunday soon made the snow disappear.

THE "Passion Play" will not be introduced on a theatrical stage of New York city, as contemplated. Manager Abbey has decided not to produce the play. A good and wise decision.

THE second snow storm of the season occurred Tuesday night. A fine rain set in Wednesday morning, which continuing all the morning, soon caused the two inch fall of snow to disappear.

PARK avenue, from Front to Second street, was in a terrible slushy condition after the rain on Wednesday. The Street Commissioner set men to work to sweep the snow and water into the receiving basins.

"MOVE the nominations close," left two candidates for Constable out of the cold at the Republican Primary last Monday night—Messrs. Moore and Wm. Wyckoff. The auction smashed at least two slates.

"GIVE the next Council an extra $5,000 and take away the template—a to get a revenue from saloon licenses"—Central Times.

Ah! is that the African in the fence? Give us the money and no more saloon licenses. Look out, voters.

ABOUT half a dozen young gentlemen, styling themselves the "New Jersey Amateur Press Association" met and dined at the Mansion House on Thanksgiving Day. If the copy of the journal issued by them is a specimen of the Amateur's handiwork, it will be a long day before they accomplish the object desired to be attained by them—to control the professional press of the State.

HAVING received the Holiday advertisement of Mr. I. Lederer too late for insertion in this issue, we desire to call the attention of the public to his large and carefully selected stock of ladies' and gentlemen's fine underwear, flannels and other fancy and dry-goods. This merchant is selling the best the market affords at the lowest prices, and solicits an examination of his stock at No. 9 Front street.

Night Telegraph Operator.

A favor long desired by the citizens of Plainfield has at last been accorded by the managers of the Central Railroad. Mr. Frank L Kingsley has been appointed night operator at the telegraph office at the depot. The office will hereafter remain open all night for the transmission of messages.

A Citizen's Meeting.

Advertisements and circulars are out, signed "Com. of Citizens," calling for a meeting at Laing's Hall, to-night (Thursday) for the purpose of nominating a candidate for Mayor in opposition to the Republican candidate, L. V. F. Randolph. The call does not say whether candidates for other city officers are to be selected.

Historic Relics.

A fine collection of curios and antiquities will be exhibited at the Bazaar. Among them china and silver ware from 200 to 275 years old, furniture &c., used during the Revolution. The first cannon cast in America, a bible published in 1653 and other noteworthy articles. The Art collection is said to be entirely new, and promises to attract much attention. Stages from cor. Second street and Park avenue to the Bazaar at frequent intervals; fare ten cents. Telephone your friends at the Bazaar, from Rockfellow's or Robert's. Grand Concert Thursday night at the Bazaar.

Lecture at the Seventh-Day Baptist Church.

Rev. A. H. Lewis, pastor of the 7th Day Baptist Church, will deliver a series of Sunday evening lectures, during the coming Winter, upon the Theological, Religious and Social questions of the day. The design is to afford a Sunday evening service for all who may desire it, as well as for Mr. Lewis' own people. The first lecture will be on next Sunday evening, Dec. 5th, 1880. Theme:—"A Broader View of Things." The usual features of a religious service will accompany the lectures. The public will be welcomed.

Something New for Plainfield.

Much curiosity has been manifested of late to know what the telegraph wire, visible along the tops of the houses on Park avenue, was intended for. It is to connect the Bazaar at the Chapel of the Park avenue church with Rockfellow & Kilbourn's store and the Livery Stable of Roberts and Cadmus. Parties here in town can communicate by telephone with friends at the Bazaar, a half mile distant, and carriages may be ordered at any time. A stage will be run from the corner of Second street and Park avenue at frequent intervals, carrying passengers to or from the Bazaar at 10 cents fare.

A Turkey Barbecue.

Mr. D. I. Smalley, the popular Somerset street butcher, after having twice disposed of a mammoth turkey by chances and afterwards repurchasing it, on Tuesday night last served it up roasted to a party of his invited friends. The fowl, which weighed fully 25 pounds, was cooked to perfection in one of Voehl, the baker's, ovens; and the fortunate ones who sat down to enjoy its juicy meat and such other delicacies of the season as were provided in addition, arose from the table completely satisfied. So generous was the host in supplying pleasures for the palate, that his guests almost wished they were town paupers and under the care of so kind hearted an Overseer of the Poor as Mr. D. I. Smalley.

Dialogue.

BUSINESS MAN—I want to educate my son for business; where shall I send him that he may get the most practical knowledge in the shortest possible space of time?

H. E. OFFICIAL—By all means send him to the Capital City Commercial College at Trenton. He will get there what he wants and waste no time on things unnecessary. I shall send my own boy there as soon as I can spare him. I regard it the best school of the kind in the country.

The above conversation took place not far from Trenton recently. The boy was entered at the College the following week.

It is not to late to send your boy. See the College advertisement, and send for a catalogue.

"Didn't take the Papers."

A man named Demarest, from Englewood, had $4,300 of Hackensack Commission bonds which were due on Nov. 1st. The Commission gave notice through the papers, that those bonds must be presented at the Bank of Bergen county for redemption on the 1st of November. They were not presented, and after the bank failed the bonds were presented to the Commissioner for redemption. The clerk of the Commission refused to take them, because he claimed the Commission had the money for them in the bank when due. The holder was asked whether he had not seen the notice in the papers calling for the bonds. He replied in the negative, on the ground that "he didn't take any papers." If he had read the paper carefully he would have saved his $4,300.

The Y. M. C. A. Concert.

The Y. M. C. A. of Plainfield inaugurated their Winter course of entertainments on Thanksgiving night in the M. E. Church, with a Concert by the Mendelssohn Quintette Club, of Boston, assisted by the talented Soprano, Miss Marie Nellini. The artists comprising the Club were Isidor Schnitzler and Ernst Thiele, violin; Thomas Ryan, clarinette and viola; William Schade, flute and viola, and Frederick Giese, violoncello. The programme was a well selected one, and each artist did themselves credit, and the parts assigned them, receiving frequent encores during the evening. The audience was a large and appreciative one. The next entertainment will be a lecture by the famous English War Correspondent of the London Times, Mr. Archibald Forbes, next Monday evening at 8 o'clock. Subject—"Royal People I have Met."

A Card.

Mr. Carl Feininger and Mr. Clark Evans are pleased to announce a series of three musical recitals at the Park ave. Baptist church, Plainfield N. J. At these recitals they will have the valuable assistance of the New York Quartette Club. For particulars see posters.

Dec. 1st, 1880.

Musical Recitals.

The lovers of classical music of this city are promised a treat in that line far surpassing anything ever before offered the Plainfield public. Mr. Carl Feininger—so great a favorite with Plainfielders—in connection with Mr. Clark W. Evans, announces a series of three musical recitals at the Park avenue Baptist church during the present season. Upon these occasions will be present the New York Quartette Club—whose renditions of instrumental music are considered faultless—who will, in addition to such selections of string and reed music as they will furnish, unite with Mr. Evans on the piano in forming a quintette from which unexcelled harmony of production may be expected.

Well Merited Praise.

A member of the bar of this city is the recipient of high compliments from the Court of Common Pleas.

In a conversation with a representative of this paper concerning the recent trial of William Shafer, Judge McCormack said "the prisoner's counsel [Craig A. Marsh] tried the case remarkably well; no one could have done better. The other judges had expressed like views, and since Mr. Marsh was appointed by the Court, it had been determined to compliment him in open court, before sentence should be pronounced on the prisoner. That this was omitted was an oversight, and I only regret that no opportunity now remains for such public recognition."

Permission to repeat the remarks of His Honor was heartily accorded.

B. B. Dam.

The citizens of Bound Brook generally believing the most potent cause of the prevalence of malaria in their midst was the mill pond, are greatly rejoiced in the removal of the dam, and expect as a consequence that as individuals they shall enjoy immunity from any further malarial attacks, but that their deservedly beautiful town, for situation and convenience for business, will speedily recover its good name, and attract new settlers. Some of her people, however, we find believe that the work undertaken for sanitary purposes and pushed to the present encouraging point is but half accomplished. They think another dam must come out before the work will be completed—the one below town across the Raritan at the lock. This dam it is said backs the water up above Bound Brook as far as Middlebrook, and is believed to be the cause of the malaria existing all along the canal bordering upon the back-water, and its maintenance will continue to affect the health of Bound Brook unfavorably, and that it will not get perfect relief until it is abated. If this be so it deserves the attention of Bound Brook's citizens and the neighborhood affected by it. It is further said that the said dam has no legal right of existence, that the purpose for which it was chartered ceases to exist, and there are no parties at interest to defend it, and that its removal could be far more easily accomplished than the dam at Bound Brook which had a powerful backing in the Lehigh Valley Railroad.—Somerset Messenger.

Personalia.

Dr. H. R. Cannon has taken the agency of the Washington Life Insurance Company of Elizabeth.

Hon. John Egan, of Elizabeth has opened a real estate office in Park Row, N. Y., making a specialty of New Jersey property.

Mr. and Mrs. Steuart Whitney started on an extended wedding tour, immediately after their marriage last Wednesday night. Their many friends wish them a pleasant journey.

Mr. J. W. Hazeltine, formerly of Asbury Park, and who is connected with the New York Sun, has removed to Elizabeth and taken up his abode in Morris avenue. We have room for intellectual men.

MR. CHAS. Brocksmith formerly of Westfield, and now proprietor of the City Hotel, Elizabeth, received serious injuries some two weeks since by being thrown from a buggy at Newark, as he was driving under an elevated railroad bridge. He is slowly improving.

"Uncle Peter" Boice of Piscataway, 82 years of age, was noticed skating on a brook running through his place last Friday. The old gentleman seemed as hale and vigorous as many younger ones, and in a condition to enjoy the pleasures and pastimes of life for years to come.

Our esteemed young Democratic friend, of Somerset County, Mr. Richard H. Brokaw, did something on Wednesday of last week he was never accused of before—he got married. Miss Stella Shurts, of Bound Brook, was the happy lady in the case. The best wishes of the numerous friends of "Dick" in this vicinity, are with the happy couple for their future prosperity.

Mr. Thomas H. Keller, one of the handsomest young men our city boasts, united his fortunes with one of Plainfield's fair daughters—a very charming young lady of one of the first families—on Thanksgiving Eve, at the residence of the parents of the bride. Their tour of two weeks will extend through the South. The many friends of Mr. Keller in this city will regret to hear that he intends to make Plainfield his future residence. Joyful greetings.—Elizabeth Herald.

Another of Plainfield's fair maidens has been captured, and two loving hearts made happy. The parties concerned were Miss Avis M. Mosher and Mr. Edgar B. Vail, who united themselves in marriage, according to the ceremony adopted by the Society of Friends, at the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. Avis L. Mosher, on Peace Street, Thanksgiving Night. There was a large number of friends and relatives present, and the presents were numerous and handsome. The happy couple departed on the 10:26 p. m. train for the groom's home in Newark, where furnished rooms, ready for housekeeping, awaited their reception. As they left the house, they were showered with handsful of rice, and words of well wishes for their future prosperity. We extend our congratulations to the newly wedded pair.

Thanksgiving Day.

The streets of our city presented an animated appearance on Thanksgiving Day, being thronged with people. Most of the stores and places of business were closed, and religious services held in the churches.

The features of the day were the visit of two target companies from Newark and the shooting match in North Plainfield.

About half-past ten o'clock in the morning, a target company composed of the employees of the Celluloid Brush Manufacturing Company, of Newark, arrived at the depot on a special train. Headed by Voss' Band, the command marched with soldierly precision through Park Avenue and Somerset streets to North Plainfield, where they indulged in target practice at Hyde's range, several handsome and costly prizes being awarded the best shots. The men presented a fine appearance in their neat uniforms, and conducted themselves in a gentlemanly and becoming manner during their stay in our city. They dined at Miller's Hotel, and were eulogistic of the hospitality accorded them there.

About the same time the "Halsey Engineer Corps," of Newark, arrived on a special train, and were met at the depot by a delegation of the "Morris Guards" of this city. The "Halsey's" were attired in the handsome uniforms worn by them during the campaign. The Morris Guards turned out in citizens' dress. The company, headed by a band, marched through some of our principal streets, and elicited applause by their fine marching and appearance. They finally proceeded to Netherwood, where they indulged in target practice, competing for handsome prizes. Upon their return they were entertained by the Morris Guards at rooms on North Avenue, next to Holly Tree Inn, where the hours were passed away pleasantly until it was time to depart for home.

The members of "Warren Engine Co., No. 2," marched to the head of New Grove Street, North Plainfield, headed by martial music, and there indulged in target practice, under the appellation of [illegible]. The target was completely riddled with bullets, and had to be carried home in pieces by color bearer Jacob Ralphson, Esq. The prizes, which were announced as numerous and costly, will be given out as soon as they are purchased and it is ascertained who came nearest the bull's-eye.

The advertised shooting match for the celebrated stallion "Young Jersey," which was to come off near Blatz's Hotel, North Plainfield, did not take place on account of the severe snow storm prevailing, which also sadly interfered with the target companies. Several sweepstake matches at pigeons and glass balls were shot off, and the shooting for the horse postponed to Wednesday, Dec. 8th, when it is supposed a large crowd will be in attendance.

Railroad Changes.

The changes made in the time table of the C. R. R., consequent upon the combination with the Baltimore and Ohio, are as follows:

From New York, the 9:05 a. m. train is changed to 9:30; while the evening trains, formerly leaving at 7:15 and 7:45 are taken off and trains leaving at 8 and 8:30 substituted.

From Plainfield, trains at 6:08 and 11:21 are added, while the 3:51 p. m. now leaves at 4:08, the 8:24 at 8:19 and the 9:32 at 9:37.

The Philadelphia express for New York at 10:36 on Sunday mornings, stops regularly at Plainfield.

An Evening of Elocution and Oratory.

Miss Beulah Verus, an elocutionist of great talent judging from the favorable manner with which she has been received by her audiences, is at present stopping in this city with the intention of giving an entertainment at Van Deventer Hall on next Friday the 10th inst. The lady is assisted by Mr. James E. Leary, not unknown to the New York public, and the two artists unite together in furnishing a programme of selections from Shakespeare and other writers, calculated to display in an attractive manner their merits as elocutionists and orators. Miss Verus's plan is to dispose of, by personal solicitation, enough tickets to meet the expenses of the entertainment, after which to distribute among the ladies of the city a number of complimentaries—thereby bringing together a select audience calculated to establish for herself a reputation that will be of value during future seasons. We would solicit for this young lady the support of the public in her praiseworthy endeavors.

Death of an Old Resident.

Our community was quite shocked last Friday to hear of the sudden death of one of its well-known and most respected citizens—DAVID THICKSTUN. Mr Thickstun was taken suddenly ill of billious cholic, while at his office on Saturday, Nov. 20th. He was taken to his home, but despite the best of medical aid, he died on Saturday, Nov 26th. David Thickstun was born at Martin's Dock, near New Brunswick, Piscataway township, in September, 1809. He came to Plainfield in 1837 and followed his trade, that of carpenter, for a number of years. The first house he built was that now owned by the estate of the late John D. Titsworth, on Second street, which he contracted for in 1836. About thirty years ago he formed a co-partnership with Mr. David J. Boice in the coal and lumber business on Cherry street, and continued as a member of the firm up to the time of his death. He also carried on the flag stone business in his own name since the year 1873. Mr. Thickstun was a staunch Democrat, though he would never accept any political office, excepting that of Judge of Election. He was an honest and upright man, highly respected in the community in which he lived so many years, and his presence will be missed. His funeral took place from the 1st Baptist church of which he was an active member, on Monday afternoon last, and was largely attended. Rev. Dr. Yerkes preached an effective sermon, highly eulogistic of deceased.

New Railway Facilities.

The Baltimore and Ohio Railway Company, which has for a long time past been endeavoring to perfect connections whereby it would have a terminus in New York, have at last been successful and on Wednesday morning last, through trains for Washington, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis commenced running daily by way of Bound Brook and Philadelphia. The World of Wednesday has the following in relation to the new combination:

"A few years ago the Legislature of Pennsylvania granted a charter for the building of what is known as the junction road in Philadelphia and the suburbs to connect the tracks of the Philadelphia and Reading, the Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore and the Pennsylvania railroads. Although by the terms of the charter the junction road was to be built and used jointly by the three roads, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company built the road at its own expense, rendering no accounts to the others, and then assumed the exclusive control of the junction road. In consequence of the refusal of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company to allow them to participate in the benefits conferred by the charter to build the junction road, the Philadelphia and Reading and the Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore companies began suit against the Pennsylvania Company in which they were joined by the Baltimore and Ohio Railway Company, which has for a long time been trying to gain a terminus at New York in order to secure a part of the immense freight business between New York and Philadelphia. About six weeks ago this suit was decided by the United States Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, the Court ordering the Pennsylvania road to render construction accounts to the other two roads whose charter rights in the junction road were confirmed. After the decision arrangements were set on foot for a combination between the Philadelphia and Reading, the Baltimore and Ohio and the Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore companies to run through trains to the West via the Bound Brook route from New York, thus establishing a great competing line with the Pennsylvania Railway, which has heretofore been the only line running through trains to Chicago and St. Louis. Three trains to Washington now daily pass over the road through this city, leaving New York at 9 a. m., 7 and 11:30 p. m. Returning arriving at New York, 6:40 a. m., 4 and 9:22 p. m. The only through Washington train which stops at Plainfield for New York is that which leaves here at 6:46 a. m.

The Republican Primary.

No sooner have passed away the wire-pullings, pipe-layings and other manipulations pertaining to the late Presidential campaign, than the Republican party of our city is plunged into the midst of the more exciting issues of a local canvass. While other localities are resting after the excitement of a national election, Plainfield is engaged in the selection of its municipal officers. By an outsider, aware of the preponderance of Republicans in the city, it would be supposed that no excitement would arise out of what must perforce be a one-sided contest. But we are told that "when Greek meets Greek then comes the tug of war." The Republican party of Plainfield, we are sorry to record, is not a band of brethren dwelling together in unity, but an association divided against itself. It is composed of innumerable cliques and divisions. License and anti-license, money and no-money, water-works, malaria, macadamized streets, etc., are but a few of the issues supported and fought against by the different factions. Discord and disunion have arisen, and the "party of moral ideas" is at variance in its opinion as to what will have the greatest tendency towards the welfare of the public.

Before the Primary of Monday evening last, the claims of three gentlemen for the office of Mayor, were presented to the people in many ways by the candidates and their friends. In doors and on the streets, at public meetings and on the trains, by argument and persuasion, those eligible or capable to cast a vote in consultation were told that the good of the city would be best cared for by the election of this one, or that its prosperity depended on the election of that. The consequence was that Van Deventer Hall, on the evening of the primary, was literally packed from floor to ceiling. Besides those who came with a right to vote, were a number who intended to try and vote, and a fair sprinkling of the Democratic party who thoroughly enjoyed the spectacle before them.

The meeting was organized by the selection of Mr. John W. Murray as chairman, and the appointment of the necessary secretaries. Nominations being called for candidates for the office of Mayor, the names of Messrs. F. Knowland, Washington Lithgow, L. V. F. Randolph and W. McD Coriell were presented. The mixed political complexion of the crowd that gathered in the front of the Hall, within easy reach of the hat and convenient for voting often and casting a full ballot—impelled the passage of a motion providing for the appointment of challengers whose decision as to the eligibility of any voter was to be decisive. Six tellers were then selected and three each placed at the front of the stage on both sides of the middle aisle down which the voter passed before the watchful eyes of the challengers. The latter committee had their hands full in weeding out such as they thought had already voted or were not members in good standing of the Republican party. Their labors, however, were thrown away, as after the discussions and disputes that arose the party objected to passed his vote up to the tellers and had it deposited—if it was the right kind.

The first ballot resulted in no choice; 318 being necessary, of which account each candidate received as follows: Randolph, 183; Knowland, 135; Lithgow, 117; Coriell, 2. A second ballot resulted in Knowland receiving 142; Randolph, 182; Lithgow, 89; Coriell, 3 votes. A third ballot was taken as follows: Knowland, 162; Randolph, 184; Lithgow, 81. It was not until the fourth ballot that a choice was made; upon this ballot Randolph received 185 and Knowland 169, the other candidates having been previously dropped.

During this selection, which was not decided until eleven o'clock, the other nominations were made. Not little opposition arose for many of the offices. Mr. J. W. Murray defeated Dr. B. D. Burlingham for School Trustee; Mr. G. V. F. Randolph defeated Mr. John Cassidy for Freeholder; and the following Council ticket was selected: W. S. Darling, Jno. M. Whiton, I. W. Rushmore, Wm. McD. Coriell, O. F. Wasting, C. S. Gulon, Col. Theo. Hamilton, A. H. Smith, R. W. Tyler, W. R. Pobe and Wm. Flanders.

Of course it is natural to suppose that the result of such an exciting contest would be the disappointment of some one, but strange to say the defeated ones claim the glory. By whose receipt they concoct this salve for their wounds, is unknown to us. It must be a process of imagination only possessed by the Republican party, as we have heard as yet of no Democrat who claims that Hancock got the glory of the late election.

FIRE MATTERS.

Chief Voorhees had the covers of the fire wells salted on Friday last, to keep them from freezing up.

The cover over the fire well on Second Street, near Park Avenue, is too high. The road bed about it needs filling in and grading.

The members of "Gazelle" Hose Co. have been victimized by a self-constituted member soliciting subscriptions for the Company and appropriating the funds to himself. Let us Hope he will be caught and made to disgorge.

The ball of Hose Co. No. 2 at Blatz's Hall Thanksgiving Eve, was largely attended.

It is claimed that a State law exempts active firemen from paying poll tax. How about this, Messrs. Commissioners?

There was no business transacted at a meeting of the Fire Board Wednesday night, on account of absence of the Secretary, whose presence, it was claimed, was necessary. The Board adjourned to Tuesday evening, Dec. 7th.

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS.

The following is the list of Petit Jurors drawn by Sheriff Thompson before the Common Pleas Judges, on Tuesday, the 23d, to serve at the December term of Court:

Bernards—Wm. DeMun, Daniel S. Doty, Israel Barralow, Wm. Ludgh, Geo. M. Baldwin, Geo. T. Buse.

Bedminster—Rodry Ludlow, John M. Woods, Erastus Randall.

Branchburg—Alexander B. Brokaw, Henry Schenck, Joseph Ramsey.

Mr. John VanArsdale is engaged in fencing and ornamenting with trees the handsome property lately built upon and laid out by him for a permanent residence. Facing on Grove and Duer streets and Park Place, it forms one of the most attractive places in North Plainfield.

The brick house that has been building on the Embury property at the corner of Grove street and Mercer avenue, is now completed and offered for sale. Mr. Charles Jacques the architect who planned it deserves great credit for its beauty of construction, and Mr Daniel Pierson the builder has erected the structure in a style and manner that makes it one of the most complete and desirable places of residence in the city.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

The fall of snow Wednesday night was hailed with joy by the rabbit hunters, but was not appreciated by the "bunnies." A large number of this species of game was slaughtered in this vicinity on Friday and Saturday.

The recent fall of snow did more toward exterminating quail than months of re-stocking by Game Protective Societies can make amends for. The birds lay close and were undoubtedly shot by ruthless pot-hunters as they were found huddled together in a bunch.

A red fox has been seen on the hills back of Scotch Plains, and it is proposed that a party be made up to try and effect his capture.

This is game season and our sportsmen are cautioned that it is just about as safe to pull a gun over the fence by the muzzle as it is to lead a mule out of the stable by the tail.

James Mallin, of Jersey City, went out to the county road, Thursday of last week, with some friends to shoot at a mark. He was chatting gayly, and when it came to his turn to shoot he had forgotten whether his gun was loaded or not. While examining the weapon it was discharged, the contents entering his head and killing him instantly.

NOT OPEN TO THAT OBJECTION.

Temperance people often say that most of the popular medicines they see advertised are alcoholic rum. That is true of many, but not of Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy." The doctor agrees with his temperance friends that it is better to die of disease than of drink. Favorite Remedy cures Kidney Troubles, Liver Complaints, Constipation of the Bowels, as nothing else does or ever did. It drives out sickness, it cools the blood. It costs only a Dollar to try it. Ask your druggist or send to the Doctor at Rondout, N. Y.

MESSRS. ELY BROS., Druggists, Owego, N. Y.: Your "Cream Balm" differs from all other preparations, as it does all your claim for it. I have been cured of Catarrh of many years' standing by its use, and my sense of smell has been restored. For colds in the head it works like magic. E. H. Sherwood, National State Bank, Elizabeth, N. J. Aug. 12, 1879.—See adv't.

MESSRS. ELY BROS., Druggists, Owego, N. Y.: For the past three winters I have been afflicted with Catarrh and cold in the head. I applied several remedies without good results. Last winter I used your Cream Balm, and found it accomplished all you represented. T. F. McCormick, Judge Common Pleas, Elizabeth, N. J. Aug. 1880.—See Adv't.

Governor-elect Ludlow will be inaugurated on the third Tuesday of January, 1881. The next Legislature will assemble on Tuesday, January 11, when Gov. McClellan will present his final message.

By Universal Accord,

Ayer's Cathartic Pills are the best of all purgatives for family use. They are the product of long, laborious, and successful chemical investigation, and their extensive use, by Physicians in their practice, and by all civilized nations, proves them the best and most effectual purgative Pill that medical science can devise. Being purely vegetable no harm can arise from their use. In intrinsic value and curative powers no other Pills can be compared with them, and every person, knowing their virtues, will employ them, when needed. They keep the system in perfect order, and maintain in healthy action the whole machinery of life. Mild, searching and effectual, they are specially adapted to the needs of the digestive apparatus, derangements of which they prevent and cure, if timely taken. They are the best and safest physic to employ for children and weakened constitutions, where a mild, but effectual cathartic is required. For sale by all dealers.

TESTIMONIALS:

* * * * "You ask me to favor you with my experience and impressions of Miss NELLA F. BROWN. I seldom if ever yield to requests of this nature. I feel less hesitation in this instance because of Miss Brown's exceeding modesty and unpretentiousness, which are characteristics of genius.

I am informed that she never received instruction in the conventional school of elocution, which fact is greatly in her favor. In this she may be compared with Fanny Kemble and the late Charlotte Cushman, who were illustrious examples of what genius may attain without elocutionary training.

Miss Brown has appeared twice upon the "Star" Course in one season to the eminent satisfaction of vast audiences, and will appear again this coming season. This, I take it, is a sufficient endorsement. Yours very truly,

T. B. PUGH,

Manager of "Star" Course, Phila.

POETRY.

DON'T GIVE UP.

Bear up firmly in your trouble;
It's unmanly to complain,
Tax more strongly every muscle,
Work as moved all you gain.

Have more faith in your own labor,
Make the brain work for the hand,
Lean not on the host of neighbors,
Self-reliant—be a man.

Start up firm your own commencement,
Like the insects in the sod,
Every day make some advancement,
Like the ever growing tree.

Take no thought of evil thinking,
Press on, hope on, never fear;
Scorn the jeerer and the shrinking,
Let the world bring up the rear.

Death will strike the unprotected,
Laugh at all such foolish fears,
Set a life that is great hearted
Knows no death, nor childish fears.

If you gain not all you hoped for,
If you fail, you are not slain;
We will praise the good endeavor,
But you hope and try again.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

For "The Constitutionalist."

AUNT DEBBY AND HER NIECE.

Miss Debby Winthrop surveyed her well-filled pantry with a satisfied air. "I guess everything is all ready," she said to herself, "the cakes are a lovely brown; the mince-meat is extra good this year, and the turkeys seemed to grow on purpose for Thanksgiving Day."

Miss Debby's soliloquy was cut short by the sudden opening of the kitchen door, and the next instant she was taken captive by a pair of clinging arms, while a sweet mouth kissed her rapturously, and a glad voice exclaimed "Auntie, Auntie! don't you know me?"

"Bless me! Why it is Patty. Dear child, how you have grown. I didn't dare hope you would be home for to-morrow. You have fairly taken my breath away."

"Oh! no. I wish you had enough left to say 'welcome home,' especially after I walked all the way from the depot," said the girl, gaily, releasing her aunt to pirouette round the room and finally drop on her knees before the glowing fire.

"Why, Patty, it is over seven miles!"

"I know it," returned the sprite, "but I was in such a hurry to see you, I couldn't wait for a conveyance. The station master did offer to try and find one, but I knew there was a very good chance of there being none to find."

"Patty," asked Miss Debby, anxiously, did you come alone? Are—"

"Oh! I came alone because the whim seized me. The others are all right. Business detained Uncle George, and Aunt Edith stayed with him. They were out when I decided to start; but I left a note on the table to tell them. Auntie, I'm warm now, but very hungry."

Miss Debby needed no second hint, and hastened to set the table; Patty, meanwhile, darting through the house like a humming-bird.

Mr. and Mrs. Winthrop, had had a large family. Nine children had successively grown up and married, leaving only Debby, the youngest, with her parents. Before she was twenty-five, they both died, and she was alone, till Patty, being left an orphan, came to live with her Aunt Debby. When Patty was about thirteen, Mr. George Winthrop and his wife visited the farm, and offered to send the child to a fine seminary for three years, if, at the expiration of that time, she would travel with them for two years more. Aunt Debby, for her niece's benefit, consented, and thus the two were separated for five years.

You can judge what quantities they had to talk of, and how impossible it would be to record their entire conversation. I will pass on to later in the evening, when the fire had burned down low and clear, and Patty had blown the lamp out, "so the moonlight would show clearer," she said. But she gave the moon merely a glance and then curled up on an ottoman, and gazed intently before her.

"Are you tired?" asked Miss Debby. "Shall we go up stairs, dear?"

"Auntie, we met some very pleasant people abroad," was the irrelevant reply.

"I suppose so."

"Especially in Italy," with a little rosy flush—or was it the reflection from the ruddy hearth?

Miss Debby made no answer, but played caressingly with her darling's long brown curls; so the girl continued:

"One gentleman was a splendid artist; I often visited his studio with his son."

"That was pleasant," was the unsuspicious reply.

"Yes, very. Aunt Debby," coaxingly, "will there be room for two extra visitors to-morrow?"

"Certainly; the more the merrier. Who are they?"

"Oh! Auntie, Auntie, cannot you guess? The artist from Italy, and—and—his son."

Miss Debby started, and a surprised smile lit up her face, even while her eyes filled with tears. "Well! I expected to lose my little Patty, sometime," she said.

"That is the reason I ran away from them all; I wanted to have a quiet conversation with you alone. And, Auntie, if you consent, I have promised Fred we should be engaged to-morrow. Aunt Edith approves and so does Uncle George."

Then, with their arms round each other the two talked much longer, and Miss Debby told Patty of her own romance, of which she had never before spoken.

"When I was about seventeen, there was a hotel started in the village, you know the house—that large one at the cross-roads. Well! I being young and, as they used to say, beautiful, became quite a favorite with the boarders. Before the first season had ended, I was engaged to marry one of the gentlemen, and truly did we love each other. But we were both passionate and impetuous and the courtship was soon ended. It came about in this way: My most intimate friend was a young lady who, I knew liked my lover very much. Our engagement, by my own wish, was kept secret from all save our parents; it was rather foolish, and had I not insisted on it, my life would have been very different. One of those days when everything seems to go wrong, my affianced came to see me, and I went to receive him in an extremely irritable mood. Some fancied neglect of his vexed me, also, and I taunted him with the idea that he should have chosen Miss Mayville instead of myself. At first he protested, then, exasperated in his turn, angrily declared he certainly would think the matter over, and that he was aware of Miss Mayville's superior amiability. That was enough! Five minutes later I sat in the room alone, while the echo of bitter, reproachful words rang in my ears, and we were parted forever.

"Then, Patty, I repented bitterly, but it was too late, he had gone directly to Miss Mayville's, proposed and been accepted. Two weeks later, they were married and immediately crossed the ocean. I received one letter from him the day they sailed, a noble, manly letter. He was wretched I could tell, though he made no complaints. He wrote to beg my forgiveness for what he had done in a fit of passion. He had gone away to learn to love his wife and I am sure he succeeded, for she was worthy."

"Have you ever heard from him since?" inquired Patty softly when the recital was concluded.

"Never, dear. I have told you this that you may be circumspect in your actions, and entail upon yourself a life-long misery as I have done," and Patty firmly resolved in her own mind, that she would be the most discreet maiden in existence.

The two soon retired, and Patty, quite worn out instantly fell asleep. Not so Miss Debby! The revival of old memories brought a revival of old emotions also; and long after midnight she surprised herself by breaking into a hearty fit of crying. "What a fool I am" she vehemently exclaimed, and dashing off the tears, endeavored to calm herself. Then she sat up, and watched Patty's face as the moonlight revealed it. Very fair and peaceful it was, and the sight seemed soothing, for presently, she, too, yielded to drowsiness, and the two slept on, equally unconscious of what the morrow might bring forth.

The next morning Patty was up early, and the old house seemed to brighten wonderfully with her presence. Up and down she went, putting dainty touches here and there, till the first detachment of relations arrived from a neighboring village, and she went down to receive them; for Debby was entirely absorbed in the mysteries of turkey "stuffing," and could by no means leave the kitchen.

Then it was time for the morning train, and when Patty saw the loaded wagons returning from the station, she was attacked with a sudden fit of shyness and ran up stairs to hide, for she discerned at some distance a certain black felt hat, whose owner she could scarcely prepare herself to meet. She was soon found out, however, by her particular party, who were escorted up by a troop of cousins, and assailed with various exclamations.

"My dear Patty, I am exhausted with anxiety. We didn't see your note until this morning and you can imagine what a night we spent," from Aunt Edith.

"Well! miss, next time you run off that way, please leave a large lettered placard in a prominent position; for I don't relish nocturnal expeditions around the city," from her Uncle; and:

"My dearest girl, have you asked Miss Debby, and does she consent?" in an eager whisper from Fred Irving.

The answer to this last, was also inaudible, and the assembled cousins were electrified to see Patty vanish in the young gentleman's big overcoat. With many significant nods and winks, they all withdrew, and the pair had a rapturous five minutes together. Then Uncle George must see Debby, and they accompanied him to the kitchen, there to behold a most unlooked-for sight.

Leaning with one arm on the mantelpiece, stood Mr. Irving, senior, whose absence nobody had missed in the general confusion; while Aunt Debby's face was scarlet. She turned at the sound of the intruders, and to relieve the very evident embarrassment, exclaimed almost angrily to Patty:

"Why did you not mention a name, and save me from being so startled to find in this gentleman an old friend of my father's."

"I—I don't know," stammered bewildered Patty. "I thought I told you his name—" she stopped, for in a flash she comprehended this unexpected scene. The artist was Aunt Debby's old lover, who being a widower, and meeting connections of his former sweetheart, had taken the opportunity to return and find out if she still retained any preference for him.

By dint of much manoeuvering, Patty contrived to take the others back into the parlor—"I've no doubt Mr. Irving will make himself at home," she said; and it is to be presumed he did make himself "at home," judging by Patty's remark to her Aunt Debby, at the conclusion of another long talk that evening: "Shall I be your daughter-in-law or niece, Auntie?"

THE FASHIONS.

Turbans are still in favor.

The fashion in children's suits varies but little.

Solid dark colors prevail in the latest styles of hosiery.

All dresses for little girls are made high in the neck.

Some of the new black stockings have red bands woven into them.

The "washerwoman's overskirt" is worn with very showy dresses.

Plaid stockings are the rage, and the Macgregor colors are favorites.

The boots worn by little girls are higher than those of last season.

Black gloves are always in order, and are worn this season more than ever.

Silver is now produced in delicate buff tints, so as to be a perfect imitation of bamboo.

The newest gold cloth is of fine net, wrought with leaves and blossoms and bright colors.

[illegible] is a shade of coppery yellow that is very handsome and luminous for evening wear.

Some of the new chemisettes are made of rows of lace placed with the edges pointing upwards.

Military-looking mantles with double capes in front for young ladies, and even for school-girls, are in favor.

The new packs of cards that De la Rue has sent over have backs in a cashmere pattern with that blending of color which just now is the rage.

The most fashionable low shoes for the house is so low that it would appear difficult to keep it upon the foot.

A new device for a bridesmaid's present is a silver arrow with the initials of the bride and bridegroom in gold.

The latest freak in finishing a basque is to cut the lower edge into leaves and insert a plaiting between the leaves.

[illegible] are especially meant for the street, but are often worn in the house, though not made a part of house dresses.

Bridesmaids sometimes wear short dresses made of mull, trimmed with embroidery of white Languedoc lace.

The belt which was worn all around the waist is now seen in front only, and nothing will be left of it but the buckle.

Large sleeves form the conspicuous feature of the new cloaks, this season fur-trimmed garments taking precedence in that respect.

Note paper with comic designs in [illegible] at the head of the page is a new [illegible], but is not likely to be considered "good form."

One of the most pleasing features of the present toilettes is the profusion of lace. Cascades of it run and ripple all over the costume.

The fancy for red is displayed this season in cloaks made of fine scarlet cloth and trimmed with a new braid called vermicelli.

On one of the French pattern bonnets this season is a coronet of eight humming birds, each in its nest. The bonnet is called the aviary.

Street costumes are now generally made up with warm linings, so that a supplementary wrap may be dispensed with as long as possible.

The first thing to do after buying a ready-made plush jacket is to remove about two-thirds of the wadding, which is quilted into the lining.

The solitaire jewel for finger-rings has ceased to be in favor. Instead, two or three stones are set slanting on a heavy gold band, or a blazing diamond is guarded by two pearls.

For plain wraps just now the choice lies between the serviceable diagonal cloth with its [illegible] fleece and the loosely-woven, yet heavy cheviots.

A present whim is placing a genuine spinning-wheel, or the smaller model of one, in the drawing room, among other objects pertaining to a picturesque past.

The proper paper-knife to accompany the Greek and Roman trifles seen on a lady's secretary is a double-edged dagger, with a little classic figure on the handle.

Amethyst, bronze, myrtle green, and garnet are the colors that are the most effective in plush. The best qualities are all silk, with smooth deep pile as heavy as that of moleskin velvet.

There is nothing "patchy" in the new arrangements of two materials in a dress. As a rule one fabric is used for the upper part of the costume and another for the skirts, though this rule has its exceptions when plush, or brocaded borders, or drapery, are necessary on the lower skirt.

COMFORT FOR OLD MAIDS.

Old maids are useful. They can cook, sew and take care of the children and nurse sick people, and generally play the piano. Old bachelors are useless. They do not even know how to drive nails or split wood.

Old maids are amiable. If one wants anything done that require patience and kindness of heart, a single lady is sure to be the one to do it.

Old bachelors are ill-natured. They snub children, despise babies and hate young mothers, and are always so busily employed in seeing that other people take care of them that they have not a moment to give to any one else.

Old maids are nice looking, and "young for their years." Old bachelors generally have red noses, rheumatism in the knees, bald heads and mouths that turn down at the corners.

Old maids can make a home of one little room, and they cook delicious meals for one over the gas jet, in cunning little tin kettles, besides making all their own wardrobes. Old bachelors need an army of tailors, waiters, cooks and distant relatives to keep them comfortable.

When old maids are ill they tie up their heads in pocket handkerchiefs, take homeopathic pellets out of two bottles alternately, and get well again. When old bachelors are ill they go to bed and send for four doctors; have a consultation, [illegible] all the amiable married men who belong to the club to sit up with them at night, besides a hired nurse; they telegraph to their relations, and do their best to persuade the world that they are dying.

When an old maid travels she takes a sandwich, a piece of pound cake and a bottle of lemonade in a basket, and lunches comfortably in the carriage. When an old bachelor travels he orders a meal in courses at the station, and raves because he had no time to eat it before the "fifteen minutes for refreshments" has expired.

Old maids drink weak tea, and it cures their headaches.

Old bachelors drink strong liquor, and it gives them headaches.

Old maids are modest. They think their youth is over and their beauty gone. If after awhile some autumnal love is given them they take it as a sort of a miracle, and hope people will not laugh at them for "marrying so late in life."

"SICK FOR THIS."

They drove into town behind a cross-eyed mule and a spavined horse. They looked contented, but one member of the party was the head of the house, for she handled the ribbons, and when they halted she hitched the team, while he stood demurely by and took the basket of eggs and her shopping satchel as she handed them out. They disposed of the produce at the grocery, and then entered a dry goods store.

She made a few trifling purchases of thread, pins, needles and such things, and then called for two knots of yarns.

"That won't be enough, Mary," said the man, pulling at her dress.

"I guess I know what I'm buying," she retorted.

"But it ain't more than half what you have had along," he persisted.

"Wal, that's none o' your business, these socks are going to be for me, and if I want 'em short you can have yours come way up to your neck if you want to."

The old man bowed to the inevitable with a long sigh as his partner turned to the clerk and said:

"Two yards cheap shirtin', if you please."

"That ain't enough, Mary," said the old man, plucking at her dress again.

"Yes 'tis."

"No, it ain't."

"Wal, it's all you'll git," she snapped.

"Put it up then, Mister," said he, turning to the clerk; "put it up and we won't have any."

"Who's doin' this buyin' I should like to know?" hissed the woman.

"You are, Mary, you are," he admitted, "but you can't palm off no short shirts on me."

"You act like a fool, John Spiner!"

"Mebbe I do, Mary, but I'll be darned to gosh if I'll have a shirt—no, not if I go naked."

"Wal, I say two yards are enough to make any one two shirts," she snapped.

"Mebbe that's enough for you, Mary," he said very quietly, "s'pose you can get along with a collar button and a neck band, but that ain't me, and I don't propose to freeze my legs to save eight cents."

"Git what you want, then," shrieked she, pushing him over the stool, "git ten yards, git a dozen pieces if you want 'em, but remember that I'll make you sick for this."

"Four yards, if you please mister—four yards," said he to the clerk, "and just remember," he continued, "if you hear of 'em findin' me with my head busted, friz to death in a snow drift, just remember you heard the way she would make me sick."

And grasping his bundle he followed his better half out of the door.

A LITTLE LONELY GRAVE.

Mrs. S. O. Jewett gives the following little piece of pathos in an account of her summer wanderings, in Harper's Magazine. "One afternoon," she says, "I found something I had never seen before—a little grave alone in a wide pasture which had once been a field. The nearest house was at least two miles away, but by hunting for it I found a very old cellar, where the child's home must have been, not very far off, along the slope.

"It must have been a great many years ago that the house had stood there; and the slate headstone was worn away by the rain and wind, so there was nothing to be read, if indeed there had ever been any letters on it. It had looked many a storm in the face, and many a red sunset.

"I suppose the woods near by had grown and been cut, and grown again, since it was put there. There was an old sweet-brier bush growing on the short little grave, and in the grass underneath I found a ground-sparrow's nest.

"It was like a little neighborhood, and I have felt ever since as if I belonged to it, and I wondered then if one of the young ground-sparrows was not always sent to take the nest when the old ones were done with it, so they came back in the spring year after year to live there, and there were always the stone and the sweet-brier bush and the birds to remember the child.

"It was such a lonely place in that wide field under the great sky, and yet it was so comfortable, too; but the sight of the little grave at first touched me strangely, and I tried to picture to myself the procession that came out from the house the day of the funeral, and I thought of the mother in the evening after all the people had gone home, and how she missed the baby, and kept seeing the new grave out there in the twilight."

AFTER THE ELECTION.

The Brooklyn Plymouth Church Republicans, headed by that distinguished political saint Henry Ward Beecher, have issued an address urgently favoring a revision of the present tariff, of which they say—"The gross abuses and anomalies of the existing tariff cannot be defended upon any theory, and are not founded upon any."

The tariff views presented by those gentlemen as reformers, now the election is over and false issues have borne fruit, are unquestionably sound, but, the action of themselves and fellow partisans during the recent Presidential campaign, when the tariff as it stands was extolled as the very safeguard of prosperity, and Democrats were denounced as free-traders and ruin intenders, still emits the rank odor of hypocrisy.

Thousands of votes were filched from the Democratic ticket because of the fraudulent cry raised about the tariff. The authors of that tirade knew at the time it was coined to deceive, and the day approaches when the victims of such deception will rise and feel the falsity practiced upon them by unprincipled politicians bent only on perpetuating office-holding power.

A tariff for revenue, based upon practical business principles, and framed to afford prudent and permanent protection to every legitimate pursuit and industry, small as well as large, but withholding swindling tribute to special favorites of every name and kind, is the Democratic doctrine.

It is honest and just, and must eventually triumph, unless the American people are willing to bow their necks to the exacting serfdom of heartless monopolists.

PUBLIC PLUNDER.

Judge Black, of Pennsylvania, in a communication to the New York Chamber of Commerce, denying the legal right of Railroad Corporations to pursue the arbitrary line of action many of them are doing in this country, among other startling facts makes public the following:

"Most of our Western roads were built with the proceeds of public lands granted mediately or immediately by the United States to the several companies which now have them in charge. They did not really cost the stockholders anything and in some cases they got lands worth a great deal more than all expenses of making, stocking and running the road.

The two companies between Omaha and San Francisco raised in cash out of Government bonds, lands and mortgages of their franchises four or five times as much as they necessarily expended upon the roads. The stockholders without paying anything put the enormous surplus into their pockets."

The public domain, instead of being held as a sacred trust for the benefit of the people, is thus squandered upon mercenary speculators, who, in turn, are combining ill-gotten wealth to control legislation and administration for the further advancement of selfish ends.

It is time to raise the political battle shout—DOWN WITH ALL PUBLIC PLUNDERERS!

Georgia 11

The code of Georgia provides that the Governor shall notify the electors to meet at the capitol on the first Monday in December to be ready to vote on the Wednesday following to cast their vote. This the Governor has done, and in accordance with this notice the electors would have met this week. The Constitution of the United States, however, provides that "the Congress may determine the time of choosing the electors, and the day on which they shall give their votes, which day shall be the same throughout the United States," and section 135 of the U. S. Revised Statutes provides that the electors for each State shall meet and give their votes upon the first Wednesday in December."

THE MESSAGE.

The last annual message of Mr. Hayes, President by virtue of an Electoral Commission, has been given through Congress to the people of the United States. It is of great length, and plainly evidences that several hands were employed in its compilation. It not only ventures upon ground foreign to the Presidential office, but makes assertions most singular for a man whose official position should compel him to be thoroughly familiar with every line of the Constitution. For instance, Mr. Hayes says:

"Under the Constitution, the President and Heads of Departments are to make nominations for office. The Senate is to advise and consent to appointments, and the House of Representatives is to accuse and prosecute faithless officers."

From what part of the Constitution Mr. Hayes derives authority for such a statement we cannot imagine. That instrument empowers Congress to vest the appointment of inferior officers, as it may think proper, in the President alone, or in the Heads of Departments, but nowhere does it permit Secretary Sherman or any other Secretary to nominate to the Senate for appointment.

Mr. Hayes may, after March 4th, in his Ohio retreat, have an opportunity to study the Constitution as it actually reads.

WHEAT.

The Department of Agriculture estimates the total wheat production of the United States for the present year at 480,849,723 bushels, which is an increase of 32,004,805 over 1879.

Illinois is credited with the largest yield—53,767,200 bushels. New Jersey raised 2,475,974 bushels.

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 2.

Mr. Bly, of North New Jersey street, yesterday received a shipment of oysters. In the bottom of the cask was found a bottle, a common soda flask, to which the bivalves in all stages of development of growth were permanently sealed. It is indeed a curious spectacle. An empty bottle was sometimes during the flight of ages tossed overboard in the bay, where it has lain while the interesting formation occurred.

To the Honorable the Common Council.

GENTLEMEN:

The Board of Health respectfully acknowledge receipt of the report made by your Committee on Streets and Public Health regarding certain alleged nuisances.

The City Physician, by authority of the Board, at once issued notices to parties concerned, and in its name also made public the following order:

"HEALTH NOTICE!"

"Notice is hereby given that all parties having pipes connecting with any sewer, brook or raceway within the limits of the City of Plainfield, [illegible] and waste-water, slops, the contents of any sink or water-closet, or any other noxious or offensive matter [illegible] in any such sewer, brook or raceway, are hereby notified to sever the connection of such pipes with such sewer, brook or raceway; and all persons [illegible] sewer, brook or raceway, are required to forthwith [illegible] emptying as aforesaid."

Dated November 15, 1880.

By order of the Board of Health,
H. H. LOWRIE, M. D.,
Secretary.

The existing sewers in this City were constructed for the sole purpose of carrying off surface water, and should the Rail Road Company, or any individual property owner persist in using them for other drainage, the Board recommend that the Corporation Counsel be instructed to commence legal proceedings against all such offenders.

With reference to the Mill Ponds and Green Brook, which topics constitute the major portion of the report in question, the Board would say, that it has for months past given careful consideration to these subjects as of public importance, having during the Summer made a thorough inspection of them in company with Doctor Hunt, the efficient Secretary of the State Board of Health, and were by him assured, that at the coming session of the legislature an effort would be made to secure the passage of a law making the removal of water nuisances more readily and properly attainable than at present. The Board are of opinion no detriment will ensue from waiting such expected legislation.

As the opening of a drain would remedy the standing water near Evona Station, the Board suggest that the Street Commissioner be so directed.

Plainfield, December 2nd, 1880.

NATHAN HARPER,
W. ROCKHILL POTTS,
GEO. P. SUYDAM,
Board of Health.

H. H. LOWRIE, M. D.,
Secretary.

Mr. Whiton moved that the Corporation Counsel be instructed to take such action as the Board of Health may direct. Adopted.

Mr. Whiton also moved that this Council urge the Board of Health to take energetic measures to abate these nuisances. In other words, this Council "back up" the Board of Health. Adopted.

In reference to the standing water near Evona station, that the opening of a drain would remedy it, etc., Mr. Whiton moved that this matter be referred to the Street Committee, with power. Adopted.

Mr. Whiton moved that the communication from the Board be received and placed on file. Adopted.

Mr. Whiton, from Finance Com., presented his monthly report which shows a balance to the credit of the General Fund of $1,475.12, and to the credit of the Poor Fund, $740.76. Filed.

Mr. Whiton offered a res. that the Mayor and City Treasurer be instructed to renew for two months the note coming due in December. Adopted. All aye.

Mr. Lithgow, from Law & Ord. Com., reported that the amendment to the lamp ordinance they find correct, and would move that it be engrossed this evening and to a 3d reading.

On motion, laid over until New Business for the purpose of engrossment. Agreed to.

By the same—Would report that they find that there is a balance due James E. Martine for money loaned the city by this gentleman, and would move that the matter be referred to the Finance Com. for their inspection as to the correctness of the amounts paid, interest, etc., and report at next meeting of Council. So agreed to.

Mr. Finch, from Police Com., reported the police claims presented this evening, as correct; also claim of Wm. Addis, $9.25. Ref'd to Aud. Com.

Mr. Ryder, from Com. on Salaries, Offices & Elections, reported as correct the following claims: J. O. Nodyne, $7.45; J. S. Cutter, $77.11. Ref'd to Aud. Com.

Mr. Flanders, from St. Com., reported favorably upon one of the petitions for crosswalks asked for by the Park Ave. Baptist Church and others, viz: that over Prospect Ave.

Mr. Lithgow was of the opinion that flagging was not on both sides of this avenue; and according to an ord. no crosswalks could be put down unless both sides of the street are flagged.

After further discussion in the premises, Mr. Finch moved the petition be granted, provided the church flag the avenue on their side. Agreed to.

Mr. Finch called attention to the mud hole between 5th and 6th streets on Park Ave., and would move that $50 be appropriated to put it in good order.

Mr. Flanders arose and stated that in conversation with St. Com'r Angleman on this particular spot, he stated that for the sum of $50 this portion of the avenue could be put in thorough order.

Mr. Finch then reconsidered his previous motion, and substituted the sum of $50, when the motion prevailed. All aye.

Mr. Dunlap, from Aud. Com., reported the following claims as correct: The police claims presented this evening; E. Verity, $4.50; Wm. Addis, 9.25; J. S. Cutter, 77.11; W. L. Force & Bro., $[illegible]; E. O. Chamberlin, 12.50; L. T. Clark, 158.06; Geo. P. Suydam, 53.56, from General Fund. On motion, report received and warrants ordered drawn for the several amounts. All aye.

From the Poor Fund, as correct, the following claims: H. H. Lowrie, $22.18; L. A. Rheaume, 12.98; A. V. Searing, 74.50. Report rec'd and warrants ordered drawn for the several amounts. All aye.

Mr. Rushmore called for the 3d reading of the amendment to the Lamp Ord. Read 3d time, and on motion, passed. All aye.

Mr. Rushmore moved that the Rules be suspended, for a report from Mr. Darling, from Lamp Com., that gentleman coming in after the report from Lamp Com. had been called. Agreed to.

Mr. Darling then reported on petition of parties residing on Union street for the erection of 6 lamps, that 3 lamps be erected, 1 at Evona station, and 2 intervening. Report accepted. All aye.

By the same—As correct, claim of Plainfield Gaslight Co., gas, &c., month of October, $341.63. On motion, referred to Aud. Com.

Mr. Whiton moved that when Council adjourn it adjourn to meet two weeks from to-night. Carried.

On motion, Council then adjourned.

What the Children Shall be Taught.

At the meeting of the State Association of School Superintendents, held at Long Branch July 6th, 1880, the Committee, appointed to prepare a course of study, made a report, recommending the following branches for the course of study for the schools of the State: Reading, spelling, writing, geography, arithmetic, English grammar, book-keeping, history of the United States, Constitution of the United States, Physiology, natural philosophy, algebra, (through quadratics,) geometry, (four books,) mensuration, elements of agriculture and botany; the text books to be used being what are termed Common School Text Books. The committee also recommended that when any pupils have completed the course of study and passed a successive examination, a diploma should be given as a recognition of the fact.

An old Warren County farmer came home drunk the other night, and became the victim of an irrepressible desire to get still drunker. So he thought he would bring out his wagon and drive over to Shelburne Falls for more whisky. Just as he was about putting the finishing touches on the harnessing arrangements he said to himself, "This horse has got horns!" He brought out his lantern and found he had harnessed the cow to the wagon. He muttered, "I'm drunk enough now," unhitched the beast and went into the house to sleep it off.

HAPPY ENDING.

Long Suffering of One of the Best Men of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess Co., N. Y.—His final and Complete Recovery from Gravel.

PLAIN WORDS ARE BEST.—Mr. Edward S. Hicks, of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county, N. Y., had suffered long from Stones in the Kidneys. He sought relief, of course. Who would not? What are time and money to health? Mr. Hicks consulted the best physicians of his village and also of Poughkeepsie—and none better can be found anywhere—but, unhappily, without a good result. A friend in Rondout advised Mr. Hicks to go to Rondout and see Dr. David Kennedy about his trouble. This Mr. Hicks finally did. Dr. Kennedy saw at once what the suffering man's difficulty was, and that Favorite Remedy was the medicine he needed. The Doctor prescribed it, and Mr. Hicks went home without much confidence in the power of "Favorite Remedy" to do him more good than other medicines had done before. But [illegible] the directions and was both surprised and delighted to find himself gradually improving. To-day Mr. Hicks is a well man.

While Dr. Kennedy is interested in introducing "Favorite Remedy," he continues to practice his profession and perform all the capital and minor operations in surgery. State your case. Letters promptly answered. Address Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y. dec10w4

Plainfield papers are having a dispute as to the healthfulness of their city. We should think this wrangle of little benefit, and if the question is at all a doubtful one, we should advise them to leave all disputing to outsiders, and go to work. No charge.—Rahway Advocate.

THE petit jurors for the January term of Union County Courts, from Plainfield are Solomon F. Dunn, James Merritt and Wm. Hand. From Fanwood, Geo. Marsh, Linus Hetfield, Stiles M. Parse and Thos. Mead. From Westfield, Addison S. Clark. Rahway drew twelve of the panel.

AN exchange says: A new feature in some of the leading schools of this State is the placing of the leading daily and local papers in the highest department for the use of the pupils. The students will be required to give an occasional abstract of the news of the day as gleaned from their columns.

A LITTLE seven year old lad of this city, deliberately walked up to the polls in the Second District last Thursday and said he "wanted to vote." He was asked who he desired to vote for. "Hancock," was the reply. His ballot was taken by a bystander, and the Judge cautioned him that he couldn't vote but once in a day.

NEXT Monday, the 13th inst., being the first anniversary of the settlement of the Rev. Wm. The stock has been carefully selected in view of the demand for handsome holiday goods, and a fine line of skates and pocket cutlery includes many suitable Christmas gifts.

THE Bazaar held in the chapel of the Park Avenue Baptist Church during the latter part of last week, surpassed in its interest and financial result even the great expectations that naturally arose in the hearts of its promoters. The arrangements were made and advanced by efficient heads and hands, and it is estimated that about $600 will be gained by the efforts of the society and the generosity of its friends.

THE term of Prosecutor Fay expires in February, and a discussion has commenced already as to who is to be his successor, unless he should succeed himself, as he is a candidate for re-appointment. R. Maxson, Esq., of Plainfield, and Judge Alward of Elizabeth are being urged by their respective friends for the position.

It was found impossible, as intended, to secure a place in this city for his appearance; but by leaving on the 7:01, P. M. train those of our citizens so desiring may take advantage of the opportunity of hearing this renowned preacher at Elizabeth. Tickets of admission at 50 and 75 cents may be secured of the manager at his hotel.

Parlor Sale.

The ladies of the church of the Holy Cross will hold a Parlor Sale of fancy articles in the school building immediately adjoining the church, on Thursday afternoon and evening, Dec. 16th. Refreshments will be served, and fancy articles may be had at a very low price. All who have previously attended these sales will testify to the reasonable charge for their wares.

"Scattering."

Among the votes included in the above title of designation—cast at the late Charter election—are a few that go to show what a large amount of undeveloped humor (?) is "born to blush unseen" in even a New Jersey community. The following are selected as specimens: For Mayor, Mr. "Noland," 1; Pat Flanagan, 1; James A. Garfield, 1; and H. F. Bronk, 1. For Councilmen, Noah Davis, 1; "329," 1; and Jerry Blair 1. For Commissioner of Appeals, Jimmy Donahue 1.

The County Bonds.

Last week Director Martine and Freeholder Doty advertised $22,000 worth of six per cent. Union County bonds for sale, bids to be received at the Freeholders' room, Court House, Elizabeth, up to Thursday last at 2 p. m. Saturday the bids, several in number, were opened, and the whole amount of the bonds were taken by the First National Bank of Elizabeth city, they being the highest bidders. The price paid for the five year bonds ($11,000) was 103 12-100, and for the six year bonds ($11,000) 103 82-100. The bonds were issued to take up other bonds falling due on January 1st, 1881.

The Mayor Elect.

Mr. L. V. F. Randolph, the new Republican Mayor of the city of Plainfield is not lacking in the business experience and ability in financial matters that go far toward fitting him for the office to which he has been elected. Besides being Director in various large companies, he is Treasurer of a large Railroad corporation, the Illinois Central.

Sermon to Young Women.

Rev. Thos. H. Stockton, pastor of the M. E. Church, will preach a sermon next Sabbath evening, especially adapted to Young Women. The subject will be the very important question so constantly and eagerly asked, "What shall we wear?" Young women, and all persons interested in this subject are invited, and will be shown to seats by the ushers. Service begins at 7:30 o'clock.

Singing School.

A change of leader has been made in the Crescent Avenue Singing School. Mr. Pinkham having resigned, the well known vocal instructor and conductor, Mr. Perkins of New York city, has been engaged in his place. The members of this class in vocal music are making rapid strides towards perfection; and in time, under the efficient tuition furnished, promise to develope into individual soloists of enviable ability.

Highway Robbery.

As Mrs. J. P. Rogers, formerly of this city, was passing through Fifth street near Sycamore on Tuesday afternoon, a satchel she carried was snatched from her hand by a colored man who immediately fled with his booty. No assistance being near, and unable herself to follow the rapid pace of the thief, the lady reported her loss to Captain Dodd and a search was at once made. Meanwhile the perpetrator of the deed on opening the bag found a pocket-book inside inclosing about $15 which he appropriated and threw the satchel away. The latter was found by a lad and returned to Mrs. Rogers, who was overjoyed to discover that $50 which it contained in a side pocket was untouched.

Gymnasium Entertainment.

There will be an entertainment given by the Men's Class of the Plainfield Gymnasium at the Gymnasium Rooms, corner of North and Park Avenues, next Saturday night, 11th inst., beginning at eight o'clock. Revs. K. P. Ketcham, A. H. Lewis and others will be present and deliver addresses. The usual class exercises will be given, interspersed, it is hoped, with music and some difficult feats will be performed on the horizontal bar by Mr. Myers, who is now so well known to the Plainfield public, will afford the friends of this Institution an opportunity of witnessing the efficacy of Prof. Burnham's methods. Those who would like or who intend to join the Classes are especially invited to be present.

The Y. M. C. A. Course.

The second entertainment of the Y. M. C. A. Course, was given at the M. E. Church on Monday evening last, and by the interest it occasioned witnessed, as did the late Concert, the great judgment exercised in the selection of the various features of the Course. Mr. Archibald Forbes, of enviable notoriety as a newspaper correspondent in the Old World, lectured upon the "Royal People" he had met, and presented his experience in a manner that held the entire attention of his large audience. On the 20th inst., Mrs. Mary A. Livermore will lecture on "What shall we do with our Daughters?" upon which occasion the reputation of the speaker and the subject—we feel safe in saying—will insure a numerous attendance.

Struck by a Coal Train.

The jury who at first voted to consign Charlie Vail to the guardianship of the law and afterwards decided to give the young incendiary "another chance," will hardly reflect with comfort on the fact the boy's life is probably lost through its false sentiment of what constitutes merciful dealing. Under no control of his parents, the lad in idleness turns his attention to such lines of vagrancy as appeal for the moment to his fancy. On Monday afternoon last, when endeavoring to catch on a moving coal train at New street, young Vail tripped and fell. A car striking him on the head and back and the wheels of the train passing over the fingers of one hand, inflicted such injuries that it was necessary to carry the boy from the place. Medical attendance was procured, but it was subsequently found that the case was a fatal one which may result in the lad's death.

The Charter Election.

The recent charter election of Plainfield was a peculiar one. The contest for the Mayoralty was divided between two factions of the Republican majority of the city, the Democrats wisely running no ticket—to be beaten. While the adherents to and instigators of a "Citizen's Ticket" were loud in their assertions that at least a portion of the Democratic candidates for Council placed in nomination on it by them, would surely be elected, the counting of the ballots showed exactly what the wiser heads predicted—not one of them were anywhere near elected, the Republican candidate for Mayor, however, coming within sixteen votes of the office. The Democrats who voted the ticket were, again "bamboozled," as they always will be, when assisting to skin an animal of not very acceptable smell, belonging to the Republican party.

Musical.

Attention is earnestly called to the three music-recitals of Messrs Carl Feininger and Clark W. Evans to be given in the Park avenue church during the coming season. The programmes having been selected and arranged with due regard to classical and lighter modern compositions, we feel assured they will suit the appreciative taste of all patrons.

At the first concert—Thursday, the 23rd inst—will be played a quartette by Joseph Haydn, op. 76, for two violins, viola and 'cello. Also a grand quintette by Joachim Raff, op. 107, for piano, two violins, viola and 'cello. The remainder of the evening's entertainment will consist of effective solos.

A limited number of subscription coupons are now on sale at H. P. Howell's book store. The coupons, costing three dollars, entitle the holder to a reserved seat and course ticket for three recitals. They are to be presented at H. P. Reynolds' pharmacy on Wednesday, Dec 15th; the choice of seats to commence at 9 a. m.

Helping a Creditable Cause.

The annual fair for the benefit of the Children's Home—in the preparation of which the workers of all denominations join, and to the success of which contributions of financial assistance from all sources, generously flow—was opened in the Sunday School rooms of the M. E. church on Tuesday afternoon last and closed on yesterday (Thursday) evening. The affair from beginning to end was a remarkably successful one, even in this city that can justly boast of so many praiseworthy occurrences of a like nature. Under efficient management the several departments lacked naught that was requisite, and the different tables were in charge of competent ladies who thoroughly understood the arts of persuading visitors to purchase and influencing unstinted expenditure. An "Art Gallery," flower bower and refreshment room furnished pleasures that appealed to the senses of seeing, tasting and smelling; while tables loaded with fancy articles, innumerable and various, afforded an opportunity for patrons to secure such holiday gifts as they desired, at the same time aiding a good work. Although the exact figures cannot now be given, the managers feel justified in claiming great financial profit as the result of the Fair.

In the City Courts.

Evaline Barber vs James G. Jones, in debt for work and Labor: in Justice Nodyne's Court Saturday Dec. 4th, Craig A. Marsh, Esq. for plaintiff, Suydam & Jackson, Esqs. for defendant. Defendant compromised by paying the claim and half the costs.

Wm. Uhrbahn vs George Dorman, in case, demand one hundred and fifty dollars, J. Oakley Nodyne, Justice. Craig A. Marsh Esq., for plaintiff, Suydam & Jackson for the defendant. At defendant's request, case was adjourned to the 15th inst. at 10 a. m. This suit is brought for a breach of warranty of title on an exchange of horses, and presents some difficult questions of law. Much interest is manifested in the case by the friends of the respective parties.

Treasurer of the city vs. Charles Williams before Nelson Runyon, City Judge, Monday December 6th. The defendant was under arrest on complaint of disorderly conduct, assault, and the use of threats to take the life of the party complaining. Under advice of his counsel Craig A. Marsh, the prisoner admitted a portion of the complaint. The counsel then addressed the Court in behalf of the prisoner, concluding by a request that the prisoner be discharged. The Court after reviewing the evidence and the arguments presented, adopted the views of counsel, and the prisoner was accordingly discharged.

The Election.

Contrary to the expectations of almost every one, the charter election of Tuesday last was a comparatively quiet affair. A "Citizens'" meeting had been held subsequent to the regular Republican primary, upon which occasion was placed in nomination Mr. Job Male for Mayor and the following "non-partisan" Council: Messrs. John B. Brown, Charles S. Guion, John Simpson, Lucius F. Brigham, Walter E. Stewart, Salmon C. Baker, Gilford Mayer, Lebbeus L. Compton, William E. Lowe, Barzilla J. Randolph, Jasper G. Cadmus.

At the Democratic primary held on Saturday evening, it was decided not to place in the field a straight party ticket; in consequence of which decision the campaign developed into a contest between Republican aspirants. The "Citizen's" candidate for Mayor, however, seemed at times out of sympathy with the opponents of Mr. Randolph, and after one or two private intimations that he would not run, Mr. Male on Monday afternoon issued a small hand bill "positively declining" to be a candidate. The opposition was thus left at the last moment without a man to vote for, but the necessary amount of pressure and persuasion being brought to bear, Mr. Male subsequently consented to serve if elected.

The vote early in the day was remarkably light—and seemed to be largely in favor of both Randolph and Money, but later a tide in harmony with Mr. Male and No Money, set in. Far from a full vote was polled, owing principally to the small number of the Democracy that took either an interest or active part in the contest. Many causes are assigned for the results but our readers will have no trouble in judging from their own feelings and experience and from the expressions and sentiments of their acquaintances, the why and wherefore of the vote recorded below.

"The Jolly Three."

Messrs. Samuel Robinson, Frank Wright and T. McCarthy, a coterie under the title of "The Jolly Three," deserve unbounded credit for the exceedingly successful and enjoyable dance that took place under their management on Friday evening of last week. Laing's Hall, which has been lately re-furnished by its new proprietor, Mr. George Miller, was handsomely decorated with flags and other additional embellishments; while a raised platform was erected at the farther end of the room on which was seated the musicians of the evening.

It is saying a good deal when we state that the gathering was one of the most pleasurable that have ever before assembled together in this city—but such opinion is justly due the affair in consideration of the admirable way in which it was conducted and the care taken for the comfort and enjoyment of those present. The beauty of the ladies in particular and the fine dancing of the gentlemen in general, were contributing sources of the night's pleasure; while the bountiful supper that was placed before the company during the intermission, added to the unceasing gratification of all. It is to be hoped that the occasion will be repeated under the same efficient management before the season of such amusements passes away.

Under the New Jersey law the wife inherits one-half of the personal property of her deceased husband. The other half goes to the dead man's father; if his father is not living, then to the mother, brothers and sisters equally. One-third of the real estate goes to the wife during life, and the rest to brothers and sisters of the deceased; if none, then to the father; if no father, then to the mother for life.

The above, clipped from an exchange, and inserted through inadvertance in our issue of November 26th, is so pregnant with solecisms and errors in point of law that we have been at some pains to prepare a general statement of the law of descent and distribution in New Jersey.

Personal property is never inherited; only real property descends by inheritance, and that only to blood relatives, so that a husband or wife, in the event of the death of either, inherits nothing from the other. If the husband dies intestate, the widow is entitled to dower, i. e. an estate for life, in one-third of her deceased husband's real estate; the case being reversed, the widower is entitled to curtesy, i. e. an estate for life, in the whole of his deceased wife's real estate, the ownership or fee of the real property in both cases vesting in the heirs immediately on the death of the intestate.

Real property of an intestate descends:

1. To the child or children as tenants in common in equal parts; any child having died, leaving lawful issue, the latter are entitled to deceased parent's share.

2. If intestate leaves no child or children or lawful issue of the same, then to brothers and sisters of the whole blood as tenants in common in equal parts; any such brother or sister, having died leaving lawful issue, the latter are entitled to deceased parent's share.

3. If there are no lawful issue of intestate, or brothers or sisters of whole blood, or lawful issue of the same, then to the father of intestate, unless intestate derived the property through his mother when it descends as if intestate had survived his father.

4. If, as in case 3, and intestate's father is dead, intestate's mother takes a life estate in all the real property, the fee vesting in the next heirs.

5. If, as in case 4, and the mother is dead, then to the brothers and sisters of the half blood, &c.

6. If, as in case 5, and there are no brothers or sisters of the half blood or lawful issue of the same, then to the nearest blood relative or relatives in common degree to the intestate.

7. If as in last case, and no blood relatives, the real property of intestate regularly escheats, i. e. goes to the State.

Personal property of an intestate is distributed by decree of the Orphan's Court, as follows:

1. Where intestate leaves widow and child or children, one-third goes to the widow absolutely and the rest to the child or children or legal representatives of any deceased.

2. Where intestate leaves a widow, but no children, one-half goes to the widow absolutely, and the rest to the next of kindred in equal degree to the intestate, but no representation is allowed among collaterals after brothers' and sisters' children.

3. Where intestate leaves children, but no widow, all the personal property is distributed equally among the children or legal representatives of the same.

4. Where no widow and no children, nor legal representatives of the latter, the personal estate is distributed among the next of kindred in equal degree, and their legal representatives.

5. Where intestate leaves widower, the latter is entitled to all the personal property; otherwise the same rules apply to the personal estate of deceased widow as to that of deceased widower.

Of course exceptional cases arise, which are not embraced in the cases enumerated, and for which the law has made provision, but we submit the above as a popular comprehensive resume of the New Jersey law of descent and distribution.

FIRE MATTERS.

The burning of a small frame building on Johnston's Drive, near Vail's Spring, on the morning of Saturday last, incited, by the smoke, some individual of keen judgment time and to ring an alarm. The Department's apparatus was run out by the combined efforts of a few members and more boys, but was subsequently ordered back by the Chief, after reaching Front and Richmond streets. The cause of the conflagration is not fully known, but as it is the practice of our amateur hunters to build fires under the eaves of the building for the purpose of smoking out such festive rabbits as seek shelter there, it is surmised that something of the sort directly or indirectly influenced the casualty.

For the first time since the sixth day of last October, the entire Board of Fire Commissioners met on Tuesday evening in the office of Mr. L. E. Clark, for the transaction of the general business of the Department. Mr. Jones, of the Committee on Wells, reported that the cover in Second street had been raised four inches; also that the water in all the wells was very low. Mr. Sutton, of the Committee on Repairs and Supplies, reported that the repairs ordered in Warren Engine house had been made. The report of Mr. Depew, the Treasurer of the Board as follows, was received and filed.

A communication from Engine Co. No. 2., notifying the Board that a member of that Company had been expelled for nonpayment of dues, was read. Zephyr Hook & Ladder Co., presented the names of Mattew Grey and U. Vreeland for acceptance by the Board—ordered to take the regular course. The following bills were passed and ordered paid: W. C. Smith, $41.58; Newton Jenkins, $5; W. L. Force & Bro., $33.55; J. F. McIntyre, $4.34; Morgan Bird, $72.50; R. Hazeney, $2; J. P. Homan, $49.15; Chas. L. Davis, $3.65; DeVoursney Bros., $36.50; W. F. Adams, $10; L. M. French, $3.50; Frank Shook, $33.90; L. F. Marsh, $9.80; John Kelley, .59; N. Rogers, $75; W. S. Chase, $100; Berry & Thorn, $17.50; W. R. Grannett, $30.50; Fred Clark, $1; R. M. Stelle, $10.70; Allen Supply Co., $25; Wm. H. Voorhees, $16.65; Jos. Nosl, $3.

Chief Eng. Voorhees recommended, in view of the many unnecessary alarms that were rung, that the bell tower be locked and keys thereto furnished the officers of the companies and the police. On motion he was authorized to take such steps. He was also instructed to report to the Board what it would cost to furnish each fire house with a map designating the fire limits, in order that each member might inform himself in the matter. Also authorized to order the repairs to Engine No. 3., necessary for the use of a new link block. By-laws of Alert Hose Co., accepted. The Treasurer having paid certain bonds of the Department that had fallen due, the vote of each member of the Board was called for in confirmation of his action. All aye. On motion, the President and Treasurer were instructed to confer with counsel in relation to the step it was necessary for the Board to take towards obtaining a special act from the Legislature, allowing it to re-issue its outstanding bonds as they fall due. The meeting then adjourned.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

Messrs. E. C. Maltby and P. G. Ohl of this city have received installments of the new European food fish, Carp, from Eugene Blackford, Esq., Fish Commissioner of New York, and deposited them in suitable ponds on their premises. The N. J. Game & Fish Protective Society will also apply for the limited number being given out for the purpose of stocking other ponds.

The postponed shooting match for the stallion "Young Jersey" in North Plainfield, on Wednesday, Dec. 8th, was largely attended by the sporting fraternity. The rules provided that the person sticking shot in a three inch square pine target nearest the centre, at 45 yards distance, should be adjudged the winner of the horse. The next nearest, $10 in gold; the next $5 in gold. Mr. John Bodine was appointed referee; Messrs M. W. Hanock and Chas. Vermeule, judges and Benj. Wright and Quincy Adams, shot judges. The shot limit was 1¼ ounces. Some two hundred shots were fired. The judges decided that Gotlieb Fritz should have the horse. Messrs J. W. Laing and David Wright tied for second prize and divided. Messrs Ali. Vail and Everett Marsh tied for third prize and also divided. Of course, in shooting under the above rules, a common gun stood as good a show as the most expensive one. While many put from one to ten shot in the small target, some of them very close, the winner only struck it with one shot a fraction closer the centre than others.

William Mellon, a resident of Jersey City, met with a melancholy accident last Thursday. He had gone with some friends to a resort on the Heights to shoot for game, and while looking into the barrel of his gun the weapon went off and his head was literally blown off.

Quail are so plentiful in the Santa Ynez Valley, California, that sportsmen are in the habit of killing them for the purpose of jerking or drying their meat. The bird is skinned and divested of neck, wings and legs. The trunk, or fleshy part of the body, is then dipped in brine, strung on a rope and smoked for a few hours. The flesh preserves its delicacy, and is exceedingly nutritious.

"Gunners are forbid under penalty of the law;" "Trespassers will be dealt with according to law;" "Keep off these grounds, the utmost rigors of the law will be inflicted on all trespassers;" "Come not on dis blace, I goes de full lent's ob the law uf your dom." The above cautions and the like can be seen on nearly every farm in those parts. So look out all ye breech loaders.

The season for deer shooting in N. J. ended on Tuesday. The penalty now for shooting them is $50 for each offence, and yet there are many persons who would not neglect an opportunity to shoot one should it come within range. A movement is on foot to secure the passage of an act by the Legislature to prohibit the killing of them for a few years in order that they may become more numerous.

The publishers of the Afield & Afloat have awarded the premium for the largest black bass caught with bait during the season of 1880, to George West, of Easton. It was caught with rod and line and live catfish for bait; weighed six pounds four ounces; length, twenty-one inches; girth, fifteen inches. The capture was made at Sand's Eddy, Delaware river, and the premium is one double rod of latest improved make; a nickle plated check-reel; twenty-five yards silk waterproof line; fishing reel; twelve bass bait hooks; three six foot leaders; six artificial minnows.

We hear from all directions that the slaughter of small game, such as rabbits quails, &c., in this State, has this year been enormous. The woods and fields have ever since the season for gunning began, resembled the skirmishing operations of contending armies, the sportsmen having been so numerous and the fusillade so constant. If this thing continues many years small game will be utterly destroyed in this State. How would it be to pass a law this Winter prohibiting the shooting of all sorts of game for one or two years? This would restock the woods and fields with a large supply, and would make splendid sport for gunners. Perhaps it would be well to make gunning every alternate year unlawful. We commend the subject to the consideration of sportsmen.—State Gazette.

The Delaware and Raritan Canal will close for navigation at midnight on Saturday of next week, unless sooner closed by ice.

COMMUNICATED.

For "The Constitutionalist."

MESSRS. EDITORS:—We would draw the attention of your readers to the condition of the Plainfield Gymnasium at the corner of North and Park avenues.

This institution is one fully deserving of public support. With all needful apparatus and complete arrangements, it offers under the management of the celebrated instructor, Prof. Amos G. Burnham, inducements that cannot be equaled this side of New York. In fact at one fifth the cost, viz: $5.00 for three months, it presents the same advantages as the celebrated New York Gymnasium, which charges $25.00 for the same time. At that institution, however, the exercises are so popular that there is hardly standing room for the classes; here, on the contrary, the classes are dragging along a weary existence, which can last but a few weeks longer unless its friends come to their aid. What is needed is that the classes should be filled up to their proper quota, and in this the public should be directly interested, for the institution was started for the public solely; expected to be dependent upon the public, and if this interest fails the institution itself must fail.

It seems strange to us that the public is not at the present time interested. With so successful a teacher as Prof. Burnham, a man who comes to us with testimonials from the most distinguished people of New York and Brooklyn; ministers, physicians and others, testifying to the beneficial results of his methods, whose long experience as owner of the Brooklyn Gymnasium, and at present of the celebrated New York Gymnasium; with such a teacher, and with so beautiful and complete a gymnasium, it will certainly be derogatory to the city's reputation if it allows the institution to go down. There is nothing either in its management or surroundings, but what gives entire satisfaction to whoever has joined the classes or witnessed their exercises, and its results have already won for it the testimonials and praise of our leading clergymen, physicians and citizens generally. A personal visit to any of the class exercises, will remove all doubts that one may have, both as to the respectability of the students, and the efficacy of Prof. Burnham's methods.

A WELL WISHER.

To the Public.

We think to gain your confidence and trust
'Twere well one object, were revealed at first
And then suspicion will aside be thrown,
And all may know, what we would have have known,
Namely:—the object of our giving tree,
The numerous cards, which oft you take to be
Or little worth, and look with credulous smile,
Surveying, with a doubtful eye the while,
To see if we perchance, may not intend
To keep the money which you kindly spend,
And o'er the time appointed for the play
Believe the town, of promise, and of pay.
If such your thoughts are now, or e'er have been
We trust you may be pardoned for the sin,
For well 'tis known, that many do impose
Altho' 'tis not our forte to here disclose
The errors of our fallen kin, we lest
In justice, that we may reveal
The purpose, which has prompted us to come
Soliciting from you the trifling sum,
Which in itself tho' small, may be
Assistance towards prosperity.
A simple tale, we'll give you here,
Then, object, aim, and purpose will be clear.

* * * * * * * * * * *

Having ambition, (and we trust a share)
To gain the public favor and—applause,
Some weeks ago t'was during the very least
We started then our quiet, place "the East,"
And on the road, did strive our fame to make
Which now we know was but our first mistake,
For being with these but a month or so,
By them, we mean the Company, you know
'Twas told (in confidence), our money more,
That of our baggage, we were quite before,
And to redeem it we must pay a sum
Which, from an empty purse, could never come.
'Tis the same old story in this line,
And so, we thought that to repine
Were useless trouble, and we'd not
But start for York, and if we got
A situation where we could Obtain the money, why we would;
And we did get one, but alas!
It proved to be of money scarce,
Still, not despairing we again did try
And gained a flattering victory.
Concerning that to given play
Or parts of one, we'd rather say
Might prove of benefit to me.
We did, as you by this will see
At Yonkers, and they gave us praise
Which instantly our hopes did raise,
And urged us to again come forth,
And should our sport be of worth
By trials and persistance, we Might some day gain the victory.

* * * * * * * * * * *

That is my object and my aim,
'Tis for that reason that I came,
And after you my merit well have weighed,
Should you dispose to favor me—agreed,
That's all the entertainment in itself will be,
Of recitations, readings, and—let's see—
Oh, yes, from "Ingomar," "The Hunchback," others too—
Selections, which are quite well known to you.
Trusting your favor I may earn,
I am,
Most Truly Yours,
MISS BEULAH VERNE.

A miraculous escape from death is an oft quoted remark by our newspapers, and yet, how many such occurrences happen every day and are unchronicled, unheard of and unappreciated except by the few who are closely interested. There is probably no larger collection of such facts than in the correspondence of R. F. Averell & Co., whose Balsam of Sulphur has caused many a grateful heart to express its thanks for help in time of danger. This preparation is a certain cure for all diseases of Throat and Lungs—Coughs, Colds, Consumption, Catarrh, etc., and is sold by A. Killgore, Druggist.

NEW JERSEY and the Bible Society.—The November number of the Bible Society Record shows the following sums received from this State during the month of October: Gifts—from Mrs. Oren Johnson, Plainfield, $5; legacies—James C. Tunis, late of Plainfield, $1,000; auxiliary Bible Society—Middlesex County, $50; receipts from sales from auxiliary Bible Societies—Middlesex County, $300; Somerset County, $100; Union County, $100. Total receipts—purchase account, $500; gifts, $65; legacies, $1,000; grand total, $1,565.

NOT OPEN TO THAT OBJECTION.

Temperance people often say that most of the popular medicines they see advertised are nothing but rum. That is true of many, but not of Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy." The Doctor agrees with his temperance friends that it is better to die of disease than of drink. Favorite Remedy cures Kidney Troubles, Liver Complaints, Constipation of the Bowels, as nothing else does or ever did. It drives away sickness, it cools the blood. It costs only a Dollar to try it. Ask your druggist or send to the Doctor at Rondout, N. Y.

Wanted Immediately—100 tons of Hay. L. S. Saloy, Nos. 53, 55 and 57 Somerset Street, North Plainfield, N. J.

Few people have any idea of the amount of coal consumed daily by a blast furnace. The Fort Oram furnace burns daily about seventy tons, which is doubtless more than is consumed in all the houses of Dover.

C. M. Scott, Orono, Maine, says: During more than 20 years' boot and shoe experience I have paid considerable attention to Tip Goods, and will give it as my opinion that the A. S. T. Co. Tip will in time supersede all others on children's wear.

MESSRS. ELY BROS., Druggists, Owego, N. Y.: Your "Cream Balm" differs from all other preparations, as it does all your claim for it. I have been cured of Catarrh of many years' standing by its use, and my sense of smell has been restored. For a cold in the head it works like magic. E. H. Sherwood, National State Bank, Elizabeth, N. J. Aug. 18, 1879.—See adv't.

MESSRS. ELY BROS., Druggists, Owego N. Y.: For the past three winters I have been afflicted with Catarrh and cold in the head. I applied several remedies without good results. Last winter I used your Cream Balm, and found it accomplished all you represented. T. F. McGee, Bank of the Commercial Fleet, Elizabeth, N. J. Aug. 18, 1880.—See adv't.

Various Causes—

Advancing years, care, sickness, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition—all operate to turn the hair gray, and either of them inclines it to shed prematurely. Ayer's Hair Vigor will restore faded or gray, light or red hair to a rich brown or deep black, as may be desired. It softens and cleanses the scalp, giving it a healthy action. It removes and cures dandruff and humors. By its use falling hair is checked, and a new growth will be produced in all cases where the follicles are not destroyed or the glands decayed. Its effects are beautifully shown on brashy, weak, or sickly hair, on which a few applications will produce the gloss and freshness of youth. Harmless and sure in its operation, it is incomparable as a dressing, and is especially valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts. It contains neither oil nor dye, and will not soil or color white cambric; yet it lasts long on the hair, and keeps it fresh and vigorous. For sale by all dealers.

Greener's new 103 Breech Loading Club Gun, also Webley's, Clabrough and Scotts, and other makers, from $25 upwards, at A. Vanderbeek's, 33 Park Avenue, Dunlap Building.

DON'T BE SO SILLY.

Don't let a foolish prejudice against proprietary medicines stand between you and the health of your wife, child or baby. It is always right to advertise a blessing. Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" is a blessing. It has stood these tests, and is with both you. If you are sick and miserable, act and we ask you to spend One Dollar for this medicine, and then write to the Doctor at Rondout, N. Y., as to how you like. For Disease of the Kidneys, Bowels, Liver and blood, it has no equal.

"Eva Ready" Wheat and Buckwheat and Indian Meal Flour, at the City Mills.

Stoves, Pipe and Complete Assortment for cooking or other purposes as cheap as can be purchased in New York, at Vanderbeek's, 33 Park Ave.

TESTIMONIALS.

"You ask me to favor you with my experience and impressions of Miss NELLA F. BROWN. I seldom if ever yield to requests of this nature. I feel less hesitation in this instance because of Miss Brown's exceeding modesty and unpretentiousness, which are characteristics of genius.

I am informed that she never received instruction in the conventional school of elocution, which fact is greatly in her favor. In this she may be compared with Fanny Kemble and the late Charlotte Cushman, who were illustrious examples of what genius may attain without elocutionary training.

Miss Brown has appeared twice upon the "Star" Course in one season to the eminent satisfaction of vast audiences, and will appear again this coming season. This, I take it, is a sufficient endorsement. Yours very truly,
T. B. PUGH,
Manager of "Star" Course, Phila.

From Dr. Vincent.

MRS. MARY A. LIVERMORE is a woman of superior intellectual power. She is wise, womanly and eloquent, and in my opinion the most able, natural and effective of all the women speakers now on the American lecture platform.

This being one of my main specialties, I use the utmost care in selecting the very best that can be had. The public will find on comparing the price of it with that of Pond's Extract and others in the market that it is much cheaper than ANY OF THEM. The quality I will guarantee, to say the least, to be equally good.

Killgore's Arnicated Glycerole of Borax,
A delicately perfumed compound for chapped hands and rough, dry skin, and especially for using after shaving to prevent any unpleasant effects.

TO THE PUBLIC:
I desire to state that I was the first to reduce the heretofore high prices of drugs and medicines, and that I still sell my goods for less money than my competitors; prescriptions dispensed at my store will be found especially reasonable in price. My stock is always open to the inspection of any physician in Plainfield or vicinity. They are competent judges of the quality I sell. I refer the public to them for information on this subject. I ask you for a share of your patronage and feel sure that you will extend it to me.

THE EMANCIPATION OF MAN.

She looked just like that kind of a woman when she came into the sanctum, and all the seniors became instinctively very busy and so absorbed in their work that they did not see her, which left the youngest man on the staff an easy prey, for he looked at the visitor with a little natural politeness, and was even soft enough to offer her a chair.

"You are the ed'tor?" she said, in a deep, bass voice.

He tried to say "Yes," so that she could hear him, while his colleagues in the sanctum couldn't, but it was a failure; for the woman gave him dead away in a minute.

"You are?" she shouted, "then listen to me; look at me; what am I?"

The foolish youngest man looked at her timidly and ventured to say, in a feeble voice, that she looked to be about forty-sev—

"Am I not a woman?" she said.

The youngest young man weakly tried to correct his former error, and said she seemed more like a girl—

But again she broke in on him with a scornful hiss:

"Gir-r-r-l!" she said, "I am a woman; a woman with all the heaven-born aspirations, the fathomless feelings, the aggressive courage and the indomitable will of a woman. What can you see on my face?"

The position of the youngest man on the staff was pitiable, but none of the old heads appeared to observe it. At least, they didn't offer to help him out. So he looked at her face for a second, and said, timidly:

"Freckl—."

"Nursling," she shrieked, "had you the soulful eyes of a free man you could see shining on my brow the rising light of a brighter dawn."

"Could I," asked the youngest man timidly.

"Yes, you could I," the woman said in tones of unmeasurable scorn. Now hear me, have you a—but I cannot bring myself to use the hateful expression; are you anybody's husband?"

The youngest man blushed bitterly, and said that he wasn't as yet, but he had some hopes—

"And expect your—that is you expect the woman whose husband you will be to support you?"

The youngest man blushed more keenly than before, and tremblingly admitted that he had some expectations—that—that—that the only daughter of his proposed father-in-law, if he might put it that way—

"Yah!" snarled the woman; "now let me tell you, the day of woman's emancipation is at hand. From this time we are free, fer-ree! You must look for other slaves to bend and cringe before your affairs since we have burst our chains, and how will you live without the aid of woman? Who makes your shirts now?" she added fiercely.

The youngest man miserably said that a tailor on Jefferson street made his.

"Hm," said the woman, somewhat disconcerted. "Well, who washes 'em, then?" she added, triumphantly.

"A Chinaman just west of Fifth street," the youngest man said with a hopeful light in his eyes.

The woman glared at him and groaned under her breath, but she came at him again with:

"Proud worm, who cooks your victuals?"

The youngest man said truly that he didn't know the name of the cook at his restaurant. But he, was a man about forty years old, and round as a barrel, with whiskers like the stuffing of a sofa.

The woman looked as though she was going to strike him.

"Well," she said, as one who was leading a forlorn hope, "who makes up your bed and takes care of your room?"

The youngest man replied with an air of truth and frankness that he roomed with a railroad conductor and an ex-Pullman sleeping car porter took care of their room.

She paused when she reached the door, and turned upon him with the face of a drowning man who is only five feet away from a life buoy.

"Miserable dependent," she cried, "who sews on your buttons?"

The youngest man on the staff rose to his feet with a proud, happy look on his face.

"Haven't a sewed button on a single clothes," he cried, triumphantly, "patents every one of 'em, fastened on like copper rivets and nothing but studs and collar buttons on my shirts. Haven't had a button sewed on for three years. Patent buttons last for years after the garments have gone to decay."

And the woman fled down the winding passage and the labyrinthine stairs with a hollow groan, while the other members of the staff, breaking through their heroic reserve, flustered around the youngest man and congratulated him upon the emancipation of his sex. —Burlington Hawkeye.

The Kearney Statue.

The unveiling of the Kearney statue, removed from the State House, in Trenton, to Newark, last winter, will take place, it is expected, on the 16th proximo, at Newark. The Executive Committee intend to unveil the statue with an appropriate demonstration, and to invite the Governor and his staff, members of the last Legislature, various State officers, Judges of the Essex County Courts, members of Congress from New Jersey, the Chancellor and Vice Chancellor, present and former U. S. Senators, ex-Governors, personal friends of Gen. Kearney, clergymen, Mayor Fiedler and Aldermen. It is expected also that the National Guard and various military organizations from all parts of the State will be present.

In a copy of the Hunterdon Democrat, dated December 3d, 1839, is to be found the following curious advertisement:

SPORTSMEN, LOOK HERE.

Our friends and neighbors are requested to take notice that we, the subscribers, inhabitants of the township of Raritan, have running at large any quantity of quails, partridges, rabbits, which they are at liberty to shoot as many as they can.

N. B.—Fish swimming up and down the creeks.

A long list of names follow. The notices published now-a-days are just the opposite to an invitation to kill the game, and generally conclude "under the penalty of the law, &c. &c."

The Cape May Wave says that "many of our Jersey gunners are as mad as hornets about the way the so-called West Jersey Game Protective Society is managing matters this season. They say the members of that society, who are for the most part Philadelphians, operate so as make it an association to protect gunners, rather than game. It is also complained that they have rented for the season nearly every desirable pond in South Jersey, upon which wild ducks have been in the habit of congregating. It is further said, that they have even gone so far as to rent whole farms, having a reputation for being good places for gunning. The result of all this is, that our poor Jersey gunner can scarcely find a likely place for game in his native state—it may be in the very township in which he was born and bred—where he is not confronted at every turn with the printed cautions of the [illegible] West Jersey Game Protective Society, compelling him and his dogs to slink home with their tails between their legs, feeling as if they were on their return from a [illegible] expedition."

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

Holman's PAD.

Cures without Medicine. Simply by Absorption.

THE ONLY TRUE MALARIAL ANTIDOTE.

DR. HOLMAN'S PAD is no guess-work remedy—no feeble imitative experiment—no perfumed bridge-pedge of some other inventor's ideas; it is the original and only genuine curative Pad, the only remedy that has an honestly-acquired right to use the title word "Pad" in connection with a treatment for chronic diseases of the Stomach, Liver and Spleen.

By a recently perfected improvement, effected by the addition of [illegible] ingredients of newly discovered remedial value and absorptive adaptability, Dr. HOLMAN has greatly increased the scope of the Pad's usefulness, and appreciably augmented its active curative power.

The grand improvement gives HOLMAN'S PAD (with its Adjuncts) complete and unfailing control over the most persistent and unyielding forms of Chronic Diseases of the Stomach and Liver, as well as Malarial Blood-poisoning.

HOLMAN'S PADS have cured—and are daily curing—diseases of so many kinds, that the list is well-nigh interminable. It includes Malarial Poisons of every type, from Aching Bones and Low Fevers to Chills and Dumb Ague; Stomach Diseases, such as Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Sour Stomach, Chronic Diarrhoea, Flatulency, Heartburn, &c., &c.; Liver Disorders, like Biliousness, Bilious Colic, Dangerous Fevers, Sick Headache, Pains in the Side, Bilious Fevers, Torpid Liver, &c., &c. Well does this mighty remedy justify the eminent Professor Loomis' high encomium, "IT IS NEARER A UNIVERSAL PANACEA THAN ANYTHING IN MEDICINE!"

The success of Holman's Pads has inspired imitators who offer Pads similar in form and odor to the genuine Holman Pad. Beware of these bogus and imitation Pads, gotten up only to sell on the reputation of the GENUINE Holman Pad.

Each genuine Holman Pad bears the Private Revenue Stamp of the HOLMAN PAD COMPANY, with the above Trade-Mark, printed in green.

THE SUN FOR 1881.

Everybody reads THE SUN. In the editions of this newspaper throughout the year to come everybody will find:

I. All the world's news, so presented that the reader will get the greatest amount of information with the least unprofitable expenditure of time and eye-sight. THE SUN long ago discovered the golden mean between redundant fullness and unsatisfactory brevity.

II. Much of that sort of news which depends less upon its recognized importance than upon its interest to mankind. From morning to morning THE SUN prints a continued story of the lives of real men and women, and of their deeds, plans, loves, hates and troubles. This story is more varied and more interesting than any romance that was ever devised.

III. Good writing in every column, and freshness, originality, accuracy, and decorum in the treatment of every subject.

IV. Honest comment. THE SUN's habit is to speak out fearlessly about men and things.

V. Equal candor in dealing with each political party, and equal readiness to commend what is praiseworthy or to rebuke what is blamable in Democrat or Republican.

VI. Absolute independence of partisan organizations, but unwavering loyalty to true Democratic principles. [illegible]

How to Correct and Improve

YOUR SIGHT

IMPROVEMENTS OF THE DAY.

One of these is found in KING'S PATENT COMBINATION SPECTACLES.

As the name indicates, they consist of a combination of silver and steel frames, the silver bridge making a more elegant, durable and flexible frame and enabling any dealer to adjust it to any face, so that the center of the lens is in the direct line of vision, thus giving the greatest benefit possible to be derived from the use of spectacles.

It also enables anyone to adjust it themselves to the position where it best corrects the sight.

All persons buying the COMBINATION SPECTACLES have their eyes fitted by KING'S NEW SYSTEM, the method used by Professional Oculists and the only true means of accurately testing the vision.

THIS SYSTEM IS COPYRIGHTED, and can only be used by Mr. King's Agents, all of whom are instructed in its use.

The KING SPECTACLES are the first to meet over a million pair now being in daily use.

WARNER'S

SAFE

Kidney & Liver

CURE.

The leading Scientists of to-day agree that most diseases are caused by disordered Kidneys or Liver. If, therefore, the Kidneys and Liver are kept in perfect order, perfect health will be the result. This truth has only been known a short time and for years people suffered great agony without being able to find relief. The discovery of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure marks a new era in the treatment of these troubles. Made from a simple tropical leaf of rare value, it contains just the elements necessary to nourish and invigorate both of these great organs, and safely restore and keep them in order. It is a POSITIVE Remedy for all the diseases that cause pains in the lower part of the body—for Torpid Liver—Headaches—Jaundice—Dizziness—Gravel—Fever, Ague—Malarial Fever, and all difficulties of the Kidneys, Liver and Urinary Organs.

As a Blood Purifier it is unequaled, for it cures the organs that make the blood.

READ THE RECORD.

"It saved my life."—E. B. Lakely, Selma, Ala.

"It is the remedy that will cure the many diseases peculiar to women."—Mothers' Magazine.

"It has passed severe tests and won endorsements from some of the highest medical talent in the country."—New York World.

"No remedy heretofore discovered can be held for one moment in comparison with it."

—Rev. C. A. Harvey, D. D., Washington, D. C.

This Remedy, which has done such wonders, is put up in the LARGEST SIZED BOTTLE of any medicine upon the market, and is sold by Druggists and all dealers at $1.25 per bottle. For Diabetes, enquire for WARNER'S SAFE DIABETES CURE. It is a POSITIVE Remedy.

POETRY.

DISTANCE.

O spotless silver ship
Go far away:
While in the hazy blue
Thine outlines stay
No fleck or flaw is seen;
But float anear,
And many a seam and rift
Straightway appear.

O hope that lies serene
In distant light!
No blemish mars thy grace
To longing sight;
But hope by longing met
Enchants no more
Than coarse and common ships
Beside the shore.

LAUREL BLOSSOMS.

BY ESTELLE.

The July sun was just setting behind Norton Crest; and the old pine tree, that for generations past has stood upon its summit, a solitary sentinel, was transfigured in a flood of golden light.

Fred Harrington sat upon one corner of the piazza, his feet perched comfortably upon the railing, and his hands clasped behind his head, looking dreamily at the glory-covered pine, when down the hard gravel road clattered the old stage coach that made tri-weekly visits to this usually quiet region. Fred had heard nothing of expected company, and the old coach had become so familiar an object that he heard without hearing, and saw without consciousness its approach, so dreamily were his thoughts engaged with the suggestions of the sunset fires and clear outlines before him.

"Aunt Jane, the shawls please; so, let me help you with that."

The clear, ringing voice brought Fred's thoughts back to time and senses; and the vision that met his eyes brought his feet to the floor and a half-smothered exclamation to his lips.

The coach had stopped at the gate, and a young lady in a gray traveling suit, a saucy straw hat perched upon her head, with a floating scarf of shining gray stuff, that looked to Fred's dazed eyes like a bit of moonlight, but which really was a very serviceable veil of gray grenadine, stood, with hands extended, to aid another figure in brown that was just emerging from the depths of the time-honored vehicle.

"Aunt Jane" having been dutifully helped to the ground, and the numerous salutations of the inmates of the house (who had ere this discovered the new arrival and rushed from all quarters), shawl-strap, and satchels were appropriated by Thee and Bess and Tom, even little Dick protesting that he wanted "to carry sumfin' of Cousin Minnie's," whereupon the young lady with the "moonshine" on head gave him her parasol and a kiss—gave them with such a grace as put baby Dick in the seventh heaven, and made Fred wish that he might "carry sumfin' too."

As they came upon the piazza he discovered that "Cousin Minnie" was not only graceful as a fairy, but as beautiful [illegible] from under the little traveling hat, and brown eyes that Fred said to himself were "liquid as a houri's." He found upon further acquaintance that they could be wicked eyes at times, full of mischief and torment to poor mortals like himself.

Now Fred Harrington had never been considered an impressible young man. He has been an intimate friend to Thee Gordon's at Harvard, selecting, as the quiet, studious men often do, a younger and much livelier man for a friend. And Thee Gordon was certainly one of the jolliest, fun loving youngsters in all Harvard; still they had never quarreled, and when Fred graduated in June, Thee had insisted upon his spending the Summer with him at his home among the mountains, saying, "I must make the most of you while I can for it will be horribly lonesome at old H—— next year without you."

So Fred was at the Gordens, fishing and tramping about with Thee, and dreaming on the piazza corners at sunset; thoroughly enjoying the lazy midsummer life, where, as yet, no thought of womankind had intruded, save the good hearted, motherly kind, such as Mrs. Gorden, whose cheery, watchful care brooded over this household, having it from tangle or snarl, and helping its inmates to feel that daily living was really what she represented it to be, a thoroughly good thing when one went about it in kindly earnest.

To be sure there was fifteen-year-old Bess; and a wise little midget, too, was Bess; but it was the happy hearted wisdom of childhood, for in this healthy home atmosphere no fine-young-ladyisms flourished in short dresses. She loved and petted her brother Thee, who was five years her senior, and looked upon his friend as a miracle of wisdom and dignity, for whom she entertained unbounded respect; but her best friend and constant companion was her twin-brother Tom, and the especial objects of her love and care were baby Dick and a lame chicken.

Cousin Minnie had been long expected, but Thee had mischievously forborne announcing the fact to his unworldly-minded friend, for Minnie, of all his cousins, was his prime favorite, and he had looked forward with considerable zest to the impression her advent would make upon Fred.

Supper was announced, and that young gentleman having unwonted attention to the set of his necktie and the minor details of his toilet, descended with eager interest to the introduction awaiting him in the supper room. Upon his entrance Mrs. Gorden led him to the lady in brown, saying: "Miss Gorden, allow me to introduce to you our friend Mr. Harrington. Mr. Harrington, my sister-in-law, Miss Gorden." And Fred saw a little woman of uncertain age and parchment features whom he addressed respectfully; and then Thee dashed in with "Harrington, my twin cousin, Miss Hilton; Minnie, this is Fred," and there was the "houri," her brown eyes raised to his face, one hand lying lightly on Thee's arm, the other extended in greeting to himself.

Thee's unceremonious introduction did much to put Fred at his ease; so without undue trepidation he took the little hand saying:

"This is an unexpected pleasure to me, Miss Hilton; they did not tell me company was coming; I'm glad to meet you."

"Then they treated me better than they did you; Thee wrote me from college that you were to spend the vacation here with him."

Supper was altogether delightful that night, and the weeks that followed were wonderfully bewildering weeks to Fred. He was amazed to find himself over head and ears in love.

As for Minnie, she had no more idea of falling in love than she had of taking a trip to the mountains of the moon; glad and happy in the midst of her friends with her fresh young womanhood untouched as yet by sorrow or care, she acted like a very witch. Such a merry life as they led, driving, boating, scouring the country on foot and on horseback, gathering water lilies from the little lake in the valley behind the house, or singing at the piano in the cool shadows of the parlor. No wonder Fred's heart yielded to this bright, beautiful creature, so surrounded by the sunshine and fullness of life.

Perhaps the song Goethe puts into the mouth of Clarchen best expresses Fred's inner life during these days:

"Blessed,
Depressed,
Fancy ever brooding amain;
Trembling,
Dissembling,
Hovering in fear and in pain;
Sorrowing to death, or exulting the azure above,
Blessed alone is the heart in its love."

But Fred was no namby-pamby to wear his heart on his sleeve, and none suspected the uneven tenor of his thoughts, unless it was Thee; but if that young gentleman had his "little thoughts" he wisely concluded to keep them to himself and not put his fingers into any match-making pie crust.

When Fred came to know the condition of his own heart, he set himself fairly and squarely, with all the earnestness of his manhood, to win the coveted prize; not with soft speeches and the usual love-tokens of smitten swains; she was too spirited, and his passion too deep for that; but there was an irresistable power in those gray eyes of his, and a strength of will in the well-balanced mind that heretofore had made everything bend to his desire. It was a common saying at Harvard that "When Harrington sets his mind upon anything, the end is as sure as fate."

And so three weeks passed, but Minnie showed no signs of yielding, but went singing about in her light-hearted gayety till at last only five days remained of her visit, and Fred resolved to put all at a venture.

Baby Dick was fast asleep upon the sofa, and Bess sat on the piazza steps, her chin supported in both hands, watching some thunder-clouds that far away in the north-west were marshaling their forces for a fray.

"And the thoughts of youth are long, long thoughts," quoted Fred, coming thro' the gate and up the walk.

"Can you come out of them, Bessie girl, long enough to tell me where Miss Hilton is?"

"In there, looking at mamma's chessmen," answered Bess, pointing with her thumb over her shoulder to the open door of the sitting-room.

Fred entered, and Minnie said softly, pointing to the sleeping child:

"Don't wake him, he has romped till he is tired out. I have been sitting still as a mouse, and was just thinking about going to sleep, for want of something better to do."

"Those thunder-clouds sent me to the house," said Fred. "There will be a grand crash when they get ready for work; the day has been so stifling hot, and sultry, a shower will be a positive relief. Are you afraid of thunder-storms, Miss Hilton?"

"Not at all," answered Minnie, replacing the chessmen in the box, [illegible] a pawn poised midway.

"Do you play, Mr. Harrington?"

"Yes; suppose we outplay the shower," said he.

"Good!"

The ivory men came out of the box again, and they seated themselves at a window to outrival upon the bit of board between them the war that was so fiercely commencing without.

"For stakes or for glory?" asked Fred.

"As you please," laughed Minnie.

But an idea occurred to him.

"Are you good?" asked he.

"I am good."

"Extra superfine!" called out Thee, putting his head in at the back window just in time for that last question.

"But, Min, look out for your laurels this time. Fred is the chess-player par excellence of Harvard. But I must take myself off; we are going to have a deluge in about three minutes, and I must get old Mooly and her bossy under shelter."

So he went off towards the cow-sheds, whistling for Uno, the big brown shepherd dog.

Fred and Minnie finished their arrangements for the game.

"Let it be this way," said Fred; "if I win you are to put yourself under my especial care and protection for the fishing excursion to-morrow; and if you win, why—I'll beg the same favor afterwards, and trust to your mercy to grant it."

Minnie laughingly consented, saying, however, that "she never showed quarter to the vanquished, but killed them on the spot," from which heathenish declaration Fred's eyes looked an appeal that somehow sent the blood thrilling through her veins in an unexpected manner.

They went at it in earnest then.

Outside, for three hours, the thunder crashed; green lightning played over the mountain side, showing the lichens on the rocks and fences far away; the granite rocks opened their stony hearts to receive the blots of zigzag lightning, and the old pine tree on Norton Crest tossed its great arms wildly about in the storm; but it had been a life long weathering—just such storms as this, and when the angry clouds had spent the force, and the last declining sun shot long golden rays down over the mountain top, setting the valley all asparkle with rain jewels, it settled its green limbs quietly and calmly, letting the wind murmur soft evening vespers through its fresh, green needles, as though no thought of storm ever occurred in its existence.

Inside, Minnie's warriors were scattered in dire confusion. Conscious that Fred was looking at her instead of the board, she made a hasty move; down from the opposite corner came a bishop to occupy the vacant place, and Fred's quiet voice was saying:

"I think you are mated."

It was a quiet voice, but there was an intensity in it that startled her. She gave one glance into the earnest gray eyes opposite, and suddenly pushing the board from her, to the imminent peril of the ivory toys she left the room.

Fred put the men in the box, and leaning back against the window-casing, looked off to the sunset, with a satisfied light shining in his eyes.

Thee was out on the croquet ground knocking a ball about over the short wet turf. Snatching her overshoes from the hall closet, and a mallet from the box Minnie joined him.

Seeing the excited look in her eyes Thee whistled softly to himself, "Whew! What's the matter, Min? has Grimalkin been scolding you again?"

"Shame on you, Thee Gorden, to speak of your father's own sister in that style. When I get to be as old as Aunt Jane I'll be just as [illegible]."

"I don't doubt it; a perfect [illegible] only," laughed Thee. "Only don't try your claws on [illegible] a while; as for that old cross patch, Min, [illegible] I'll call her worse names than that."

"But, Thee, it wasn't Aunt Jane at all. I have not seen her since dinner; she has probably been smothering between two feather beds through all this storm."

"What on earth, then—Oh, I see! Fred beat you at chess!"

"Yes."

And Minnie gave a spiteful little stroke at a ball with her mallet, and missed it; then she looked straight into Thee's eyes, laughed, and then began to play.

Minnie came off with flying colors this time. As they mounted the piazza steps Thee put both hands on her shoulders, squared her round, and said:

"I say, Min, if I had won this game would you have looked as you did when you came out?"

Minnie could not help the blood flushing up into her face; but she only laughed, gave his ear a sudden tweak, and ran up stairs to dress for supper.

Thee whistled a longer "whew" this time than before. "So the castle is yielding to the besieger at last! Good-better, best!" and at the last comparison he sent his hat whirling up into the air, when rather to his astonishment, it landed on the piazza roof.

"Oh, you goose!" shouted Tom, coming round the house just in time for that last performance. "If I could not throw better than that I'd quit. Who is going to get it, do you suppose?"

"Why you are, of course," said Thee. But just then a white hand came through the blind, and the hat disappeared. Thee rushed up-stairs to get it, and Minnie met him at the door of her room.

"Promise me something," said she.

"I will, if you tell me something."

"Well?"

"Why did you not answer my question down there on the piazza?"

Minnie dashed the hat out into the hall, and shut the door in his face.

Thee picked up the much-abused hat and turned into his own room, where he tormented Fred with a constant comparison of adjectives, but would give no rational answer to the questions of, "What does possess you?" "Have you gone crazy?"

Clear Lake is a wee bit out of mother earth that once seen one never forgets. It is a copy-set of a lakelet hiding itself on—nay, in—the very top of Laurel mountain, a place not overeasy to reach; so that without definite pains and determined climbing one goes on one's way never knowing what a picture has been passed by.

To-day it is especially beautiful, lighted up with the bright flutter of ribbons, and ringing with the merry voices of a fishing party—that was the name at least with which they dignified it; but of all the merry company only three seemed to be really engaged with hook and line—These three—Thee, Minnie and Fred—were standing upon rocks far out in the lake, evidently intent upon success. The rest of the party, who were enjoying themselves upon the shore, wondered how, in the absence of a boat, they had managed to get so far out; But Thee knew every foot of the rocky bottom, and Minnie, who could spring like a mountain deer, had been all over it with him the summer before. Fred, too, was equal to anything in that line; so from rock to rock they had made their way [illegible] and chatter of their companions would not disturb their work.

Minnie fished very energetically for an hour, then gathering up her line she called "Congratulate me, Thee and Mr. Harrington, I have eight fish, and now I am going to stop and rest till lunch time."

Fred came over to the rock nearest her, and with much laughing and some danger of a ducking for one or both, she managed to get her basket of fish over to him, and they wended their way to the shore.

Minnie joined a knot of young girls, and Fred, after showing the result of their morning's work to the ladies, carried the fish to the cook to be prepared for lunch. He then came back in search of his partner, but she was nowhere to be seen. Uno the big shepherd dog, who was a firm ally of Minnie's, had also disappeared, so Fred, concluding that she had gone on a tour of investigation, started in pursuit. After considerable search he met her coming round a great rock, her hands full of laurel blossoms.

"What! rhododendrons in July?" exclaimed he. "Surely you must be a fairy? By what enchantment did you procure these exquisite beauties at this time of the year?"

"That is my secret," said Minnie; "mine and Uno's. Isn't it, old fellow?" and she stooped to pat the shaggy head of the dog. "Not even Thee knows where these grow. I found them last year a week earlier than this, and came in search of them to-day, kindly expecting to find flowers."

"But why come alone?" asked Fred.

"Because I am selfish and did not want to share my charming secret with any one."

"And you won't show me the place?"

"Shall we, Uno?" asked Minnie, pulling one of the dog's brown silky ears. "Shall we show this curious person into our little Eden?"

Uno gave a quick little bark in reply, and leaned his head up against her, pushing his nose into her hand.

"Come, then," and Minnie turned round the corner of the rock again.

"How that dog loves you," said Fred, following her. "And no wonder, you talk to him as if he could understand. I verily believe you love him better than you do human kind."

"Better than many specimens of human kind, certainly; and who wouldn't, great faithful affectionate fellow that he is? I detest little dogs that snap and caper and show off their egotistical little pranks, and then sneak under the first convenient piece of furniture at the merest sound of alarm. But here we are at the gateway of my Eden."

"Exactly," said Fred, with a perplexed but amused countenance. "I suppose you know the 'sesame' that shall open this door in the rock, for door in the rock it certainly must be, since there is nothing else visible in this place."

But Minnie, pulled aside a tangled clematis that ran riot all over a great pile of granite boulders, and there, through a crevice, Fred saw a little open space carpeted with velvety moss, black water trickling down the great rocks that towered high on all sides, and in the midst stood the belated Rhodora, its waxy blossoms shining pale and pure in the dim light; feathery ferns nestled at its feet and clustered in the crevices of the rocks, and as they stood looking in silence they could hear the soft trickle, trickle of water.

"Do you wonder that I dislike to bring everybody here?" asked Minnie. "I never saw a cathedral; but when I have stood alone in the shadow of these great rocks, with these pure blossoms open before me in the still dim light, I have fancied that I know something of the feeling people have when standing before the religious shrines in the great cathedrals of the old world."

"I fancy the feeling is yet unlike," said Fred; "but the purity and perfection of these blossoms, with but the faintest occasional peep of sunlight to bring them to life and beauty, is it not wonderful?"

"Wonderful indeed," answered she. "It is one of the cool, quiet places that one comes to occasionally in a lifetime, where we can stand still and see God work under circumstances that would be disastrous to man's attempt." How lovely she looked standing there in the cool shadowy light! The man in his strong passion longed to take her in his arms, and hold her close to that heart, so masterfully claim her his own now and ever; but his indomitable will held him, quiet till he should be sure he had won.

"Do you know, Miss Hilton, you have not offered me a single one of these same blossoms yet?"

"You won your laurels yesterday afternoon." The words slipped out inadvertently; she could have boxed her own ears soundly as soon as they were uttered, but they were said, and she stood flushed and silent before him, not daring to lift her eyes.

"Give them to me then."

There was the same intensity in his voice that had startled her before. She reached out her hand to break a fresh cluster from the bush, but he caught it, saying: "Not that; give me this one," pointing to the one she had pinned at her throat. "And Minnie, don't give it unless you give me yourself with it, to be my own wife now and always."

For answer she unfastened the flowers and laid them in his hand.

He took her then, the right all his own, into his strong arms, and Minnie was almost frightened at the passion that blazed in his eyes and burned in his lips as he pressed them to hers.

Some time later and Fred whispered over Thee's shoulder, "Congratulate me, old fellow;" and Thee turning read the truth in his friend's eyes, and grasping his hand answered, "With all my heart."

A STUBBORN WITNESS.

The following examination recently occurred in Northern New York, in what are known as "Supplementary Proceedings." The questions and answers were as follows:

"Do you reside in ——?"
"I think I dus."
"Don't you know you do?"
"Yes."
"What is your business?"
"That is my business."
"You must answer my question."
"What is the question?"
"What is your occupation?"
"That is not the same question."
"Answer the question."
"It's farming I am."
"You are a farmer?"
"As much as anything."
"Where is your farm?"
"It is under a mortgage."
"No, no. Where is your farm?"
"At home, I suppose."
"In ——, is it not?"
"It is, sur."
"Who does?"
"The banker, sur."
"How came he by it?"
"I left it wid him for safe-kaping."
"You own the property, do you?"
"Yes, sur."
"Did you lease the property?"
"I [illegible] the farm, sur."
"Did you give him a paper called a lease?"
"I don't know what they called it."
"Where was the paper made?"
"At the paper mill, I suppose."
"You have a drag?"
"Yes, wid five teeth in it."
"Have you other property?"
"Four tin plates."
"What else?"
"A tin cup, sur."
"What else?"
"An ould woman."
"Now what else have you got?"
"A sick child."
"Have you swine?"
"No, sir; I have a little sow about half the size of B——'s fat."

The "supplementary" interrogatories didn't seem to have any special heft in them.

PEARLS.

Be prompt in all things.

Join hands only with the virtuous.

Faults are thick where love is thin.

Earth knows no joy without alloy.

Do not play when you should pray.

Question not the veracity of a friend.

None are so deaf as those who will not hear.

Touch not, taste not, handle not intoxicating drinks.

A story and a ball of snow, gather substance as they go.

We could not endure solitude were it not for the powerful companionship of hope or some unseen one.

The taste of beauty and the relish of what is decent, just and amiable, perfect the character of a gentleman.

Toil, feel, think, hope. A man is sure to dream enough before he dies, without making arrangements for the purpose.

The object of all ambition should be to be happy at home. If we are not happy there we cannot be happy elsewhere.

Befriend your friends, that they may love you still more dearly; befriend your enemies, that they may become your friends.

"All things come to him who waits," and the hotel waiter expects a quarter now and then.

A Kentucky man had two springs on his place, the waters of which, when mixed, effervesce like a seidlitz powder; and when an old mule got loose and drank copiously from first one spring and then from the other, it was seventeen minutes before he could catch his breath, and then he went and kicked down four rods of fence to make sure the disturbance wasn't caused by swallowing his own hind legs.

Our little ones sometimes speak telling truths. Leaving home, one morning, for the office, we kissed our four-year-old good-bye, saying to him, "Be a good boy to-day." "I will. Be a good man, papa." Sure enough, we thought. We need the admonition more than he. And who could give it more affectionately than this, guileless preacher? The words of the little preacher rang in our ears all day, and, we hope, were not without their effect upon our actions.—Ex.

Two ladies stood up in a Broadway stage, and hugged and kissed until they were jolted into a seat, when one of them said:

"How did you like Europe?"

"It's just splendid, for anything," was the reply.

"And were you sick?"

"Yes, awfully sick."

"And was your husband good to you?"

"O, he was too good for anything. [illegible]"

MAYOR RANDOLPH.

On the third of January next, L. V. F. Randolph, Esq., will assume official duty as Mayor of the City of Plainfield, and we hope his two years term of office will redound to his own honor and the best interests of the community. Mr. Randolph stands high as a citizen of respectability and unquestionably possesses marked intelligence and energy of character. He will have the advantage of a Council at his back in full political fellowship with himself, and therefore, not be badgered and abused by partisan enemies in that body as Mayor Harper has been. We wish Mayor Randolph success in the responsible but thankless position to which he has been elected.

PLAINFIELD.

There is not, as we have before declared, a healthier or more attractive place of residence in the whole United States than the rural City of Plainfield, nor one where opposing natural causes to the continuance of such good fortune are fewer and smaller.

That is the testimony of our enlightened medical practitioners and shared by all citizens of impartial judgment.

We want in Plainfield but little in the way of local government, and, in fact, have not the revenue to accomplish great purposes. Police surveillance, the preservation of sobriety, morality and good order, well lighted and regu*lated streets, and the removal of the* many petty nuisances and annoyances constantly occurring in every thickly populated district, comprise about the sum total of municipal duty hereabouts.

The Charter so far has proved itself a public blessing, inaugurating practical improvements and drawing hither rapidly increasing population, but it is profitable to remember, that the guiding hand of conservatism has alone kept us in the pathway of safety and away from the yawning gulf of debt and disaster.

Let us not deviate therefrom.

CAPTAIN GENERAL.

There appears to be much concern among a certain class of Republicans as to what shall be done for the personal welfare of ex-President Grant. First, with grand acclaim, he was to be placed at the head of the proposed Nicaragua Canal Company, but that speculation passing into the shade, the idea was started to raise by joint-stock subscrip*tion an endowment fund for his special* benefit, which not meeting with the financial encouragement expected, the plan of making him a life Senator was then broached, and that evoking the hostility it justly deserved, even from such decided Republican partisans as Mr. Blaine, the substituted scheme now is to create him Captain General of the Army, a title answering to the lordly English Field Marshal conferred upon the Prince of Wales.

We want no such royal designation in this country. We have now a Lieutenant General and that is more than is needed.

Greater would be both the national repute and that of ex-President Grant, were he to retire with the dignity shown by his predecessors, and not allow himself to be a standing candidate for public favors.

DOWN WITH THEM.

It is an incontrovertible truth that moderate and steady profits, derived from legitimate business and prudently husbanded, are the only reliable architects of prosperity, both private and public. Wealth otherwise acquired is of doubtful solidity and benefit.

The curse of the present day is the grasping spirit of monopoly, a determination to crush out of existence small traders and producers, and the desire of gambling speculators to get rich, by hook or by crook, at the expense of honest industry.

That evil is extending its baneful influence every year, and if no other preventive can be found, statutory law ought to be enacted and exerted for its suppression. The welfare and liberty of the people demand protection from cormorants at home far more urgently than from those abroad.

The powerful combination of capital, not for the development of natural resources, but for the cornering of markets and raising the prices of life's necessities, such as flour, grain, pork, sugar, coffee, oil, coal, &c., coupled with the desire to trample under foot individuals and companies of small or moderate means, but of worthy intentions, is at enmity with the rights and well being of the masses and should arouse their earnest opposition.

Monopolists never did and never will advance the public good. Their gain is the plunder of honest men.

Down with them.

* * *

General Hancock's vote in Indiana, as officially declared, reads backward and forward the same—225,522.

* * *

The defeat of General Hancock was an unfortunate event for the business interests of the whole country, gamblers, monopolists, syndicates and subsidizers excepted, as time will prove.

* * *

Business failures have been frequent and disastrous since the Presidential election, and wages, in many instances, gone down instead of up. Where are the political prophets who so loudly predicted universal prosperity to follow the success of Garfield and Arthur?

* * *

Two extensive and reputed wealthy houses in the coffee trade in New York failed last week for a large amount. Cause—the over-reaching endeavor to control importations and make consumers pay heavy tribute to speculation. Were all monopolists forced to succumb, honest dealers might have a chance to live.

* * *

The large vote cast for the Democratic candidates for Council on the Citizens' ticket at the recent City Election, when there was no organized effort to bring it out, speaks well for the sturdy Democracy of Plainfield and shows that they wield no insignificant power. Keep your powder dry Democrats, and when the time comes fire again!

M. de Lesseps, of Panama Canal notoriety, report says has offered the Presidency of the American Committee connected with that project to Mr. Thompson, Secretary of the Navy, a jolly old tar from the oak clearings of Indiana. M. de Lesseps is a wily diplomat, thoroughly skilled in a profession which a long-headed French statesman once pronounced to be the art of concealing intentions.

THE BIGGEST MAN IN THE WORLD.

There arrived in New York Wednesday of last week, by the steamer City of Berlin, the Chinese giant, Chang; nine feet in height, and very likely the biggest man in the world. A reporter six feet three inches tall with a high hat on, walked under the giant's outstretched arm near the shoulder, and there was six inches clear space between the hat and arm. Chang wears a watch given him by Queen Victoria, which weighs 2½ pounds and has a chain nine feet long. He speaks and writes English, French, German and Italian. He is imported by Barnum who pays him $500 a week.

GENERAL NEWS.

Dakota asks for admission to the Union as a State.

A bill has been introduced in Congress to change the time of electing Presidential electors and Congressmen to the second Tuesday in October instead of November.

The Democrats made a clean sweep in the municipal election in New Haven on Tuesday of last week; and the affairs of the city, in passing under new control, are assured of an excellent administration under Mayor Robertson and a Democratic Common Council.

There is at present standing to the credit of the United States treasury about $85,000,000 in gold bullion. It has been decided to coin $10,000,000 of this monthly until the entire amount shall be used up, the denominations to be $5 and $10. The work will be performed at the Philadelphia Mint.

A site for the fair of 1883 has at last been determined upon, the place being Inwood, about ten miles north of City Hall, New York city, a spot accessible by rail and water, and deemed in every way eligible as a site. It borders on the Hudson, and can be reached by annex boats from all the railroads terminating at Jersey City and Hoboken.

During a recent boring for water in the Wimmera district, Victoria, a tree was passed through for a distance of six feet at a depth of 250 feet. Several fruit stones were brought to the surface. At some period of the world's history a grove of trees is supposed to have occupied this subterranean spot, and the great depth of earth now covering the remains of the vegetation indicates a vast lapse of time since it flourished.

The full official vote of the Fourth District in the recent election of Congressmen was as follows:

	Harris	Kilpatrick	Larison
Hunterdon	3,934	2,773	181
Somerset	3,188	2,539	81
Sussex	2,913	2,466	16

TESTIMONIALS:

"You ask me to favor you with my experience and impressions of Miss NELLA F. BROWN. I seldom if ever yield to requests of this nature. I feel less hesitation in this instance because of Miss Brown's exceeding modesty and unpretentiousness, which are characteristics of genius.

I am informed that she never received instruction in the conventional school of elocution, which fact is greatly in her favor. In this she may be compared with Fanny Kemble and the late Charlotte Cushman, who were illustrious examples of what genius may attain without elocutionary training.

Miss Brown has appeared twice upon the "Star" Course in one season to the eminent satisfaction of vast audiences, and will appear again this coming season. This, I take it, is a sufficient endorsement. Yours very truly,

T. B. PUGH,
Manager of "Star" Course, Phila.

From Dr. Vincent.

MRS. MARY A. LIVERMORE is a woman of superior intellectual power. She is wise, womanly and eloquent, and in my opinion the most able, natural and effective of all the women speakers now on the American lecture platform.

AMONG the many stylish conveyances that our city can boast of, we noticed recently a handsome three seat, cut under, depot wagon the property of Mr. George Listignon. Its attractive appearance and graceful shape lead us to inquire the name of the builder, who we found to be Mr. J. P. Homan of Plainfield. The vehicle is greatly to his credit.

THE skating on the ponds in this vicinity was fine last week, and many lovers of the exhilirating sport visited Tier's Lake, whose frozen surface afforded ample room for their enjoyment. MR. THOS. Worth has just completed a harness set for Mrs. N. W. Pike, which eclipses anything heretofore manufactured by him. All the mountings are of solid silver plate, with monogram "N. P." engraved thereon. Together with the stylish horse for which the harness was made, and the fine carriage attached, the whole turn-out is a handsome one.

THE advertisement inserted in another column of the first Fessinger-Evans Recital, announces a combination of talent and a selection of music that will appeal to the taste and demand the attendance of the lovers of melody in our city. We would urge upon each the wisdom of securing favorable seats for the course as soon as possible, or the best will be selected.

THE second of a series of lectures now being delivered by the Rev. A. H. Lewis, was given in the Seventh Day Baptist church on the evening of Sunday last. The subject announced,—"Courtship and Marriage"—appealed to the interest of the majority, and in consequence a large audience of all ages and both sexes assembled to listen to a powerful discourse on "Woman; Her Superiority to Man, and His Moral and Intellectual Worthlessness Apart from Her". The subject was treated in a manner that showed enviable experience with the bright side of the question, and with an earnestness of advice that betrayed the speaker's sympathy with mankind and desire for its welfare.

"Is 'Hell' A Reality?"

The third lecture in the course at the Seventh Day Baptist church, upon the theme above named, will be delivered next Sunday evening, Dec. 19, at 7:30. Particular attention will be paid to the idea of "future punishment," as it appears in religions other than the Christian. Seats free.

Sworn In.

Mayor Harper administered the oath of office to all the newly elected Councilmen, excepting Mr. Chas. Tweedy, at the Council Rooms, last Saturday evening. Mayor Randolph had previously taken the oath of office before Judge McCormick at Elizabeth. The new officers enter upon the discharge of their duties January 3d, 1881.

Minstrels.

The following extract from the Chicago Times is in reference to the Company that will perform at VanDeventer Hall on next Monday evening.

Haverly's Theatre was packed last night, which means that nearly three thousand people had assembled to witness one of the best entertainments to be seen on our stage, to wit: that given by Mme. Rentz's Minstrels. It is but simple justice to say that all were delighted, which is the highest praise we can give, and which this splendid Company fully deserves.

The Tabernacle of Israel.

Friday evening, Dec. 17th, an exhibition and lecture will be given in Assembly Hall, the proceeds of which will be devoted to the Sunday School Library Fund of Grace Church. During the evening there will be exhibited by the lecturer, a complete model of the above memorable work, which is one-twelfth the supposed size of the original. The lecture and entertainment will be of a highly instructive character, while the object for which it is given is a worthy one. The price of admission will be 25 cents.

Tableaux.

Large financial success is due the Heavenly Rest Mission Chapel of Evona from the entertainment given at VanDeventer Hall, on Monday evening, in aid of that place of worship. A series of tableaux-vivants composed the greater part of the programme, interposed by recitations and enjoyable music. Miss Titsworth and Miss Potter, of this city, kindly contributed such welcome additions as their elocutionary talents enabled them to do; and Mr. Theodore Miller and Miss Annie Brewster also assisted in the evening's entertainment.

A Library in one Volume.

Hill's Manual of educational, social, commercial and legal subjects, is a book comprising the result of the wide experience of the teacher, journalist and business man who has compiled it. Nine pages are required for its index which comprises, besides social and business forms, reference tables on many important matters, laws of etiquette, how to write and punctuate, parliamentary rules, dictionary of synonyms, how to compose poetry and hundreds of other useful subjects. By addressing the agent, Mr. A. O. Ball, 54 Pennsylvania avenue, Newark, circulars descriptive of this valuable work will be forwarded.

A Reward for Heroism.

Last summer, Richard Stockton, a son of Attorney General J. P. Stockton, at the risk of his own life, saved that of a stranger, Mr. Emory Clapp, Jr., at Long Branch. Mr. Clapp was being carried out to sea by what is known as a "sea puss," when Mr. Stockton plunged into the surf and rescued the drowning man. For this brave act he has been awarded, under an act of Congress of June 20th, 1874, from the Treasury Department, U. S. Life Saving Service, a fine gold medal, with the following inscription: "To Richard Stockton, for signal heroism in saving Emory Clapp from drowning at Long Branch, N. J., July 31st, 1879." Mr. Stockton is at present residing in this city.

Improving Elizabeth River.

The contract for improving the Elizabeth River has been awarded to Morris & Cummings. The Elizabeth Herald says the work to be done, as set forth in the specifications, is the widening and deepening of the channel connecting the deep water of the Arthur Kull. The Arthur Kull, or the Staten Island Sound, is west of Shuter's Island, and on it the city fronts. The Arthur Kull, commonly known as the "Kills," is east of the island. The approximate dredging is to cover 260,209 cubic yards, and the channel to be made 400 feet in width and thirteen feet deep at mean low water. The present appropriation secured by Congressman Ross is $50,000. This amount will be insufficient to complete the work, but Mr. Ross is assured of another appropriation this winter. The contract is to be completed by July next.

Something New for Children.

Dr. J. H. Vincent, the famous Sunday School organizer, has found time to invent an instructive amusement for the little ones. It consists of small blocks of wood, about two inches by one and a half inches in size and varying in thickness from a quarter to three-quarters of an inch, shaped like a closed book. On these are pasted paper, on which is printed on back of cover the name of a book in the Bible. On one side appears the name of a chapter and writer of book, also subject of text. On the reverse side appears a scripture text from the book. There are 66 blocks, embracing the books of the old and new testament. The blocks are placed in a box in the order in which the Books appear in the testaments from Genesis down. The object is for a child to tumble all the blocks in a promiscuous heap on a table, and then place them correctly in their order into the box again, thus learning the names of each Book of the Bible, and also gaining a knowledge of the subject of each one by reading a text from a chapter. Block Book Library is the title given, and Messrs. Spicer & Hubbard of this city are manufacturing them by the thousands. When introduced into the market the price per set will be about $1.50.

Physical Culture.

At the Gymnasium of the Plainfield Athletic Club, was given on Saturday evening a public reception to the friends of the members of the gentlemen's class and all others who desired to attend. Besides the usual exercises in light gymnastics and calisthenics—which enabled the audience to form an idea of the methods followed—Prof. Burnham and Mr. John Mayer gave a public exhibition of their strength and agility, and the uses of certain apparatus. During the evening the Revs. Ketcham and Lewis addressed the gathering in favor of the advantages of physical culture, the need of a strong frame to develope the brain in its fullest extent and the necessity of the proper training of the body to insure its healthful existence.

Prof. Burnham followed with a reference to the condition of the Club which had gone to such great expense in order to place these advantages within reach of the Plainfield public. In order to maintain the institution the support of the people was necessary; and if such support was not forthcoming, the association would be compelled to disband the classes and close the Gymnasium. It is to be hoped that no such action will be necessary. Already the benefits that are sure to follow a systematic course of bodily exercise, are being felt and appreciated by those who have taken advantage of the opportunity afforded.

Personalis.

General and Mrs. Wm. H. Sterling, Miss Fisher, Mrs. D. O. Wetherspoon, the Misses Wetherspoon and their brother, were the guests of Mrs. George B. McClellan at her New York residence on last Saturday evening. The occasion was the entrance of Miss McClellan into society.

Rev. Dr. N. E. Smith, formerly of this city, has accepted a call to the State street Congregational church of Brooklyn. His many friends will rejoice to hear of this pastor's attainment of so lucrative a charge.

Mr. Daniel F. Beatty, Mayor of Washington N. J., and manufacturer of the celebrated and extensively used organs and pianos that bear his name, was in our city as the guest of Mr. David Kilbourn during the early part of this week.

The many friends of Mrs. J. Oliver Smith, nee Nettie Walden, in this city, will learn with sorrow of her demise from that dread disease, consumption. Mrs. Smith was a niece of ex-Councilman S. C. Ryder, and was beloved by a large circle of acquaintances.

Thanks to friend Chas. Hodges for delicious oranges grown and picked from his plantation in Florida, near Jacksonville.

Mr. John Crawford, of 922 Sixth ave. N. Y., and 60 Duer street North Plainfield, is prepared to furnish weddings, parties and entertainments with everything requisite for a first class collation. Elegant china, glass, silver and linen with efficient waiters and cooks always ready for service.

DELICACIES FOR EPICURES.

Christmas without its plum pudding and other accessories of a palatable feast would be only half celebrated. For bottled pickles and canned vegetables, fine fruits and nuts, the necessary ingredients for puddings and pies and all such pleasures of the taste we can only advise our readers to patronize the merchant most convenient of those mentioned as follows: P. M. Demarest, opposite Post Office; James Dunn, No. 26 Park avenue; A. V. Searing, No. 7 Park ave; Huff Bros., No. 28 Park ave; and Randolph's Market, No. 12 Park ave. For poultry and game, beef, pork, mutton, veal, corned and smoked meats, fish and oysters, all will do well by buying of Messrs I. TenEyck opposite the Chautauqua Building; Lewis & Co., Park ave, or D. W. Rogers near the Post Office.

Residents of North Plainfield will receive satisfaction by dealing with Wm. H. Shotwell, Arnold & VanNorstrand, S. R. Mooney and George Feller.

CARDS FOR NEW YEARS.

The usual enterprise, which we claim is shown in every department of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST job printing office, has been followed in our efforts this season to secure from all the prominent manufacturers an assortment of styles and kinds of New Year's cards such as has never before been offered the Plainfield public. We would respectfully urge upon all desiring these necessary accompaniments of the day's celebration, to call and examine the samples and prices.

Y. M. C. A. Course.

Mrs. Mary A. Livermore will deliver the next lecture of the Y. M. C. A. Course on Monday evening next in the M. E. Church. Subject:—"What shall we do with our Daughters?" Reserved seats may be procured at Reynold's Pharmacy.

Firemen's Relief Association.

The regular quarterly meeting of the above Association was held on Monday evening last, at the house of Gazelle Engine Co. No. 1, President J. A. Hubbard in the chair. In the absence of the Secretary, A. L. Force was appointed pro tem. Treasurer R. J. Shaw presented the following report for the quarter: Cash received, $58.30, from the following sources: Insurance agents, $14.22; Steamer No 2, $2.25; interest on Fire Department Bond, $30.00; interest from Savings Bank, $6.83. He also reported the expenditure of $50.00 for the burial and relief of a brother fireman. Report received and ordered placed on file. The chairman of the Relief Committee reported no applications for relief, other than the case above quoted. The following amendment to the By-Laws, which was passed at the September meeting, was ordered printed in slip form and to be pasted in all the By-Laws. The amendment is of so much interest to the different companies that we re-publish it in full:

"The various Companies of the Plainfield Fire Department must make quarterly reports to the Association of the names of such members of their Companies whom they recognize as belonging to the Firemen's Relief Association, said list to be used by the Board of Trustees, as a guide in affording relief, and in case of any member joining the Association between the quarterly reports, his name and one quarter's dues, must be forwarded immediately to the Treasurer of the Association, and in the event of relief being given to any member who afterwards proves not to have been such, the amount of relief paid will be charged to the Company to whom said member belongs."

Chief Voorhees, as chairman of the delegation to State Convention, held at Paterson on Sept. 23d, reported the proceedings of said Convention, the principal feature of which was that the new style of collections direct from Insurance Agents, was a benefit to at least eight-tenths of all the Associations in the State. He stated that delegates from every place in the State having a fire department, were in attendance, and that an increased interest seemed to be taken by all Associations in collecting from Insurance Companies; so much so that it was reported efforts would be made at the Legislature by the Insurance Companies to go back to the old style of collecting from them, viz: through the Secretary of State; but the fact of it being a benefit to eight-tenths of the Associations in the State, to continue the present style, the effort will undoubtedly fail. The report was received, committee discharged and the report ordered spread on the minutes. No further business appearing, the Association adjourned to meet at the house of Engine Co. No. 2 on the second Monday in March, unless sooner called together by necessity.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

Three hundred thousand California salmon are in the hatching house of the New Jersey State Fish Commission, and are almost large enough to deposit in the rivers and waters of the State. The fish were hatched from eggs received in October from the United States Fish Commission. Within the next two weeks 100,000 trout eggs will be deposited in the hatching house of the State Fish Commission, and the young fish will be ready for distribution in March or April.

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS.

It may be a matter of economy on the part of North Plainfield Township, to continue the experiencing of the inconveniences arising from the want of a lock-up or any such receptacle for the keeping of disorderly characters; but in these days of tramps and vagrants it is folly to any longer delay the securing of a piece of ground and the erecting of such a building. As it is now, the Constable must keep his prisoners in his own house over night and transfer them to Somerville in the morning, or impose on the good nature of Captain Dodd and avail himself of the conveniences of Plainfield's City Jail.

SCOTCH PLAINS SCRATCHINGS.

The Young Ladies' Association of this village gave their first public entertainment of this season last Wednesday evening. Those who attended the sociables held by this Society last Winter, will not need to be told that the audience enjoyed themselves. The programme provided was varied and entertaining. Several excellent recitations and a couple of songs rendered very sweetly, and with excellent taste were followed by two very comical farces—"A Precious Pickle" and "The Champion of Her Sex." A comic recital depicting the "Modern Cook," and giving a few of the conditions on which the Celtic lady was willing to come for a "trial," was followed by a song, which closed the performances. The remark has been made by theatrical managers that it is very difficult to persuade actresses taking parts requiring shabby dress, to reduce their costumes to the required plainness. Our young ladies evidently were not afraid to dispense with the attractions which becoming dress adds to beauty. They were truly "got up regardless." The dress of Mrs. Gabble, who had left her wash for a few minute's gossip, had evidently been studied from life. The comedietta were both rendered with great spirit; and, if we mention no names, it is only because it would be so extremely difficult to say who succeeded best. At the close of the performances, refreshments were passed, and entertainers and audience resolved themselves into a very pleasant social gathering. Last Winter the Association divided the proceeds of their entertainments, quite a handsome sum, between the three churches of the village. The Entertainment [illegible] be devoted to the purchase of [illegible] for the chapel of the [illegible] to build. The proceeds of last Wednesday's entertainment is very generously given in [illegible] the sum required for that purpose.

THE "RAQUET."

The latest thing in dances is called the "raquet," and is neither a waltz nor a polka; though the best parts of both are preserved. The music strikes up with a crash, as though a volcano had broken out, and the girl will cling tightly as though frightened, if she understands the dance, and the young man will reassure her by a gentle pressure, if he understands the dance or knows anything at all. At the second crash they dodge, as though some one had thrown a blacksmith shop at them, and start in. They begin by imitating the struggle for life, representing a person who is drowning, but at each crash of the cymbals and bass drum they dodge and scoot to one side, then dart back again to each other sideways, and then, as the crashes of music become more terrific and deafening, they try to drive each other through the floor by main strength, get desperate, and claw and tear and pull, and all at once they go raving mad with hydrophobia and delirium tremens and gnash their teeth and rave and suffer the most terrible agony—and it is all over. It is a short dance, as the design is amusement and not murder. But as short as it is, it is said to be very sweet.

Morris County Fossils.

Prof. George H. Cook secured last Summer a great prize for the Rutgers Museum. Several slabs of the red sandstone (triassic) formation, about twenty feet long and twelve wide in which are over one hundred foot prints (clearly and sharply defined,) of extinct species of birds and reptiles. Some of these tracks are fifteen inches in length and were made thousands of years ago by these huge animal birds or crocodiles who promenaded on the margin of some pond or river. These slabs came from Morris county near Boonton, and it is said, no other museum in the country has anything so perfect.—Era.

HAPPY ENDING.

Long Suffering of One of the Best Men of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess Co., N. Y.—His final and Complete Recovery from Gravel.

PLAIN WORDS ARE BEST.—Mr. Edward S. Hicks, of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county, N. Y., had suffered long from Stones in the Kidneys. He sought relief, of course. Who would not? What are time and money to health? Mr. Hicks consulted the best physicians of his village and also of Poughkeepsie—and none better can be found anywhere—but, unhappily, without a good result. A friend in Rondout advised Mr. Hicks to go to Rondout and see Dr. David Kennedy about his trouble. This Mr. Hicks finally did. Dr. Kennedy saw at once what the suffering man's ailment was, and that Favorite Remedy was the medicine he needed. The Doctor prescribed it, and Mr. Hicks went home without much confidence in the power of "Favorite Remedy" to do him more good than other medicines had done before. But hope clings to straws, and he thought there might be one chance out of many in his favor. He followed the directions and was both surprised and delighted to find himself promptly improving. To-day Mr. Hicks is a well man.

While Dr. Kennedy is interested in introducing "Favorite Remedy," he continues to practice his profession and performs all the capital and minor operations in surgery. State your case; letters promptly answered. Address Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y. dec10w4

THE SUN FOR 1881.

Everybody reads THE SUN. In the editions of this newspaper throughout the year to come everybody will find:

I. All the world's news, so presented that the reader will get the greatest amount of information with the least unprofitable expenditure of time and eyesight. THE SUN long ago discovered the golden mean between redundant fullness and unsatisfactory brevity.

II. Much of that sort of news which depends less upon its recognized importance than upon its interest to mankind. [illegible]

Beware of Pedlars!
How to Correct and Improve

IMPROVEMENTS OF THE DAY.

One of these is found in KING'S PATENT COMBINATION SPECTACLES.

As the name indicates, they consist of a combination of silver and steel frames, the silver bridge making a more elegant, durable and flexible frame and enabling any dealer to adjust it to any face, so that the focus of the lens is in the direct line of vision, thus giving the greatest benefit possible to be derived from the use of spectacles.

It also enables anyone to adjust it themselves to the position where it best corrects the sight.

All persons buying the COMBINATION SPECTACLES have their eyes fitted by KING'S NEW SYSTEM, the method used by Professional Oculists and the only true means of accurately testing the vision.

THIS SYSTEM IS COPYRIGHTED, and can only be used by Mr. King's Agents, all of whom are instructed in its use.

The KING SPECTACLES are the first in merit; over a million pair now being in daily use.

We are glad to announce that the Sole Agent for this place and vicinity is

The leading Scientists of to-day agree that most diseases are caused by disordered Kidneys or Liver. If, therefore, the Kidneys and Liver are kept in perfect order, perfect health will be the result. This truth has only been known a short time and for years people suffered great agony without being able to find relief. The discovery of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure marks a new era in the treatment of these troubles. Made from a simple tropical leaf of rare value, it contains just the elements necessary to nourish and invigorate both of these great organs, and safely restore and keep them in order. It is a POSITIVE Remedy for all the diseases that cause pains in the lower part of the body—for Torpid Liver—Headaches—Jaundice—Dizziness—Gravel—Fever, Ague—Malarial Fever, and all difficulties of the Kidneys, Liver and Urinary Organs.

As a Blood Purifier it is unequaled, for it cures the organs that make the blood.

CHRISTMAS FROLICS.

"Merry Christmas! Merry Christmas!"
What a joyful, ringing cheer.
Memory brings us, from our childhood,
While again these words we hear—
Much of gladness,
Naught of sadness,
Comes to greet the listening ear.

Sleigh-bells jingling, fingers tingling,
In the icy morning air;
What cared we for cold December,
Or the snow-coast's blinding glare?
Snow-drift treasures
Proved rare pleasures
When the lass we loved was there.

Home returning, love kept burning,
Till the happy, star-lit night;
Gathering round the cheerful fireside,
Young and old would all unite,
Apples toasting,
Chestnuts roasting—
Anything to give delight.

Then the meeting and retreating,
In the [illegible] and [illegible] well!
While our youthful hearts kept beating
Thus in love we would conceal;
Which we dared not,
Or we cared not
Yet to own, or seem to feel.

All those golden memories, olden,
Come with joy from youth's bright stage!
Fairest of the sunlit pictures,
Painted on life's varied page!
They can never Hearts dissever
From the glories creeping age!
—Nathan Upham.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

A CHRISTMAS DIAMOND.

"But, papa, there is nothing else I want. Maud has a diamond ring, and is one year younger than I."

"I am very sorry, my little daughter," said Mr. Montague, passing his hand over the golden hair of his child, "but I do not think it wise or proper for children to wear diamonds."

"You are rich, papa."

"Yes, Ethel, but hundreds are poor, and the money you desire for an ornament would provide several families with many comforts. Papa seldom denies you anything, little girl, and in this case you must consider it wisest and best for him to decide."

Ethel did not consider anything at that moment, except her desire to possess a diamond as large and as costly as her cousin Maud's.

It was a few days before Christmas, and Ethel was going with her parents to spend it with Maud's father and mother. Mr. Montague was a wealthy merchant, and a man of excellent judgment. When his wife entreated him to withhold certain articles of dress from their little daughter lest she would become vain and fond of show, he readily agreed with her, and Ethel was, in consequence, well and neatly, but never showily dressed. Her parents disliked to see a mere child loaded with jewelry; and, as Mr. Montague remarked: "Ethel would enjoy nothing in anticipation if every wish was lavishly supplied."

For several days Ethel went about in an unhappy frame of mind. She no longer ran to meet her father, no longer sat for hours on his lap and listened to his very interesting conversation about scientific subjects, or watched him as he examined objects under his microscope. As she expressed it, "she was real cross with papa."

Mr. Montague being a fond and indulgent father, might have given up to this exceeding spirit if it had not been for his wife, who insisted on permitting the evil to work its own cure.

"Ethel," said her mother, one morning, "you and I will go out to Aunt Carrie's to-day. Papa cannot come out before Christmas eve."

"I don't care when we go," said Ethel, carelessly, still thinking of her coveted treasure.

Aunt Carrie was delighted to see them, and immediately asked them to assist her in preparing for the family festival. Ethel forgot her disappointment for a time as she and Maud filled cornucopias or dressed dollies. At night, however, when the cousins were in bed, Ethel returned to her complaints, and Maud quite agreed with her that "it was real mean in a rich papa to deny his only child a diamond ring!"

The girls were too busy all day preparing presents, to find time for repining, and Maud's papa was so full of fun he kept them all in good humor.

"Sister," said he to Mrs. Montague, "what time shall we look for Charlie? I propose to drive down my new trotter and bring him up from the station."

"I have no idea what train he will take," said Mrs. Montague. "He has several purchases to make, and certain calls which he never neglects on Christmas eve."

"Would you ask the master to stop here a bit?" asked Maurice, the coachman, of Annie, the sewing girl, who was busy weaving evergreen wreaths.

Annie consented, and in a few moments Mr. Merton stood in the hall. "Well Maurice," said he, cheerfully, "have you come to ask for Christmas out?"

"No, your honor," said Maurice, "and if you'll be so kind as to speak low, I would be after telling you there's a smash-up on the express, and I was thinking the ladies need not know. It's five miles below, and the word has just come. I wouldn't bother the ladies about it, yer honor."

Mr. Merton took the hint, and said, in a loud tone; "Yes, Maurice, put the trotter to the light buggy, and go down with me to the station."

"If you'll pardon me, your honor, the carriage would do better, as mistress is expecting some bundles by the four o'clock train."

"All right," said Mr. Merton; "but get ready as soon as possible."

The happy group in the music-room heard a portion of the conversation and went quietly on with their work. Mr. Merton, however, did not return to them, but went at once to his dressing-room. Thanks to his own love of order and the excellent management of his wife, he knew where to find at once every article he required, and, by the time Maurice appeared, he was quite ready, with mysterious packages peeping out of his pockets.

"Good-bye, all," he said, hurriedly opening the door to look in upon the busy group. "Don't worry if you do not see Charlie and me until quite late. I have some last things to purchase in the village."

"Let the last things go, dear, and come back soon," said his wife.

Once beyond his own grounds Mr. Merton was a changed man. He could not drive fast enough, and Maurice, who was famous for his great care of the horses, now urged them continuously to increase their speed, until it became almost a run.

"First to our station, Maurice."

Maurice obeyed. Groups of men were standing about looking anxious.

"What news?" asked Mr. Merton.

"Four o'clock express smashed up and several killed. Our doctors have gone down, and we are waiting for another dispatch."

Click, click, click, went the instrument; the operator bent over it, and the crowd pressed about.

"Send word to Merton, and have him bring bandages. Twelve killed. Many wounded."

"Had you any one on the train?" asked a bystander, as Mr. Merton sprang into his carriage again.

"I fear so; but, for your lives, don't let it reach my family yet. Drive, Maurice; drive as you never did before!"

Maurice urged the spirited horses on. It was a desolate place where the accident occurred; one or two small houses were seen, but a swamp intervened, and the dead and dying were lying on the frozen earth, with only such comfort as their fellow-passengers could give them. Many who were not wounded were too much shaken up to be of any service.

The farmers' wives living nearest the scene of terror had promptly sent blankets and such stores as they could think of. The engine was an entire wreck, and, as yet, the relief train from the city had not arrived.

"Thank God, there is Mr. Merton!" said Dr. Sharp, as he finished bandaging a leg with pieces of a valuable shawl. Mr. Merton's horses fairly flew over the roadway, and across the treacherous marsh. What did he care for horseflesh now, when human beings were in danger?

"Bear up a little longer," said one of the doctors to a man whose pale face showed terrible marks of suffering, "help is near at hand."

The man smiled; but ere the fleet horses had finished their work he was at rest.

"Injured internally," said the surgeon. "No help for him."

There was no time for sentiment or ceremony. The groans of the suffering filled the ears of the volunteer nurses, and Mr. Merton had scarcely touched the ground before he was greeted with appeals from all about him for blankets, brandy, ether, bandages—in fact for all the needed hospital stores.

"Merton," said Dr. Sharp, when he had assisted him in removing the few articles he had brought, "They tell me your brother-in-law was on the train, but I have not seen him. Better keep a little brandy yourself, and find him at once."

Mr. Merton looked everywhere. Some of the victims were still imprisoned by timbers which men were removing as rapidly as possible; others sat or lay upon the ground, bearing their pain as best they could. It was impossible to pass any by when a little assistance might save them, and moments seemed like hours to the afflicted ones.

"I cannot find him," said Mr. Merton as he returned to the doctor; "are you quite sure he was here?"

"Do you mean Montague, the rich merchant in town?" asked a man who was sitting near by, holding his broken wrist until his turn came to be treated.

"Yes, my brother-in-law."

"He was here, sir; he sat in the seat before me; and just before the smash came the conductor spoke to him and called him by name."

"I must not give up the search," said Mr. Merton. "Were you on the right side of the car?"

"Yes, sir, and I was sent down the embankment over there with half a dozen others; perhaps he is there."

"No, he is not," said Dr. Sharp; "the men brought them all up long ago."

Mr. Merton was not satisfied. A whistle was soon heard, and in a few moments the confusion was increased by the arrival of a train with supplies of all sorts, and a large corps of surgeons; the company had done all in their power to relieve the suffering caused by the carelessness of an ignorant flagman.

There was no time to look for the missing man now; every able-bodied person was needed to assist the surgeons and prepare the train for taking the wounded back to town.

"Maurice," said Mr. Merton, "blanket your horses and search everywhere for Mr. Montague; do not leave a corner of the place without examination."

Maurice obeyed, and was not seen for some time; when he returned, his master was assisting the surgeon in a case of amputation, and the tender-hearted Irishman dared not speak to him. The operation was at last over, and a good woman was feeding the patients some stimulants, when Maurice ventured near.

"I think I have found somebody, sir. You see it's so dark now it's hard telling who, but I went down over the side there and I heard a woman singing, and sez I, it's a queer bird that will sing and the likes of this going on; so I waited a bit, and shure it was a woman singing, loud as you please, 'Pull for the shore,' and I sez, 'Where are ye now?' And then it was still saving a groan, and then she sang again. So I said as loud as ever I could, 'Are you hurted, and do ye want help?' and she called back: 'A gentleman is here, badly hurt; don't let them leave us.' 'And where are ye?' sez I. 'Just behind a big rock on the left side of the swamp near the woods,' sez she. I called back, 'Be aisy now till I speak to the gentleman,' and here I am, sir."

"Conductor," said Mr. Merton, springing up, "can you spare a lantern?"

"Sorry, sir, but every one is in use; the doctors have them all."

Mr. Merton would not despair.

"I will give you a hundred dollars for the use of a lantern fifteen minutes," said he; "there are one or two of the victims in the swamp still, and I must find them."

"Is that so? We will see what can be done."

The conductor went out, but did not return; he was needed elsewhere. Brilliant fires were already built on one side of the track, and around them were gathered the children and wounded passengers. Their light only made the outside darkness more terrible. Mr. Merton tried carrying a faggot from one fire with poor success, as the wind blew out the flame.

"Let me help you," said a lady, whose face was sadly scratched and had just been dressed. "If you will borrow one of the lamps from the cars, I will punch holes in one of those lunch baskets and improvise a lantern."

"Madam, you will never understand how much I thank you. Maurice, ask two of those men to come with us, and do you lead the way."

Over frozen ground, over broken timbers, glass and debris of every description, the little rescuing party made their way. The embankment was almost perpendicular, and so slippery that Mr. Merton found it difficult to retain his hold on the smooth lantern. A little more than halfway down Maurice paused.

"I hear her, sir," said he, "she is singing another tune now."

"Halloo!" he cried; "we are coming to help you."

"Good," replied the voice, "he is very weak now; be quick."

Once more she sang; this time that well-known air, "Never give up." The men grew more and more eager to reach them, and Mr. Merton in his haste slipped and fell, casting the light on the rock.

"Sing on, sing on," he cried; "your voice will guide us."

Still she sang; her voice was growing hoarse now, but her spirit never failed. Cheered by her, and guided as well, the rescuing party at last reached the rock.

"Who is with you?" asked Mr. Merton, as he nearly fell upon a prostrate form.

"I do not know," said she; "he is a gentleman who was badly wounded; I am holding my thumb on an artery to keep him from bleeding to death; he quickly and saved him. Where is your light?"

"Gone out. Has any one a match?"

One man had.

"Thank Heaven, it is my brother!" exclaimed Mr. Merton, as the light flashed in the face of the wounded man.

Unknown to the rest, Dr. Sharp had followed directly behind the party, and was soon ready to relieve the faithful girl.

"You will please get up, miss," said he; "you must be very tired if you have been here ever since the accident."

"I cannot without help," she said quietly. "I think my leg is injured. I crawled here to him when I saw him bleeding so, and the rock hid us from view, so I sang lest they should leave us."

"Gentlemen," said the doctor, "make a chair of your hands and carry this brave girl up the embankment; send us down a stretcher as quickly as possible, and I will soon have these patients cared for."

Rapidly, skillfully worked the surgeons and faithfully the assistants.

Nearly an hour afterward Doctor Sharp looked into the car reserved for the wounded ladies, and found the young girl looking worn and pale.

"Has a doctor examined your wound yet, miss?"

"No, sir," she replied, faintly, "others need them more."

Without another word Doctor Sharp lifted her in his arms, and placed her on one of the mattresses. A whistle brought one of the surgeons to him.

"Doctor," said he, "can you assist me for a few moments?"

"Certainly. Why has this been so long neglected?" he asked, as he examined the injured limb.

"She has been saving a man from death, the one we just dressed, you know."

Never in all her life before had Mary Gray been considered worthy of much care. Life had been a hard thing to her since her father died, and left her mother with seven to care for. She had hoped for an education, and her brightest, best dreams were of teaching school. But it could not be; and Mary worked day after day in a large room with hundreds of other girls about her, stitching, stitching until her eyes ached and head drooped.

She had taken the train at four to go only to the next station, where her mother and the boys were waiting for her with a royal Christmas greeting. It cost less to keep them a little way out of the city, and mother found work for them all.

Mary's great gift was her voice. She had taken a few lessons before her father died and the great change came; but now she only knew the songs she heard others sing, and she dared not trust herself to think of the music she so much craved.

It was "a bad fracture," the doctor said, "a very bad one," and the marvel was how the girl had endured the agony and still sung on in a clear, triumphant tone.

"Have that young lady taken to my house," said Mr. Merton to the doctor.

"Better try the hospital," said a surgeon; "it will be a slow case, and they tell me she is very poor—works in Bright & Gregory's shoe factory."

"I wish her to be taken to my home," said Mr. Merton with emphasis.

* * * * * * * *

"I wish papa would come," said Ethel; "we need the gentlemen so much now to put up our last decorations."

"They will soon be here," said her aunt. "Your uncle is still a boy and enjoys a good frolic with your father."

It was midnight before they came, and the house was already prepared for them; for Maurice had gone back and forth twice for needed articles, and all the joy of the morning was turned to sadness.

"Mrs. Montague," said Dr. Sharp, when Mary Grey was comfortably settled in a luxurious bed, "this brave girl saved your husband's life; some time when you can listen I will tell you the story."

Thanks to a good constitution, Mr. Montague gained rapidly, while Mary improved so slowly that her kind friends and her mother were anxious about her, and often consulted with the physician. "Only the overwork of years past telling now," said the doctor. "If she were a rich girl and could go abroad by-and-by, she would return made over."

"Ethel," said Mr. Montague one day when the child had hovered about for an hour, trying to do something for him, "I was bringing it out to you when the accident occurred."

"Oh, papa dear, I never wanted it; we kept you, and that was best of all, for I had been so wicked."

"But your present was ready and is now, dear; I put six hundred dollars in the bank for you on the twenty-fourth, and your bank book was about me somewhere. I did not bring you a diamond, my darling, but its value."

"And the diamond, too, papa. What is Mary but a pure diamond; and now you must let me spend every penny of the money on her, or I can never be quite happy."

When Mary Grey recovered, Mr. Montague provided for her family, and his daughter paid for her tuition, and only yesterday Ethel said to her cousin:

"Maud, dear, next Christmas we shall hear my Christmas diamond sing. Professor Park says her voice is wonderful—strong, sweet and pure, like her own dear self."

"When she sings," said Maud, "I shall think of that dreadful night when in cold and darkness she sang to save Uncle Charlie."

THE PASTOR'S RIGHT HAND MAN.

The preacher took his place in the conference room. It was the first conference meeting held after his arrival in parish. One of the deacons sat at his right. He was a stranger to almost everybody.

The meeting proceeded. The deacon acted as prompter to the new pastor, and the two carried on broken conversation in silent whispers. It served to introduce the minister to his new members. The dialogue ran something after this fashion:

"Who is that?" said the preacher. A man was speaking with quivering lips, sobbing tones and streaming eyes, (he always spoke so.)

"That," said the deacon, "is Gag Philider—whose neighbor's horse jumped into his cornfield and he gagged the animal. The poor critter almost starved to death before he was found. It made a stew in the parish, and he has gone by the name of 'Gag Philider' ever since."

A sister arose and related her experience in glowing terms.

"Smokes opium like a Turk," whispered the deacon.

Another rose and berated the fashion follies of modern church goers.

A man in the corner let fly a fiery philippic.

"More ardent spirit than holy spirit," murmured the deacon.

A leading merchant discoursed long on honesty in trade.

"Prays with his customers and then skins 'em," said the deacon.

Several spoke modestly; here and there, about whom the preacher's prompter made no remarks. His face clouded as a sister rose and whined forth some commonplaces about "charity."

"Needs it herself," scowled the deacon; "sent her poor old mother to the insane asylum, and took her money to build a house with."

A magniloquent brother followed with pungent exhortations on the duty of the church to the distant heathen.

"And yet," said the deacon, "he turned his own sister out of his house in a way no heathen would ever have been guilty of."

"All packed up and ready for heaven, tickets bought and paid for," said another disciple.

"First thing he has paid for in twenty years," added the deacon. "Would not dispensation of silence be a blessed thing for these frail disciples?"

"O wouldn't it," groaned the minister.

"Let's move the session to abolish speaking meetings," said the deacon.

"I'll go for it with all my heart," said the minister.

CHRISTMAS.

The swiftly passing months have again brought us to the verge of merrie Christmas.

It is a season of festivity throughout the Christian world, an anniversary day replete with tidings of great joy, and socially esteemed because of the pleasant re-unions and remembrances custom has ordained as a prominent part of its observance.

How cheering to think of the many thousands of homes Christmas makes happy. The genial firesides and richly laden tables, the mingling of relatives and friends, the mirth of innocent childhood, the melody of song and the fervency of praise, combine to form a mental picture of exquisite beauty.

But, alas, such is not Christmas to all. There is another picture painfully sad and sombre. It depicts the habitations of misfortune, wherein trouble and anxiety dispel radiant smiles; the abodes of penury, where no cheerful fire warms the shivering frame and no dainty viands appease the pangs of hunger.

That is also the Christmas of thousands, the murky shadow of the cloud, not the brightness of the sunshine.

May they who enjoy the munificence of fortune practically remember the needy?

'Tis Christmas! List! Hear ye not the angelic anthem—"Glory to God in the highest, on earth peace and good will to men."

LET US HAVE PEACE.

There has been a terrible editorial contest going on between the organs of the two Republican factions in Plainfield because of the recent election of Mayor.

They have thrown enough slimy mud at each other to dredge out Randolph's pond and ditch the lowlands of Cadmus.

What is the rumpus about?

The election is over, and after a fair and fair ballot Mr. Randolph thereby became the legally chosen Chief Magistrate.

Why not bow to the popular will?

We believe Mr. Randolph is qualified and disposed to make an efficient Mayor, and we intend to treat him with becoming fairness and respect.

It will be seasonable to censure when he does an official wrong.

There is not a faultless political man to be found in Plainfield, although a few self assumed immaculates may idly imagine themselves entitled to wear that exceptional badge.

We are confident that the Mayor elect intends to do right.

Give him a fair chance.

Would not the people be benefited, were the Republican gladiators in question to off coats, seize shovels, and go to work excavating mill ponds, instead of hurling back and forth editorial muck?

Let us have peace!

CHEATING.

The consumption of American canned meats, fruits and vegetables in England has been very extensive, every store for the sale of such commodities throughout the kingdom having a plentiful stock on hand. The quality being at first good, gave the American article high repute, and promised to add immensely and permanently to the value of our foreign exports.

It appears, however, that the old short-sighted game of cheat, after establishing a worthy character, has been resorted to, and bids fair, if continued, to spoil the traffic above named.

An intelligent London correspondent of a New York journal calls attention to the fact, that degeneration in the quality of American canned products, they in many instances turning out worthless, has sadly impaired their popularity and sale. He also alludes to the frequent rascally packing of apples sent from this country to England, the barrels when opened making a fine display of fruit, but only as a cover for inferior sorts below.

There is no escaping the truth, that the thing most needed in these United States is honesty—standard honesty, from the filling of a can or barrel with meat or apples to the rolling of an iron rail and from the manufacture of a pin to the building of a steamer. We are favored above all other lands with the elements of natural wealth, but, if we cannot honestly mould them into useful shape, it would be more to our credit to stop exporting and try getting rich by swindling each other at home.

John Bull calls this a "blarsted country."

Has not John some cause for the anathema when he pays good money for Yankee spoiled meats and rotten fruit?

DEMOCRATIC.

The total popular vote cast at the late Presidential election is stated to be 9,201,564 and divided as follows:

Garfield	4,439,082
Hancock	4,438,038
Weaver	305,509
Dow	9,797
Scattering	9,137

Authentic returns may vary the above figures some, but probably not to a great extent.

The neck and neck race between Garfield and Hancock is remarkable, and a party that can evenly divide the aggregate suffrages of the American people is not to be treated with contempt.

That party is the Democratic, which for eighty years, in spite of all kinds of opposition and every phase of fortune, has preserved its organization intact and is to-day as vigorous in defense of Constitutional Freedom as it ever was. A party well portrayed by Mr. Trumbull, of Illinois, in the following words:

"The Democratic creed is broad and liberal. It is opposed to monopolies and all special legislation which is calculated to foster and benefit one class of citizens, or branch of industry, at the expense of another, and to sumptuary laws which interfere with the individual rights of man, his religion, habits, or customs, no matter to what race he may belong, what faith he may profess, or from what country he may have come, provided he does nothing to disturb the peace of society or encroach upon the rights of others."

The Democratic party may be defeated, but it cannot be conquered. Like the Old Guard of Napoleon it will again advance with renewed courage and fight on to victory.

John Sherman will undoubtedly receive the election of United States Senator from Ohio, Gen. Foster having withdrawn from the contest.

A recent act fixing salaries for the Prosecutors of several of the counties of this State has been declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court, being bad as special legislation.

FITZ-JOHN PORTER.

It affords us pleasure to extract as follows from the editorial columns of the Philadelphia North American, a decided Republican paper:

"No fair-minded man who is acquainted with the facts of the case and is not absolutely blinded by political prejudice can regard the course of the Senate in the Fitz-John Porter affair with other feelings than those of wonder and regret. No evidence could be more conclusive than that which proved Fitz-John Porter to be innocent of the offenses for which he was condemned. He was found guilty under circumstances which well nigh precluded the possibility of a different judgment. At that time everything was against him. The witnesses whose testimony he needed were fighting in the rebel ranks, and his prosecutors, who were also his judges, had everything their own way. Under such circumstances as these the trial was a farce and the verdict a foregone conclusion. From that time forward, during the many years through which he was an unregarded suitor in the halls of justice, he never ceased to protest against the rightfulness of the sentence by which his career had been ruined and he himself been disgraced. At last he was permitted to show cause why the sentence passed upon him should be rescinded, and every one knows the result. He was triumphantly acquitted. Although by right it had nothing whatever to do with politics, his case was made a party question. It became a bone of partisan contention, and the bill for his relief, which has at last been forced through the Senate after so much unedifying bickering, and which does the least possible justice to its beneficiary, was only carried by a strict party vote. There is something in this more than an intelligent and impartial observer can find out or comprehend. Even among those who voted against the bill there were many who did not attempt to traverse the justice of its object. They seem to have argued that Fitz-John Porter was a Democrat, and as such had no rights which they were bound to respect. Surely this is partisanship gone mad."

Properly does the editor charge his Republican friends in Congress with "partisanship gone mad." When justice and truth are sacrificed to gratify political rancor, madness becomes a fitting appellation.

The year now drawing to a close has been crowded with disaster. Frightful explosions in mines, great floods attended with great loss of life and property, and disasters on land and at sea without number, mark the course of the year with their sad monuments.

TESTIMONIALS:

"You ask me to favor you with my experience and impressions of Miss NELLA F. BROWN. I seldom if ever yield to requests of this nature. I feel less hesitation in this instance because of Miss Brown's exceeding modesty and unpretentiousness, which are characteristics of genius.

I am informed that she never received instruction in the conventional school of elocution, which fact is greatly in her favor. In this she may be compared with Fanny Kemble and the late Charlotte Cushman, who were illustrious examples of what genius may attain without elocutionary training.

Miss Brown has appeared twice upon the "Star" Course in one season to the eminent satisfaction of vast audiences, and will appear again this coming season. This, I take it, is a sufficient endorsement.
Yours very truly,
T. B. PUGH,
Manager of "Star" Course, Phila.

From Dr. Vincent.

Mrs. MARY A. LIVERMORE is a woman of superior intellectual power. She is wise, womanly and eloquent, and in my opinion the most able, natural and effective of all the women speakers now on the American lecture platform.

THE young ladies are working slippers and making dressing gowns. It's a fair return for the last Summer's ice cream, but don't pay for the Winter's coal and kerosene.

THE special discourses of the Revs. A. H. Lewis and Thomas H. Stockton on "the reality of Hell" and "a Soul's voyage," were largely attended on Sunday evening last.

THE Crescent avenue Church sociable of Friday night last, was made unusually attractive by the illusions and prestidigitations(!!!!) of a remarkably clever and skillful magician.

MR. L. M. French, at 18 Somerset st., has just finished the most beautiful assortment of single and double sleighs and cutters, from $25 upwards, ever offered the purchasing public. Patrons may be assured of satisfaction by dealing at his establishment.

THE Trinity Reformed Society are to be congratulated upon their securing, as their pastor, so talented and energetic a member of the profession as the Rev. A. V. V. Raymond of Paterson, N. J. With the received vigor that will be infused into the church over which this young divine has been established, it may confidently expect a continued and more rapid growth.

A COMPANY of young and aspiring comedians, who appeal for the support of Plainfield's citizens under the title of Boone's Boy Minstrels, will furnish an entertainment at VanDeventer Hall on Christmas night, consisting of the usual style of similar performances given by older combinations. These lads deserve the patronage of the public and will undoubtedly receive it.

THERE is no reason why ice should be high in price next summer. The crop already is an abundant one, and it will be the fault of ice dealers who fail to gather a crop while the ice is twelve or fifteen inches thick, in anticipation of its becoming thicker, if they do not successfully compete with more prudent dealers who will deliver at fair prices when the season is due.

NOTICE is given that an application will be made at the next session of the New Jersey Legislature for the formation of two counties, out of parts of Cumberland, Salem, Gloucester and Atlantic counties; and of portions of the counties of Warren, Hunterdon, Sussex and Morris, to be called the county of Musconetcong, with Hackettstown as the county seat.

IN some sections of the State they fine those young specimens of humanity who indulge too freely in swearing. A Justice of the Peace in Glen Gardner, Hunterdon County, recently paid over to the poor committee of Lebanon Township, $9.50 which he had collected in that way. What a "pot" could be made in Plainfield, if the law in this matter were strictly carried out? There would be no need of an extra assessment for the Poor Fund.

THE next regular rehearsal of the Vocal Society will take place in the Sunday school room of the First Baptist church on Monday evening, Dec. 27th, at 8 o'clock p. m. As there are only two or three rehearsals more before the concert, it is absolutely necessary that every member should be in attendance at each rehearsal. A great deal of work remains to be done, and to do it satisfactorily there must be a full attendance at rehearsals.

THE annual Parlor Sale, held in the chapel of the Holy Cross church by the ladies of that society, on last Thursday afternoon and evening, resulted, as it deserved to, in a most satisfying success both financially and otherwise. Numbers of those who have the interest of the church at heart, crowded the rooms and united together in buying five cent pin cushions for a half dollar, dime tidies for seventy-five cents and the like, with the laudable object in view of swelling the treasury of the church.

DURING these cold winter days, if you desire to experience a delightful sensation, resulting in a sudden transition from cold to heat, just step inside any of the places of business or rooms of the Chautauqua building, which is heated by steam from THE CONSTITUTIONALIST establishment. The general expression from all visitors is—"how delightful." Thanks to a home mechanic, Mr. John N. Schenck, the heating of the above named large building by steam, from a boiler of his own manufacture, is a success.

A LECTURE on the Tabernacle of Israel, by Mr. Carlos A. Butler, was given in Assembly Hall on Friday evening last. A representation by a model of what is supposed to have been the appearance of the structure was exhibited to the interest of all in attendance; and the explanatory remarks of Mr. Butler in relation, made its plan, erection and completion understandable. The profits of the entertainment—which are for the benefit of the Sunday school library of Grace church—it is to be hoped will be satisfactory.

THE performance given by Miss. Revie's Minstrel Company in Van Deventer Hall on last Monday evening, deserves the praise which we unhesitatingly accord it. Strictly modest in word and action, the songs and sketches rendered were thoroughly enjoyable and sparkling with pure wit; while the instrumental music furnished by talented soloists, specialists and the orchestra, far outrivalled the generality of such attractions. Except upon the occasion of the late Republican primary, the Hall was never before so completely filled.

ACCORDING to the Omaha Bee, one of our citizens has recently been enjoying himself immensely. The issue of that paper of Dec. 15, says:

"Mr. [illegible] [illegible]"

THE Thirteenth Volume of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST closes with next issue.

WILL "H. B. F." send full name to this office, if desirous of seeing his or her contribution in our columns.

1880 is rapidly fading away, and will soon be numbered with the past. As we look back it has been a pretty good year take it all in all.

THE establishing at White's fancy goods store, on the corner of Front and Peace streets, of a "Five-Cent Counter," will undoubtedly attract the patronage such enterprise deserves.

THAT twelve feet deep snow storm predicted by Vennor, the weather prophet, has not arrived, but a moderate fall of snow on Tuesday, makes one believe that the Canadian prophet came somewhere near his figures.

THE night operator at the telegraph office failed to put in an appearance one night last week, and his place is to be filled by a new man. The day operator, Mr. Schermerhorn, with the assistance of one of his clerks, F. G. Neighbor, perform the labors of day and night operator at present.

OUR readers who have been faithfully served through sunshine and storm, in winter and summer by the CONSTITUTIONALIST'S carrier, Mr. Charles Cook, will—we feel justified in thinking—be glad of the opportunity offered upon the presentation of his customary address for the New Year, to reward his fidelity in a substantial manner.

THOSE in want of a beautiful cutter or sleigh at a very low figure should call at the Repository of Plainfield's well-known manufacturer, L. M. French, on Somerset street, and examine his large stock on hand. To accommodate the public he will keep open this place of business from 8 o'clock a. m. to 1 o'clock, p. m. on Christmas Day, to allow them an inspection of his large stock. Go and see them.

THE reception held at the residence of the Rev. Wm. Manchee, recently, upon the first anniversary of his establishment as pastor of the Congregational church, was made materially commemorative by the many generous donations of household goods from members of his congregation, besides a purse of over $300. We are pleased to record the steady growth of this society under its energetic pastor and in its new building.

Postponed.

The First Annual Reception of the Catholic Young Men's Union, has been postponed until Wednesday evening, Jan. 5th, 1881.

Hell, the Reality of Personal Choice.

This will be the theme of the Lecture at the Seventh Day Baptist church next Sunday evening. Special pains will be taken to provide extra seats in the most comfortable manner possible.

Beautiful Sleighs.

L. M. French has a large lot of sleighs and cutters of elegant designs and patterns at his Repository on Somerset street. In order to give our citizens a chance to inspect them, he will throw open to the public his place of business on Christmas Day between the hours of 8 a. m. and 1 p. m., to allow all who desire an inspection of his beautiful handwork.

Interesting Lectures.

John Fiske, M. D., LL. B., of Cambridge, Mass., will deliver three lectures in our city on Jan. 4th, 8th and 11th, on "The American Political Idea." In referring to a lecture by this eminent divine, the Edinburgh Scotsman says: "We know not whether most to admire the lecturer's learning and ready wit, or the remarkable grasp of his thought." See advertisement in another column.

American Art.

Mr. Clark W. Evans, of this city, has opened rooms at No. 107 East Twenty Third street, N. Y., where will be displayed from time to time representative and late productions of the studios of this country. The object of the enterprise is to bring American Artists into close and better relationship with the public. At these headquarters, information relative to the profession that is represented can always be furnished.

Payments of Railroad Sufferers.

Up to the present time the West Jersey Railroad Company has paid $50,800 to the families of those who were killed and those injured in the May's Landing collision last July. The sum paid was for medical treatment and burial service and to satisfy the claims arising for eighteen deaths and injuries to twenty-two persons. The maximum sum paid for each death was $2,500. To Mr. Thomas E. Green, who lost two daughters, $5,000 was paid. A lad who was maimed and lost his hearing was given $3,750. John Chrystal who lost his wife and child, accepted $1,300.

The Trinity Reformed Sociable.

The members of the Trinity Reformed Church and their friends, assembled together in the Sunday School rooms of the church on Thursday evening of last week for the enjoyment of such social, mental and physical entertainment as had been provided. Mrs. Sheppard L. Stewart, Mr. Barick and the Misses Barick contributed by their vocal powers most admirable music, while Miss Lizzie Marsh of this city and Miss Tupper of New York favored the gathering with a display of their oratorical and elocutionary talents. The refreshments that followed were appreciated in a manner that left no room for doubt in this particular. It is intended to follow the occasion with other similar entertainments during the winter.

Married.

The Wheeling, (W. Va.) Intelligencer of Dec. 17th, publishes the following account of a ceremony recently performed in its city, that will be read with interest by the many friends the lady mentioned is possessed of, in Plainfield:

"A notable wedding was that which took place at half-past 8 o'clock yesterday morning at the Disciples' Church, and it passed off very pleasantly. As the talented young organist, Mr. James Rhoen, played the wedding march from Lohengrin, Miss Ella G. Atkinson and Mr. Brooke E. Adams walked up the aisle and in a few minutes were made man and wife, by Elder W. F. Thompson, the officiating minister. The bride was beautifully attired in a handsome walking suit of heliotrope surah satin combined with plush, with a plush hat to match. The groom looked manly well in his conventional suit of black. After the ceremony those present came up to offer their congratulations and the young couple started on their wedding journey, accompanied by the best wishes of hosts of friends for their future happiness. They return for the East after the holidays. They commence their married life under most propitious circumstances. Both Mr. and Mrs. Adams are favorites in Wheeling society, and the Intelligencer [illegible] their many friends in [illegible] congratulations."

WILLIAM SPENCE, the colored man who was arrested in Middlesex County for voting illegally at the last election, having voted in Bound Brook and afterward at New Market, put in a plea in the Middlesex county Courts last week of guilty and was sentenced by Judge Copeland to State Prison for one year. We understand that complaint will be made before the next Grand Jury against "Boot Black," a well known colored individual hereabouts for having voted illegally at the Fourth District polls in Somerville, not being of age at the time. This fellow offered his vote at the First District, but it was promptly refused by the Judge and Inspectors. He afterwards went to Somerset Hall and presented his ballot, and although he was challenged by the Democratic Inspector, he was overruled by his two Republican associates and the ballot was deposited.—Somerset Messenger.

Shot by a Hen.

At Rockcastle, Ky., a few days ago, a clergyman went to the house of one of his brethren to pass the night. He had just got seated when a hen flew into the house and attempted to alight on a rifle that hung on the wall. The weapon tipped over, falling on the lock, and was discharged, the ball taking effect in the thigh of the preacher, and causing finally lockjaw, from which he died.

An Elegant Holiday Gift.

There is now for sale at Magie's Jewelry Store, on Park Avenue, an elegant and appropriate Holiday Gift, in the shape of a ladies' watch, of the celebrated Auguste Saltzman manufacture, a large invoice of the kind having been just received by him from his factory in Switzerland. The watch is a 11 line Anchor movement, stem winder, nickel works, highly jewelled, smooth cases, mansard style, 18 karats fine, and is about the size of a twenty-five cent piece, in fact being the smallest stem winder ever put in the market, which is of durable build and correct in time keeping. There are several other styles of watches manufactured by Mr. Saltzman on sale at the above named store. Call and take a look at them, especially the "leetle one."

Personalia.

Mr. F. Willetts Runyon is home for the Holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. Stuart H. Whitney, nee Force, returned on Saturday last from a short wedding trip.

We received a call to-day from our weighty friend (340 lbs.) "Uncle Joe" Edwards, of Westfield.

Mr. C. E. Tyler and wife of this city, have been visiting recently at the residence of Senator Halbert in Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

Mr. Wm. P. Mulford, who recently died in Elizabeth at the age of 75 years, was a brother of B. T. Mulford, Esq. of this city. The deceased had been for many years a director in one of the principal banks of Elizabeth, and stood high among the prominent men of the place.

That always courteous and efficient baggage agent Mr. Jerry Garretson, being confined to his home by illness, his duties are being fulfilled by the genial Conway. Michael, however, hopes that in future Mr. Garretson will be on hand when it becomes necessary for traveling minstrels to ship twenty five trunks in a four-by-six baggage car.

Obituary—Mrs. John L. Everitt.

Again the stern and relentless grasp of death has fallen upon a household but lately bereaved, and the chilling shadow of its wing seemed to obstruct the warmth of God's mercy and goodness. But a few weeks since the spirit of a loved daughter and sister passed away, and now the soul of the wife and mother peacefully and silently departs to join it. On Sunday morning, from the pulpits of this city, the sad news was spread of the sudden demise of Mrs. John L. Everitt; and the sincere sympathy of those who held their breath in sorrow for an instant, went out to him who had thus lost an adored helpmate and beloved companion of declining years, and to those younger ones left without that guiding hand whose touch was revered and that cherished spirit whose watchful care was valued and appreciated. The deceased's loveliness of character and daily life of christian thoughtfulness for others, needs no recording here; her kindly disposition was recognized and felt by the many friends and acquaintances with whom she came in contact. Her faith in Christ and love for Him and His, had long ago prepared the place in his kingdom she has gone to occupy.

A Justice Court Case.

Uhrbahn vs Demena was tried before Justice Nodyne on Wednesday last. The facts proved by the plaintiff's witnesses are briefly these: Demena exchanged horses with Uhrbahn. At the time of the exchange there was a mortgage on Demena's horse, and in consequence of this encumbrance, Uhrbahn was subsequently put to about $150 expense in perfecting his title. The original mortgage was put in evidence, and as Mr. Jackson, one of defendant's counsel had drawn and witnessed it and taken the acknowledgment, defendant did not require formal proof. The instrument was endorsed in Mr. Jackson's handwriting as follows: "to be recorded in Somerset County," and also with a certificate of the County Clerk of his compliance with the order. Under these circumstances plaintiff's counsel stopped his examination and rested his case. Defendant's counsel demanded a nonsuit on the ground that the recording of the mortgage had not been proved by the production of the record itself, or a certified copy thereof under seal. Plaintiff's counsel replied that the admissions made by defendant's counsel in open Court constituted a waiver of the technical proceedings that might otherwise have been insisted upon. As the mortgage had been received in evidence and the technical formula dispensed with on the faith of these admissions, counsel maintained that defendant was estopped from denying the sufficiency of the proof and that the Court likewise was bound to presume that if these admissions had not been made, the record or a certified copy would have been forthcoming. Defendant's counsel claimed that their admissions did not go to the length insisted upon by plaintiff. The Court hesitated, but finally granted the motion. Craig A. Marsh, Esq., for the plaintiff. Suydam and Jackson, Esqs., for defendants.

Christmas in the Churches.

Christmas exercises will be held in the Crescent avenue church on the afternoon of next Sunday. In addition to Miss Newhall's solos, singing by a choir and the Sunday school scholars, accompanied by both organ and cornet music will be given, as well as an address by the Rev. A. H. Lewis and other appropriate ceremonies. In the chapel, on Tuesday evening following, at 7 o'clock, the little ones will be delighted with a Christmas tree and tempting edibles.

On to-morrow (Sabbath) after the going down of the sun, the Seventh Day Baptists will celebrate the day after their usual and thoroughly enjoyable custom in their own church building.

The Methodist Episcopal Sunday school, will on Saturday morning at 10 o'clock, show their recognition of Christ's birth by a pleasurable entertainment to consist of music, recitations and the like.

As we go to press (Thursday evening) the scholars, teachers and members of the Trinity Reformed church are holding their Christmas celebration. Consequently a most gratifying occasion is in progress.

The Congregationalist will hold their exercises at the Seventh Day church on Tuesday evening next. Many special features of interest will be introduced and a good time, generally, is sure to result.

Exercises, consisting of singing and speaking, will take place in the First Baptist Church on Sunday evening. It is hoped that efforts now being made to combine a double quartette of vocalists for the occasion will result successfully. On Thursday evening, of next week, the Christmas Festival will be held; and it is justly claimed that it will undoubtedly outshine previous ones.

The customary religious services of Christmas-time will be observed in the First Presbyterian church on Sunday. The joyous incidents that celebrate the occasion similarly, will be performed on Thursday evening next.

The Park avenue Baptist church have selected Wednesday evening of next week as the time when their young folks shall be made happy by the efforts of the elder ones; and Christmas shall be so pleasantly observed as to live long in the remembrance of all.

The Christmas festivities of the Sunday School connected with the Friends Society (Hicksite) in the Meeting House on Peace street, Christmas afternoon, will be an interesting occasion. There will be recitations, refreshments, awarding of presents, etc.

Services will be held in the Episcopal and Catholic churches on Sunday morning at 10:30 o'clock.

The Snover Fish Basket.

The long contested and hard fought Snover Fish Basket case, has been decided by the Supreme Court, in favor of the defendant, Weller.

In 1875, George F. Snover of Blairstown township Warren County, erected a small dam across Paulin's Kill, which caused the water to overflow its banks and run for a short distance over his (Snover's) land, and then returning into the main stream again. On this deverted stream he erected a fish basket. Lewis C. Weller the fish warden, for the county being notified, entered upon Snover's lands, tore out, broke and destroyed the basket, cutting up the materials of which it was composed. For this act Snover brought suit against Weller and his assistants.

In the Court for the trial of small causes, a judgment was given in favor of Snover and against Weller, for $25 damages and costs. On appeal to the Court of Common Pleas, this judgment was reversed and a judgment given in favor of the plaintiff and against the defendants for $10 damages, "for the destruction of the materials of which the basket was composed."

From this judgment, Messrs Shipman & Son, who represented the State Fish Commissioners took a certiorari to the Supreme Court. The case was argued at the February term, before Justices Depew and Scudder, by Mr. Shipman for the Fish Commissioners, and Henry S. Harris for Snover. The Court held that the only question was whether Weller was authorized to destroy the fish basket and cut up the material. The court held 1st.—That the State has the right by legislation, to protect fish in rivers and streams not navigable. 2d.—A Fish Warden has the right to enter on lands and destroy a fish basket, constructed in violation of the statute, and the materials of which it is composed, so that it may not again be used; and such materials are forfeited to the State.

That the basket in question was in the stream in clear violation of the law, and by Section 4, it was forfeited to the State. If forfeited to the State, it was lost to him when seized, and cannot be injured by its destruction. If the officer had no right to break it up he will be answerable to the State, and not the plaintiff. The judgment was reversed with costs.

MR. J. W. Morris, the well-known dealer in horses advertises that he has a large lot of horses and mules for sale at his stables in New Brunswick at low prices. Those who deal with Mr. Morris, are sure of squareness in every particular.

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS.

MRS. Austin's Craig Place school was closed last Friday for the Holidays; opening again on Monday, Jan. 3d, 1881.

The grist mill of Mr. M. H. French, at Washingtonville, is now run by steam power.

Codington Bros. are filling their large ice house with fine ice.

Mr. John W. Schenck, of North Plainfield, has received a contract to put in a thirty horse power sectional boiler, of his own make, in the sash and blind factory of Mr J. S. Irving, at Westfield.

The December term of the Somerset Circuit Court commenced on Tuesday, Judge Magie presiding, assisted by Judges Vosseller, Thompson and Garretson.

The Grand Jury came into Court about four o'clock p. m., Tuesday, and notified the Court they had finished all business brought to their notice, they were consequently discharged for the term by the Court with thanks for their attendance.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

THE GAME LAWS.

We are so often asked for information regarding the "close season" for killing game birds, animals and fishes, that we have taken pains to compile the following table relating thereto, from the Revised Statutes of the State up to 1880. The "close season," the reader should understand, means the months when it is unlawful to kill said game birds, animals or fish:

Birds	Close season.	Penalty.
Quail	Jan. 1st to Nov. 1st.	$25 00
Ruffed Grouse, (partridge)	Jan. 1st to Nov. 1st	25 00
Woodcock	Jan 1st to Sep. 1st	20 00
Rail and Reed	Dec. 1st to Sep. 1st	5 00
Upland Plover	Jan 1st to Aug. 1st	10 00
Summer Duck	Jan. 1st to Sep. 1st	5 00
Prairie Chicken	(no restriction since Jan. 1, 1880.)
Animals
Deer	Dec 1st to Oct. 15th	50 00
Grey Squirrel	Jan. 1st to Sep. 1st	5 00
Fox Squirrel	Jan 1st to Sep. 1st	5 00
Black Squirrel	Jan. 1st to Sep 1st	5 00
Rabbit	Jan. 1st to Nov. 1st	5 00
Fish
Salmon Trout	Oct. 1st to March 1st	10 00
Brook Trout	Oct. 1st to March 1st	10 00
Black Bass	April 1st to July 1st	5 00

The Woodcock and squirrel laws were amended as above during the session of 1880. The pickerel law was repealed in 1879. Penalties now apply only to certain lakes or ponds, which operate under special laws. There are also certain special laws operative in certain parts of the State. For instance, geese, brant and ducks may only be shot in Barnegat Bay between Oct. 15th and April 15th. In Brick Township, Ocean County wild fowl are only allowed killed between September 1st and April 1st.

The penalty for trapping or snaring any game bird, at any time or place, either on one's own land or on the property of another, is $15 for each and every offense.

It is unlawful also, for any person, at any time within this State, to trap or expose for sale, or have unlawfully in his possession after the same is killed, any night hawk, whippoorwill, sparrow, thrush' lark, finch, martin, barn swallow, woodpecker, flicker, robin, oriole, red or cardinal bird, cedar bird, tanager, cat-brid, blue bird, or any other insectiverous bird, under a penalty of five dollars for each bird. The penalty is also severe for robbing bird's nests of eggs.

It is unlawful to draw a net or seine in any stream stocked with game fish. In 1878 an act was passed (see public laws page [illegible], &c.) making it an offence with a penalty of $50, for any non-resident to shoot, kill, destroy, hunt or take any of the above-named game at any time in this State without complying with the by-laws of the Game protective Societies, organized under the laws of this State, and in 1879 (public laws, page [illegible], &c.) is a law authorizing the formation of Associations and Societies for the more effectual protection of game and game fish.

A few days ago, a society to be known as "The Hunterdon County Game and Fish Protective Society," was formed in Lambertville. The officers are: G. H. Gaddis, President; Daniel Larue, Treasurer; and Robert H. Smith Secretary. The society numbers about eighteen members. The object is to carry out the provisions of an act of the Legislature of this State, approved April 4th, 1878.

The New York World gives an account of the winnings of the several racing stables. George L. Lorillard heads the list, then follows Dwyer Brothers and third is that of Pierre Lorillard. The total amount won by him in America was $20,249, in England $22,654.35—total $42,-[illegible]. Of the American horses, Uncas won $6,970; Barrett, $5,525; Duke of Montrose, $2,250; Spark, $2,125; Parole, $1,675. Smaller sums were taken by Goody, Bliss, Diana and Geraldine, Olive, Faith, Merrimac, Spartan, Rocco, Pawnee and Ruskin started but won nothing. Of the English division, Iroquois won $15,556.20; Paw-Paw, $4,-[illegible]; Wallenstein, $2,738.45; Nereid, $1,251; Boreas, $434.70; Parole, $72.75. Mistake, Dakota, Passaic, Sly Dance, Seneca and Papoose also started but did not win any money.

Monmouth and Ocean Counties will join in an application to the Legislature for protection of quails and partridges during the ensuing two years.

A gray fox was shot on the mountain back of this city on Tuesday last.

PROPOSED NEW RAILROAD.

A despatch from Philadelphia announces that it is proposed to accomplish the distance between New York and that city in one hour on the alignment of a new route between the cities, which is only eighty miles in length to Jersey City. The proposed road will start at a point on Broad street, near Arch, Philadelphia, and by an underground road similar to the New York Central on Fourth avenue, New York city, will run out Broad street, beyond the Junction road, thence in an air line direct to Jersey City. This new road will cross the Bound Brook road and the Delaware River near Yardley, and the Pennsylvania road between Monmouth Junction and New-Brunswick; passing near Princeton, crossing the Raritan River about one mile west of Perth Amboy, and also the Long Branch line of the New Jersey Central; Staten Island Sound to Staten Island, at or near Union Landing; passing near Chelsea Landing, Graniteville, Mariners' Harbor at a point about eight miles southwest of New York City Hall; thence across the Kill Von Kull to Bergen Point, along the west side of the Central Railroad of New Jersey; through Centreville, Greenville, South Bergen and Communipaw to Jersey City. None of the crossings will be at grade, and there will be but two curves of 10,000 feet radius. This road is to be as nearly perfect as can be, being level, lighted by the electric light the same as our streets are now by gas, well drained and ballasted with broken stone. To accomplish this distance the engine must be capable at all times of developing sufficient horse power to perform ninety miles in one hour. On the trial trip of the Baldwin locomotive 5,000, it ran at the rate of eighty-one miles in one hour on an ascending grade, and no doubt on a level road it would have run ninety miles.

Glass treated in this way is said not to crack, even if exposed to very sudden changes of temperature. Chimneys are said to become very durable by this process, which may also be extended to crockery, stoneware, porcelain, etc.

MARRIED LIFE.

There are some mean men in this world—men who will, as Mrs. Raddle said, "tamper with a woman's feelings every hour of the day." Occasionally it is the lot of a woman of gentle and confiding nature to marry one of these creatures, and such was the fate of Mrs. Undershirt. The other evening her husband came home with a most mysterious and solemn look upon his countenance. So marked was this that his wife asked:

"My love! are you not feeling well?"

"Perfectly well, my dear!" he replied. Then he closed his mouth, and looked more mysterious than ever.

Women are not, as is well known, naturally of a curious disposition, but such conduct was enough to arouse anybody's interest. Mrs. Undershirt tried in every way she could think of to draw her husband out; but her efforts only resulted in getting herself into a high state of nervous anxiety.

Finally he yielded a little and said: "My dear! If I were to tell you something, could you keep it to yourself?"

Her cheeks glowed with excitement as she cried: "Oh, yes Harry!"

He continued, very solemnly: "If I told you about a scandal in this town, could you refrain from mentioning it?"

Her eyes shone like stars, and she fairly danced up and down with excitement as she replied: "Oh! indeed I could!"

"Even if it were a church scandal?"

"Yes! yes!" she exclaimed, breathing short and eagerly.

"How has the baby been to-day?" he mildly asked.

"Lovely! Well?"

"Did the man come with the coal?"

"Yes! Now, Harry!" and she was as fidgety as a monkey with suppressed curiosity.

"Is supper most ready?" he went on.

"Yes! Oh! for mercy's sake, tell me about the scandal!" she cried.

"Why. I don't know of any?" he replied.

"Don't know of any?"

"No!"

An awful look of disappointment came over her face. She asked: "Then why did you ask me if I could keep a secret?"

"To find out if you could!" he answered.

The look of anxiety turned to hate. "You are the meanest, horridest, most contemptible, mean, ugly, awful brute in this world!" she cried. And then she burst into tears.

But Mr. Undershirt got the worst of the joke; for the next day Mrs. U. invited her mother to come and stay with them for six weeks.

"THE RAILROADS AND THE PEOPLE."

Mr. F. B. Thurber, of New York, furnishes to the December SCRIBNER a paper which will be widely read, and which bids fair to create considerable excitement. It is entitled "The Railroads and the People," and it presents most forcibly the recent exposures of corruption in the great railroad monopolies of this country. The December number of SCRIBNER contains also many striking illustrative as well as literary features. The November issue was the largest ever printed; it contained one hundred and seventy pages, and was crowded with brilliant pictures and articles of more than usual interest.

Of the success of SCRIBNER's in England, Mr. Jennings writes as follows to the New York World:

"What I was going to tell you about was the wonderful way in which American magazines are getting on in London. SCRIBNER's has had a very large sale here for some few years past, and its circulation must now be, I think, fully as great as that of any English magazine, and it would not surprise me to hear that it is greater. Its illustrations have made its way easy for it. A very distinguished wood-engraver once told me that no work done in England in his line nowadays is worthy to be compared with what he saw every month in SCRIBNER. If I mentioned his name, there is no one on either side the Atlantic who would dispute his fitness to pronounce an opinion on such a subject. The rapid advance of SCRIBNER's is easily accounted for, and is thoroughly well deserved."

The price of SCRIBNER's MONTHLY is $4.00 a year, and new subscribers who begin with the November number may secure, by the payment of $1.00 additional, nine back numbers, containing all of Part I. of Schuyler's now famous serial history of Peter the Great, of which Rev. Edward Eggleston recently wrote: "It is indeed a wonderful story, needing no aid to the imagination to make it one of the most curious in human history."

For $2.50 extra, the two richly bound volumes of last year may be had in connection with a year's subscription. Book-sellers everywhere, or the publishers, Scribner & Co., 743 Broadway, New York, will supply the numbers and volumes.

The Legislature meets on the 11th of January. The Governor will be inaugurated on the 18th, and a U. S. Senator elected on the 25th.

Governor McClellan has been presented with an elegant silver mounted flintlock pistol of English make which was carried by Lieutenant General Winfield Scott during the Mexican war.

At the election, in Burlington to express the public sentiment in regard to the selection of postmaster, Mrs. M. J. Martin, the present incumbent, received a majority of 210 out of 376 votes cast.

Work on the Philadelphia and Long Branch Railroad will soon be begun. It will pass through Toms River, and cross Barnegat Bay. The route from Philadelphia to the ocean will place the latter in a quicker way of reaching than from Philadelphia to Atlantic City. In a few years the Jersey coast will be dotted with private residences and resorts for pleasure-seekers from Cape May to Sandy Hook, and the ocean which lashes our State boundaries will afford bathing facilities for the Nation.

The people of New York are discussing the question of an increased water supply for their city, and as usual when they want a good thing they look to little Jersey for it. The New York Herald says among the sources of supply mentioned are the Pequannock river, the stream which flows down the mountain alongside the Midland Railroad of New Jersey, and the Ringwood river near Pompton, which would furnish 15,000,000 gallons daily. The writer estimates that if the Ramapo river, the stream alongside of which the Erie runs, was added to the system the three would furnish an abundant supply. It is also suggested that Greenwood Lake, Lake Hopatcong and Green Pond might be combined in a system that would furnish an abundant supply of most excellent water. The other possible sources of supply named are the Passaic at Little Falls, before it is polluted by the drainage of cities, and the Rockaway river at Boonton, Morris county. It is thought that engineering skill can easily devise some means of laying the pipes under the Hudson River.

Long Suffering of One of the Best Men of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess Co., N. Y.—His Real and Complete Recovery from Gravel.

PLAIN WORDS ARE BEST.—Mr. Edward S. Hicks, of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county, N. Y., had suffered long from Stones in the Kidneys. He sought relief, of course. Who would not? What are time and money to health? Mr. Hicks consulted the best physicians of his village and also of Poughkeepsie—and none better can be found anywhere—but, unhappily, without a good result. A friend in Rondout advised Mr. Hicks to go to Rondout and see Dr. David Kennedy about his trouble. This Mr. Hicks finally did. Dr. Kennedy saw at once what the suffering man's difficulty was, and that Favorite Remedy was the medicine he needed. The Doctor prescribed it, and Mr. Hicks went home without much confidence in the power of "Favorite Remedy" to do him more good than other medicines had done before. But later [illegible] he thought there might be one chance out of many in his favor. He followed the directions and was both surprised and delighted to find himself presently improving. To-day Mr. Hicks is a well man.

While Dr. Kennedy is interested in introducing "Favorite Remedy," he continues to practice his profession and performs all the capital and minor operations in surgery. State your case. Letters promptly answered. Address Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y. dec10w4

THE SUN FOR 1881.

Everybody reads THE SUN. In the editions of this newspaper throughout the year to come everybody will find:

I. All the world's news, so presented that the reader will get the greatest amount of information with the least unprofitable expenditure of time and eyesight. THE SUN long ago discovered the golden mean between redundant fullness and unsatisfactory brevity.

II. Much of that sort of news which depends less upon its recognized importance than upon its interest to mankind. From morning to morning THE SUN prints a continued story of the lives of real men and women, and of their deeds, plans, loves, hates and troubles. This story is more varied and more interesting than any romance that was ever devised.

III. Good writing in every column, and freshness, originality, accuracy, and decorum in the treatment of every subject.

IV. Honest comment. THE SUN's habit is to speak out fearlessly about men and things.

V. Equal candor in dealing with each political party, and equal readiness to commend what is praiseworthy or to rebuke what is blamable in Democrat or Republican.

VI. Absolute independence of partisan organizations, but unwavering loyalty to true Democratic principles. THE SUN believes that the Government which the Constitution gives us is a good one to keep. [illegible]

[illegible]

Our terms are as follows:

For the DAILY SUN, a four-page sheet of twenty-eight columns, the price by mail, post paid, is 55 cents a month, or $6.50 a year; or, including the Sunday paper, an eight-page sheet of fifty-six columns, the price is 65 cents a month, or $7.70 a year, postage paid.

The Sunday edition of THE SUN is also furnished separately at $1.20 a year, postage paid.

The price of the WEEKLY SUN, eight pages, fifty-six columns, is $1 a year, postage paid. For clubs of ten sending $10 we will send an extra copy free.

How to Correct and Improve

YOUR SIGHT

IMPROVEMENTS OF THE DAY.

One of these is found in KING'S PATENT COMBINATION SPECTACLES.

As the name indicates, they consist of a combination of silver and steel frames, the silver bridge making a more elegant, durable and flexible frame and enabling any dealer to adjust it to any face, so that the centre of the lens is in the direct line of vision, thus giving the greatest benefit possible to be derived from the use of spectacles.

It also enables anyone to adjust it themselves to the position where it best corrects the sight.

All persons buying the COMBINATION SPECTACLES have their eyes fitted by KING'S NEW SYSTEM, the method used by Professional Oculists and the only true means of accurately testing the vision.

This SYSTEM IS COPYRIGHTED, and can only be used by Mr. King's Agents, all of whom are instructed in its use.

The KING SPECTACLES are the best in the world; over a million pair now being in daily use.

CURE

The leading Scientists of to-day agree that most diseases are caused by disordered Kidneys or Liver. If, therefore, the Kidneys and Liver are kept in perfect order, perfect health will be the result. This truth has only been known a short time and for years people suffered great agony without being able to find relief. The discovery of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure marks a new era in the treatment of these troubles. Made from a simple tropical leaf of rare value, it contains just the elements necessary to nourish and invigorate both of these great organs, and safely restore and keep them in order. It is a POSITIVE Remedy for all the diseases that cause pains in the lower part of the body—for Torpid Liver—Headaches—Jaundice—Dizziness—Gravel—Fever, Ague—Malarial Fever, and all difficulties of the Kidneys, Liver and Urinary Organs.

As a Blood Purifier it is unequaled, for it cures the organs that make the blood.

READ THE RECORD.

"It saved my life."—E. B. Lakely, Selma, Ala.

"It is the remedy that will cure the many diseases peculiar to women."—Mothers' Magazine.

"It has passed severe tests and won endorsements from some of the highest medical talent in the country."—New York World.

"No remedy heretofore discovered can be held for one moment in comparison with it."

—Rev. C. A. Harvey, D.D., Washington, D. C.

This Remedy, which has done such wonders, is put up in the LARGEST SIZED BOTTLE of any medicine upon the market, and is sold by Druggists and all dealers at $1.25 per bottle. For Diabetes, enquire for WARNER'S SAFE DIABETES CURE. It is a POSITIVE Remedy.

POETRY.

LOVE'S REPENTANCE.

Love came knocking, gently knocking
At the portals of my heart,
And besought me their unlocking,
For a season he'd impart;
But I laughed to his greeting—
And regretted not the fleeting
Of his baffled steps retreating
On their way.

Then again a message brought he,
Knocking gently as before,
And with courtly tones besought me,
Yet I opened not the door,
Madly chafing my denying.
He, with a low and [illegible] sighing,
Turned away.

Soon the little tyrant slyly—
Without warning as before—
Pulled the latch-string, and then slyly
Peeked aside the loosened door.
Though my heart was near relenting,
And I felt 'twould bring repenting,
Yet I would not, by consenting;
Love to-day.

Could I catch him and securely
Tie his little wings,
I would [illegible] to him decidedly,
Tho' I know they may be stings—
That is he, I know his knocking,
I will hasten the unlocking.
Ah, the little traitor, mocking
Flees away!

THE DRUG CLERK.

"Tastes good, doesn't it?" asked the drug clerk, as the reporter drank the soda water flavored with pine-apple syrup.

"Yes, very good."

The drug clerk laughed sardonically and said:

"Of course. But then you don't know what it is made of."

"What do you mean?"

"The old man's out," he said looking cautiously around the store, "and I'll let you into some of the secrets of the business, if you won't give me away."

Strict secrecy being promised, he continued:

"The old man made the pine-apple syrup, but he didn't make it right from the fruit. He made it out of old cheese that you could smell through a fire-proof safe. Full of skippers, too! I'll tell you a curious thing about that cheese. The old man cut off a slice and brought it up stairs here with him one night. He laid it on the counter; next morning it was gone. Come to look, the little animals had shoved it on the floor, wriggled it down the stairs, and put it back exactly in the old place in the cheese. The old man said that was an extraordinary illustration of the strength of the home instinct in the brute creation.

"Yes, and our sarsaparilla syrup he doctors up by extracting juices from bootlegs and old trunks. He distils all our lemon syrup from roofing shingles and from chips that we get over here from the cooper's shop; and when we run out of raspberry, all he wants is a handful of red bugs, a gallon of coal oil and half an hour by himself. And as for the soda water itself—well, if people only knew how we used up seidlitz powders when the soda—in short, the store would be gutted by a howling mob in half an hour."

"Do you do that kind often?"

"Often is not the name for it. The drug business is terrific. These porous plasters. The old man has a national reputation for them. He makes 'em out of old sun-bonnets and glue—cuts up the sun-bonnets and smears on the glue; and when you get one of his plasters on your back it is there for life. There's a man comes in here most every day to swear at the old man because he put one of our plasters for a lame back in 1848, time of the Mexican war, and as he couldn't get it off, the skin grew over it like the bark of a tree, you know. That plaster has worked further and further in until now it's gone to his lungs, and it pulls at his left lung in a way to set him crazy. He's a very remarkable chemist—the old man. I do believe he could make paregoric out of old umbrellas, and boil down an illustrated weekly paper into attar of roses. He has the blandest ingenuity. You wouldn't believe."

"But your customers are generally satisfied?"

"Oh! yes. You see, they don't know. A doctor sends a prescription here, written in a dead language. We don't bother ourselves to try to read it. I asked the boy what's the matter with the patient. Then I put a little cayenne pepper in some molasses, and touch her up with assafetida to give her a good strong smell, and drop in some squills and ipecac to make a kind of goneness in the stomach, and stir in some wormwood to make her take hold of the interior department, and then let her go. Patient thinks it's splendid, because it tastes nasty; and the old man gets the money, and so everybody's happy. There is a woman around in Jones street with lumbago who deals with us, and one day when I forgot to put the assafetida in the lotion she kept around and threatened to prosecute us for malpractice. The old man fixed up the next bottle so that you could have smelt it in Asiatic Turkey when the cork was out. That seemed to calm her."

"Do the physicians approve of that kind of thing?"

"Oh, you know the doctors all work share and share with the old man. If a doctor sees a woman going to die anyhow, he loads her up with drugs, and then collects twenty-five per cent. commission from us. And so when we accidentally put in arsenic instead of glauber salts, and a convalescent patient climbs the golden stairs, the doctor knows better than to make a fuss about the mistake. He wipes his eyes and tells the family he saw the disease would be fatal from the first. We have a new boy here who makes about four fatal blunders a week. Never gets hold of any harmless drug when there is a deadly poison within reach. The old man hires him for economy. Only last week he sent a quart of laudanum to a young clergyman who sent for port wine, and one of our best customers was an angel in less than an hour. If that boy was left go, perfectly loose, to do just as he pleased, he'd fill all the cemeteries in town before the month was out. Yellow fever and cholera combined are not half so dangerous as that boy."

"Where is he?"

"Why, he is out now. He took to Mrs. Jones, who has cerebro-spinal meningitis, the medicine that was intended for Mrs. Smith's baby; and the baby got Mrs. Jones' prescription. He has gone back to rectify the mistake. Don't just notice when you go by Smith's if there isn't crape on the door. I bet you a pound of cough lozenges that baby was wafted into the mysterious realms of the hereafter three quarters of an hour ago. That boy never knows where anything is but the gum drops and licorice. He can go straight to them every time. Here he comes now. Say, Johnny, did you fix it all right?"

"No," said a small boy who entered at the moment, "Smith's baby got a dose before I reached the house, and it was gone up."

"I told you so," said the clerk. And then turning to Johnnie, he said: "You look sharp, now. Go into the cellar and mix the red paint for the old man's patent liver pads, and see if we ain't nearly out of the lard and soft soap for his Balm of Peru for removing freckles and purifying the complexion."

"Why, said the boy, drawing his head out of the gum drop drawer, "the old man told me he wanted the lard put up in boxes for tetter ointment, and that when I have done I should melt up the glue for the jujube paste."

Then the reporter paid for his soda water and went thoughtfully away.

CURIOUS STORY OF A DOVE.

A lady contributor to Chamber's Journal writes the following pleasing narrative:

My attention having been drawn to the incident related in your journal, Nov. 15, 1879, under the heading of "A Welcome Guest," I thought it might interest those to whose recollections it was specially addressed, and any other of your readers who may have been struck by it, to hear of a somewhat similar visitation which, under very sad circumstances, happened to a relative of my own. The lady in question had just sustained the greatest loss that can befall a woman, in the death of her husband under circumstances that rendered the blow a more than ordinarily crushing one. So sudden had it been, that no time for preparation or farewell had been vouchsafed; and the sudden rending of such a tie, after over thirty years of ever-increasing affection, left her singularly desolate, as she was childless and without any very near relations. The house in which she lived was completely detached, standing in a large old-fashioned garden, with an extensive lawn, planted with shrubs and large fruit-trees, some of which came close to the windows. A veranda ran round the back of the house, its sloping roof being just under the windows of the sleeping-rooms.

One night, while in the first freshness of her sorrow, she went to her bedroom at the back of the house at her usual hour, ten o'clock. It was in the month of December, and curtains were drawn and a fire burning in the grate. Half mechanically she walked to the dressing-table, which stood before the window, and was in the act of laying her watch upon it, when she heard a low sound, that seemed to her half a moan of pain, half a plaintive appeal, and altogether such as she had never heard before. With suspended breath and greatly startled, she listened. It came again, louder and more prolonged. With nerves so shaken as hers were by her recent sorrow, she found it impossible to remain in the room with the noise unaccounted for, and with a feeling of something like terror hastened to an adjoining apartment, summoned a friend who was staying with her, and brought her back to the room. The sound continued; and her friend being unable to account for it, the servants were rung up. The room was carefully searched; drawers were opened; every article of furniture that could contain any living creature or give any clue to the origin of the sound, was examined. The noise all the time continued, sometimes louder, sometimes softer, but never quite ceasing; and all that could be decided was that it was most distinct in the neighborhood of the window where the lady had first heard it.

The servants, seeing how much affected by it their mistress was, and unable to find any cause for it, had tried to persuade her it must be the wind in the chimney or the trees outside; but the night was calm; and the sound was altogether so strange, and it seemed to all so unlike anything they had every heard before; the most ingenious theory failed to account for it. More and more the belief that it must be something supernatural impressed the lady's mind; and though eventually it ceased, and silence succeeded, even the presence of her friend who remained with her at night did not reassure her sufficiently to induce sleep.

In the morning the mystery was explained, so far as so strange an incident was capable of explanation. The gardener had observed the day before a white pigeon in a large pear-tree that grew close to the window of the room the lady was occupying. He was much surprised, for there was no pigeon-cot near, and he had never seen the bird before in the garden. As the day wore on, finding it still remained in the tree, he made several attempts to catch it; but it always eluded him, pertinaciously returning to the tree.

When he told his story, no doubt could be felt that breaking the silence of the night in that retired spot, it was the voice of the pigeon that had sounded so strange and unaccountable; but the lateness of the hour, when birds of its kind have as a rule long gone to roost, and the possibility of a dove being there at all never having occurred to any one, none had recognized it at the moment. From the distinctness of the noise—for all present had fancied the noise might be in the room—it was evident the bird must have been on the roof of the veranda, immediately under the window. In the morning it had vanished, and was never seen again; although the lady, desirous of ascertaining if it were really a pigeon, and with some idea, if it could be found, of keeping it, gave orders that it should be traced and, if possible, secured. Dismissing from our minds, as untenable, anything that here savors of what is termed the supernatural, one is bound to admit that it was a strange and touching coincidence that brought a bird so familiar to all minds as an emblem of wedded love, in apparent loneliness and distress, to utter its plaintive lament at so unusual an hour under the window of one grieving under such a bereavement as hers.

A NEW CODE OF RULES FOR RAILROADS.

A newspaper published down in the coal regions of Pennsylvania suggests a new code of railway rules, from which we make some extracts:

There shall be three classes of trains—first, second, and third—and they shall have right of way in the order named.

The first class shall consist of coal trains only. They shall have the protection over everything else.

The second class consists of passenger trains—way, accommodation, and express.

No passenger train shall leave a station until at least five coal trains have passed it.

Trains must run on time when an excursion or the president's special car is on the road. On such occasions all regular lines will be delayed one hour.

No female will be allowed in the mail car.

No smoking-cars or water-tanks will be allowed on trains which have a parlor car attached. For any of these luxuries the passengers must pay fifty cents.

A lamp upside down on an engine signifies that the fireman is drunk—the [illegible] stack upside down, that the engineer is drunk—and an engine upside down denotes that a rail was up.

Some toots of the whistle denotes that there is a calf on the track. The fireman will go out on the pilot and attach two green flags to its tail. The calf will then run as an extra. If he don't make schedule time call the coroner.

When a baggage-master acts as a conductor he must put on airs—two airs if on a regular train and three airs if on an extra.

Before leaving the station the conductor must call out the last station passed, and each passenger must name the place he came from.

On arriving at a station the conductor and engineer will go into the telegraph office and write home to their families. They will stay there until they know their train is behind time. They will then run back to the next station.

Each passenger may ask seven questions of the conductor between each two stations. The conductor must answer these questions civilly, without swearing or looking mad.

The uniform of conductors shall hereafter consist of a seamless sack, the mouth to be strapped around the neck like a mail bag. The conductor shall have his hands tied behind him and wear a gag in his mouth. He shall carry an iron safe on his back, the key of which shall be kept at headquarters. When ten-cent fares are paid on the train the passenger shall be charged one dollar. The ten cents may be recovered, but the dollar goes to the conductor or the company, whichever is the smartest.

The passenger must punch his own ticket, and put it in the safe. He shall then tell the conductor where he was born, and where he expects to die, when he goes to. If the conductor is sassy he must also be punished.

At the end of every trip the conductor must make a written report of the number of cars, number, color, and age of passengers, together with any accidents, deaths, or births which may have occurred.

On arriving at the end of his route the conductor shall be stripped and searched with a toothpick, nail-brush, and fine-comb, to see that he has no tickets concealed about him.

A FINANCIER.

An English man, who was on his way West, took a lunch at the eating stand in the Detroit, Grand Haven and Milwaukee Depot yesterday, and in payment tendered a $20 confederate note.

"We don't take this sort of money here," said the attendant as he scanned the bill.

"Don't, eh? Very well. Customs differ in localities. They take it in some places and refuse it in others. No particular harm done to offer it. How's this bill?"

It was an old wildcat bill of 1840, and it was handed back with the remark that it wouldn't pass.

"Won't eh? Well, no great harm to offer it. Are you willing to take my note of hand for sixty days for this sum?"

"No, sir."

"Won't eh? There are places where they will and places where they won't. This seems to be a place where they won't. No crime, though, to propose it. Does it appear to you as if I would have to pay this bill in cash?"

"It does."

"Strikes me the same way too. There are times when it seems impossible to wriggle out of cash payments. I have a proposition which I have saved as a last resort. Are you willing to look upon me as an object of charity and donate me this 30 cents' worth of luncheon?"

"No, sir, I am not."

"That is just what I expected, but I thought it no harm to make it. I see no other way except to pay cash. Please take the change out of this fifty cents."

"BREVITY IS THE SOUL OF WIT."

The following amusing story, which was told by Franklin, ought to be read and acted upon by all correspondents communicating their thoughts to the newspaper press. A young man, on commencing business, proposed to paint over his shop window, "John Thompson, hatter, makes and sells hats for ready money," to which was added the sign of a hat. One friend suggested that, as he made and sold hats, the word "hatter" was unnecessary. It was therefore struck out, and the sign remained, "John Thompson makes and sells hats for ready money." Another friend advised him to omit the phrase, "for ready money," as there would occur occasions for selling on credit; and so the sign read: "John Thompson makes and sells hats." It was then hinted the buyer of the hat did not care who made it and that the sign would be better if it read: "John Thompson sells hats." But another amputation was in store still, for a critic pointed out the uselessness of the phrase "sells hats," for, said he, "no one would ever suppose that the hats were to be given away for nothing." Thus at last this aspiring tradesman commenced business, like many worthy successors, under the modest sign of "John Thompson."

"I FEEL BADLY."

A little boy who had seen but four summers, ran to his father a few Sabbaths since, and overcome with grief, and his eyes full of tears, said to him, "Papa, I feel bad."

"And what is the matter, Frankie?" said the father.

"I have been a naughty boy. My mamma told me not to play on the holy Sabbath day, for it was displeasing to God. I did play and I feel bad because I hurt God's feelings."

"But how do you know you have hurt God's feelings?" said the father.

"Because," said the little boy, "my conscience beats my little heart."

Time—Every evening during the holidays. Scene—The domestic hearth. "And oh! Charles, I've seen such lovely things!" "Huh!" "And they are so cheap!" "Huh!" "And I want to buy a —, and a —, and a —, and a —, for dear mother and the girls." "Huh!" "And some things for the children." "Huh!" "And there are some bargains in housekeeping things." "Huh!" "And I want to buy a little gift for you, Charles." "Well, how much money do you want?"

About twenty-five years ago the British government sent a circular to the different boroughs in England asking for information upon a number of statistical questions. Among these was the following: "Is there any unusual custom prevalent in your borough?" To this a borough in the south-eastern part of England replied: "Yes, the authorities get together twice a year and pay for it themselves."

"A man breaks his heart!" sneered the Widow Pilkins, "Perhaps he does, as a lobster breaks his claw, and another always grows right away."

THE OLD AND NEW.

The year 1880 is nearly gone. A few hours more and it will be with the irrevocable past. As we utter the word farewell, memory unrolls her indelible chart and bids us reflect.

The history of the departing year is the same old story of human mutability, of joy and sorrow, hope and fear, success and disappointment in the affairs of life. Such has been the record of the rolling years and such will it continue to be. All earthly things are changing and passing away—

"Passing away! so whispers the wind,
As it treads its trackless course;
And passing away doth the bright rill say,
As it leaps from its crystal source—
All passing away on the stream of time,
To oblivion's vale in a far off clime;
Matter and man we make no delay,
To eternity's gulf we are passing away."

"Passing away! even Time himself
Bends under his load of years;
His limbs are frail, and his cheek grows pale,
With the furrows of sorrowing tears;
With his broken scythe, with a silent tread,
He is passing on to the home of the dead;
With a bending form, and with locks grown gray,
Old Time himself is passing away."
Adieu! Old Year! Adieu!

Another dawns, 1881 will soon be here. Let us greet with gladness its advent, hoping thereby to enjoy the blessings of peace and wide-spread prosperity.

To all our patrons we sincerely tender the salutation of a HAPPY NEW YEAR!

MEXICO.

On the first of December General Gonzalez was duly inaugurated President of the Mexican Republic. The event is hailed as an omen of good for our Southern neighbor, because it was peacefully accomplished, there being no show of military opposition to the transfer of supreme authority, which, heretofore, has convulsed that country upon almost every Presidential change.

Mexico is a realm of magnificent natural beauty and exceedingly rich in undeveloped resources. Whatever promises to there make permanent the blessings of free representative government, and to render available for the markets of the world the boundless wealth of soil, mine and forest, should be greeted with sincere satisfaction and encouragement. It speaks well for the future prosperity of Mexico that the spirit of right progress appears to be awakened among her own citizens.

The railway system of the United States is fast approaching the boundary line between the two Republics, and will doubtless there be met by similar improvements leading direct to the National Capitol of Mexico. Such connection will not only open new avenues of trade, but cement the bonds of amity. The day is not far distant when a trip by rail to the Halls of Montezuma will be an ordinary affair, and the flower decked lands of the Aztecs become a favorite resort for American tourists.

THE FARMER.

The farmers of the United States have, during the present year, furnished for export to foreign countries several hundred million dollars worth of products.

That settled the balance of trade in our favor.

That brought gold from abroad, made specie payments possible, and kept in operation the wheels of manufacturing industry.

Our whole commercial fabric rests mainly upon the achieved results of the agricultural classes.

And yet, no one pays heavier taxes to benefit specially and exorbitantly protected interests than the farmer.

He is the artificer of national wealth. Why should he be forced to lay tariff tribute at the feet of the favored few?

SOUTHERN DEMOCRACY.

The improved condition of the South under Democratic State rule cannot be better shown than by the condition of the public schools in South Carolina.

For the past three years the average attendance of scholars has been—52,977 white.

60,722 colored.

And during the preceding eight years, when Carpet Baggers bore ruinous sway, the average was—33,782 whites.

41,691 colored.

Being an increase of about fifty per cent. in favor of Democracy.

That tells the story.

THE PROPOSED AMENDMENTS TO OUR STATE CONSTITUTION.

The Legislature that meets in January will be called to take action in relation to the proposed amendments to the Constitution.

The amendments proposed amount to this: The Legislature to be composed as it now is, but the Assemblymen to hold office for two years and the Senators for four years.

The Legislature will meet once in two years and not oftener unless called by the Governor in extra session.

THE LEGISLATIVE COMMISSION.

The Legislative Commission on municipal and tax laws met at the Park House, Newark, Monday last, with Senator Deacon, of Burlington, as Chairman, and considered the laws affecting municipalities. They have about completed their work on the township, county and tax laws.

Ever since Cadet Whitaker slit his ears and accused his white fellow cadets of the crime, at West Point, some of his color have attempted to emulate his example. Here is the latest clipped from an exchange:

"A colored girl in the Vineland High School caused some excitement because of the receipt of certain letters the contents of which were not nice. An innocent white girl was accused. The class was one day asked to copy a paragraph, when the authorship of the letters was traced to the colored girl herself, [illegible]."

CLOSE OF VOLUME THIRTEEN.

With this issue ends Volume Thirteen of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST, and we desire to express thanks to our patrons and the public generally for the liberal patronage bestowed upon us during the past year. We are vain enough to believe that we have earned the patronage thus bestowed, and that THE CONSTITUTIONALIST daily becomes more popular, both as a live newspaper and as an advertising medium. True, the sentiments uttered in its columns during the late exciting political contest, has not pleased or accorded entirely with the views of some of its readers; that was to be expected, although what we wrote and said were in strict accordance with our own political views.

The circulation of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST has steadily increased year by year since its initial number, until to-day it can justly and truthfully claim to have the largest circulation of any paper issued weekly in Union County.

Within the past few months many decided and necessary improvements have been made in our establishment. Our business and editorial rooms are located on the first, or ground floor, while the composing room and Jobbing department is on the third floor. Our press room is in the basement and the presses are run by steam power. The entire large building in which we are located, "The Chautauqua Building," is heated by steam throughout from the boiler in our press room.

Our Jobbing department is complete in all its appointments, and is stocked with latest designs and styles of type, border, paper, cards, etc., with competent employees in charge of same. Our prices and work will compare favorably with any other office of the kind in the State.

Again we return thanks to our patrons, one and all, and invite a call and inspection of our establishment. Volume Fourteen shall not be behind its predecessors in point of excellence.

AN ELECTRIC LIGHT FOR THE HIGHLANDS.

The coming annual report of the Lighthouse Board will recommend, it is said, an appropriation of $50,000, in order to give the electric light a test, with a view, if the experiment is successful, of substituting it for many of the oil burners along the coast. The experiment is to be made in one of the towers of the Navesink twin lights. The light in the other tower being what is called a first-class light—that is to say, one of the most powerful on the coast—will afford a convenient means of comparing the efficacy of oil with that of electricity to pierce darkness and fog. A light placed there will come under the scrutiny of a large number of practical navigators in a very short time of trial.

The State of Illinois cancelled the last of her State bonds on the 21st inst., and is now an exception to her sister States in being out of debt.

R. W. Thompson, Secretary of the Navy, has resigned his position to accept the position of President of the American branch of the Panama Canal scheme.

Texas retains the banner among the Democratic States. Hancock's majority over Garfield, a few of the counties being estimated, is 93,170, and over all 66,926.

The National Greenback-Labor vote for 1880 is, according to information obtained by the Irish World, only 400,000—a falling off of about 600,000 since 1878.

Rev. Dr. E. H. Chapin, of New York, died last Sunday night, the 26th. He was a brilliant preacher and greatly beloved by his people. Dr. Chapin was in his 66th year.

New Jersey will, after January, be the only Northern State having a Democratic Governor. The tax-payers of our sister States look with envious eyes upon the economic administration of this so-called foreign State and doubtless wish that they enjoyed the blessings of a government conducted on the same basis.

A curious thesis was promulgated from the Bench of a Philadelphia Court the other day. The learned Judge said that "an assertion of sobriety is one of the delusions of intoxication, and, reasoning the thing logically, when a man insists that he is sober it is pretty good evidence that he is drunk." Does the converse hold good, that when a man insists that he is drunk, it is pretty good evidence that he is sober? It's a poor rule that don't work both ways.

Joseph Snyder, of Bethlehem, Pa., was lynched last Monday for the murder of a man and his wife by the name of Gogel in whose house he lived. Snyder was in love with a daughter of the Gogel's, sixteen years old, and he thought by killing her parents he could remove all opposition to the marriage. He first attempted to outrage her. The mob put a rope around Snyder's neck and hung him under a chestnut tree. That this swift and desperate story comes from Pennsylvania, instead of the lawless mining regions of California, will strike every one with amazement and horror.

A strange story of negro insurrection in Cuba and of the government's method of dealing with it comes from Havana. The insurrection plot is said to have been discovered near Santiago de Cuba, in the southern part of the island, and to have contemplated a wholesale poisoning of the whites. Two hundred and fifty negroes, charged with being implicated, were immediately arrested and placed on board the Spanish iron-clad Alamanza, and they were to be transported to the penal settlement of Fernando Po. It does not appear upon what evidence the government acted or whether any of the men condemned to transportation had anything like a trial.

Union County's Population.

According to the schedules returned to the Census Office by the enumerators of the several districts concerned, the following is the population of Union County:

Clark	[illegible]	Rahway	[illegible]
Cranford	[illegible]	Springfield	[illegible]
Elizabeth	[illegible]	Summit	[illegible]
Linden	[illegible]	Fanwood	[illegible]
New Providence	[illegible]	Union	[illegible]
Plainfield	[illegible]	Westfield	[illegible]
Total	[illegible]

Of which 26,477 are males; 29,082 are females; 43,146 are Native; 12,435 are Foreign; 53,634 are white and 1,347 are colored, the latter including 3 Indians.

Somerset's Population.

The population of Somerset, according to latest Census returns is as follows:

Bedminster	[illegible]	Hillsborough	[illegible]
Bernards	[illegible]	Montgomery	[illegible]
Branchburg	[illegible]	North Plainfield	[illegible]
Bridgewater	[illegible]	Warren	[illegible]
Franklin	[illegible]	Total	[illegible]

Which is composed of 12,436 males; 11,722 females; [illegible] Natives; [illegible] Foreigners; [illegible] whites; [illegible] colored, including in the latter 2 Indians.

The Twenty-fifth Annual Meeting of the New Jersey Editorial Association will be held at the American Hotel, Trenton, on Monday, January 10th, 1881, at eleven o'clock a. m. A full attendance of the members is requested.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

The head-light of the engine on a train on the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad struck a horned owl a few nights ago with sufficient force to break the glass, put out the light, and kill the bird. The owl has been stuffed, and will be mounted on the top of the cab of the engine that killed it.

A fish-preserving company has been organized in Philadelphia, with a capital of $200,000, whose object is to freeze and keep in a state of preservation shad and other salt-water fish in the United States and market them at times when such fish are not in season. The company expects to procure enough shad during the season from the Delaware and Potomac Rivers to enable it to carry on the business successfully.

There seems to be a growing feeling in certain parts of the State to pass a law the coming winter, prohibiting the shooting or killing of game in this State for two years. We think this is unwise. If the Game Protective Societies will but enforce the stringent laws enacted for their benefit, and prosecute all persons found violating the game laws, there would be no need of making a prohibitory law to prevent extermination of game birds. Enforce the law.

Every farmer and member of Game Protective Societies should be on the alert for violators of the game laws. Remember the law is up for shooting quail, grouse, rabbit, etc., January 1st, 1881. Prosecute every violator of the law. The poor birds will suffer enough in consequence of the deep snow now on the ground, without having a pot hunter after them.

THE storm on Tuesday of last week did considerable damage to the great pier at Long Branch, a number of the iron piles being broken and the deck torn up. The sea end was badly racked, so that it will cost $10,000 to repair it.

"Old Grimes is dead—that good old man,
We ne'er shall see him more;
He used to wear a long-tailed coat,

Why mourn for Grimes?—his daughters live;
On Fashion's street we find 'em,
And still they wear "Old Grimes' coat"
All buttoned down behind 'em.

TESTIMONIALS:

* * * * * "You ask me to favor you with my experiences and impressions of Miss NELLA F. BROWN. I seldom if ever yield to requests of this nature. I feel less hesitation in this instance because of Miss Brown's exceeding modesty and unpretentiousness, which are characteristics of genius.

I am informed that she never received instruction in the conventional school of elocution, which fact is greatly in her favor. In this she may be compared with Fanny Kemble and the late Charlotte Cushman, who were illustrious examples of what genius may attain without elocutionary training.

Miss Brown has appeared twice upon the "Star" Course in one season to the eminent satisfaction of vast audiences, and will appear again this coming season. This, I take it, is a sufficient endorsement. Yours very truly,
T. B. PUGH,
Manager of "Star" Course, Phila.

From Dr. Vincent.

MRS. MARY A. LIVERMORE is a woman of superior intellectual power. She is wise, womanly and eloquent, and in my opinion the most able, natural and effective of all the women speakers now on the American lecture platform.

LOCAL DEPARTMENT.

Largest Circulation of any Weekly Paper in Union County.

A HAPPY New Year to all.

How did you enjoy Christmas?

HAVE your horses rough-shod.

THE girls want to go a-sleighing.

THE snow has spoiled the skating.

PLAINFIELD needs an opera house.

Now prepare to find fault with the new Council.

OUR ice merchants are harvesting a fine crop of ice.

SPRINKLE the unreliable ice with the useless coal-ashes.

CENTRAL N. J. Railroad stock went up to 64 on Tuesday.

Now write it 1881 when you send us a check for any arrearages.

IT is rumored that the firemen neglected to hang up their hose on Friday night.

THE sensation market is remarkably dull and the item harvest exceedingly light.

THE Mayor and Common Council of the city of Plainfield are strictly Republican.

THE unpleasantness of last Friday's weather served to retain some of the retail custom in this city.

AND now our exchanges are teeming with the "news" that Plainfield city is to be lighted by electricity.

RAFFLES for horses, cows and other personal property are unusually prolific during the present season.

THOSE who were called out by demands of various sorts on Sunday night knew that the snow snew and the blow blew.

THE old Council will go out with to-night's meeting, and the new one come in with a meeting on Monday evening next.

LET us hope that the absence of a "green Christmas" will induce a dullness in the undertakers' business during 1881.

A BENEFACTOR in disguise—the person who sprinkles ashes over the slippery sidewalk. There are a few of them in Plainfield.

OUR cotemporary, the Times, pays a just and deserved compliment to the outgoing Mayor—Nathan Harper, Esq., in its last issue.

AN opportunity (always welcome) to hear the Rev. J. H. Vincent, will be given on Sunday morning next at the First Presbyterian church.

SEE that the fire-well covers in the vicinity of your residence are cleared from snow, and easily "get-at-able" by the protectors of your property.

THERE are no complaints of dull Holiday trade from those who advertised their business and their stock in the columns of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

THE always popular Dupres & Benedict's Minstrels are announced, by a handsome show of bills, to appear in VanDeventer Hall on Saturday evening, Jan. 8th.

GET your shot gun out. Chicken thieves are again about. "Col." Cadwalader Jones lost seven, and another 6th street resident four, inside of forty-eight hours last week.

AT the residence of Dr. Horace Kimball on East Second street, may be seen a pair of snow-lions which some embryo sculptor has carved out of the frozen element with wonderful skill and genius.

THE Rahway Democrat says that crockery boiled in a solution of water and cooking salt will achieve increased durability. Will a Celestial who drinks it be cured of talking "broken china?"

THE Plainfield Saengerbund will see the old year out and the new year in, while enjoying one of their pleasant hops at their rooms, to-night. A concert and Christmas (?) tree will precede it.

THE programme selected for the Second Vocal Recital of Mr. Georg Henschel at Steinway Hall on Tuesday evening next, is a most attractive one. Mr. Wm. H. Sherwood, pianist, assists in the entertainment.

NEXT Sunday a collection will be taken up in Rev. Dr. Bliss' Church (Crescent Ave. Pres.) for the benefit of the "Muhlenberg Hospital Fund." Give your mite freely; the object is indeed, a charitable one.

THE new pastor of the Trinity Reformed church will commence his labors on Sunday morning next. The natural desire of the public to judge of his abilities, will doubtless bring together a large congregation.

FIFTY choice horses and thirty selected mules are being offered by Mr. John W. Morris, at his New Brunswick stables, for sale or exchange. One hundred second-hand mules are wanted at the same place, for shipment.

THE agency for that great cold antidote, "Tolu, Rock and Rye," has been secured by Mr. E. P. Thorn of this city. Consumers who are wise enough to desire a trial of its merits, may procure it by the bottle at the Mansion House.

WE are told that Old Improbabilities, Vennor, was formerly employed in an axe factory at Ballston, N. Y. His absence from such labors at present, is no doubt caused by the fact that his axes were as unreliable as are his prognostications.

THE "C. Y. M. U." will hold their First Annual Reception in St. Mary's Hall, on Fourth street, the evening of Wednesday, Jan. 5th, and the occasion promises to be an enjoyable one. The affair is in the hands of a competent and efficient committee. Tickets only 50 cts.

THERE is great cause for rejoicing and thankfulness in the fact that we have had no damaging fires in this city for many months. We don't want any either! But nevertheless it is to be regretted that a larger quantity of available hose is not among the assets of the Plainfield Department.

THE scholars of the public schools will be glad to learn that there are fifty-three Saturdays in the year 1881. The "merry, merry maiden" and her "steady company" will, however, regret to hear that it will be a long while before two new moons will occur in the same month, as happens December, 1880.

THE freedom of the city of Elizabeth has been extended to Gen. Grant on the occasion of his visit to that city on Jan. 11th, 1881. In consideration of the city's bankruptcy, and in view of the mosquitoes and greater evils which appear with a warmer season, we wouldn't accept the whole municipality as a gift.

THE first of the three lectures on "The American Political Idea," advertised to be given by Dr. John Fiske at Seminary Hall, will occur on Tuesday evening Jan. 4th at 8 o'clock. Aside from the interest of the lectures as enjoyable discourses, they are brim full of instruction relative to the political principles on which our system of government in the United States is founded.

THERE is much speculation as to who will be Mayor Randolph's nominees for the offices in his gift, and many wagers have been laid that no change will be made as to Corporation Counsel or Chief of Police. The many rumors afloat have no foundation, and merely result from the vivid imagination of gossipers who (in their own minds) and knowing (to their own opinions). In our next issue we expect to be able to state the ultimate and final distribution that will be, or has been, agreed upon.

WE meant to write "North Avenue" instead of "Park Avenue" in our article last week regarding that beautiful little stem-winding gold watch, (Auguste Saltzman, maker,) on exhibition at Magie's Jewelry Store on North Avenue. Nevertheless many of our readers seemed to have known where Magie's place of business was, as we are informed that scores went there to look at the little beauty. It is there yet, and Saltzman has a large invoice of them for sale at his place of business, No. 15 Maiden Lane, N. Y.

THE violation of a city ordinance that demands the clearing of the sidewalks after a fall of snow, has resulted in the discomfort of pedestrians for the past day or two. So mild was the temperature on Monday last, it was possible for all to thoroughly clean their walks with a broom; but owing to the neglect of many to take advantage of such opportunity, the subsequent cold weather formed masses of ice and frozen snow that made walking uprightly a precarious aim. Proprietors of stores on our business streets are especially culpable for their neglect in the matter.

THE first venture on the minstrel stage of Boone's Boy Company occurred at VanDeventer Hall on Christmas night. The members of the troupe were all more or less proficient in their parts and efficient in the business, thereby furnishing a few hours of fun and fancy to a well filled house considering the many home attractions of the night. It would not be fair to particularly mention the ability of one and not of all; and as space will not allow a general review of the talents of each artist individually, we are enabled merely to record the success of the company's efforts as a whole.

"BEAUTIFUL snow!"

THE lion and the knat.

THE sleighing is elegant.

PUBLIC Schools open again next week.

THE sleighing carnival has commenced.

"SWEARING off" day will soon be here.

WHO will be President of the Common Council?

ALSO, who will be City Attorney and several other city dignitaries?

COMMENCE the new year by subscribing for THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

THE License question has not as yet assumed definite shape.

ALL of our merchants did a lively trade during holiday week.

THE children all cry to go to Peck's to see the pretty goods displayed there.

NOW bring out your trotters and hie away to the speeding place—Park Avenue.

MAYOR Harper has made one of the best Mayors the City of Plainfield ever had.

The Annual Report of the Board of Education will be found in another column.

WE own no horse or sleigh, and like to sleigh ride. A word to those who are fortunate owners, etc.

SOMETHING new in the way of a patent gas machine, is now on exhibition at H. Mumford's real estate office, North ave. Call and see it.

CHARLIE VAIL, the young lad injured by the railroad cars a few weeks since, is still alive, although there is but slight hopes of recovery.

No bids were offered at the advertised public sale of Front street property, (next to Alberti's building) on Monday last, and the sale was adjourned.

THE Board of Directors of the 1st National Bank of this city, have declared a dividend of four per cent from the earnings of the current six months.

THE thermometer in front of Reynolds' Pharmacy registered 7 degrees below zero at eight o'clock Thursday morning. In other places it marked ten below.

WE expect to chronicle a fatal accident happening to some one of those venturesome urchins who have a habit of catching a ride behind sleighs. It's only a matter of time.

WORTH, the Somerset street harness maker, has recently delivered to Mr. Geo. Hoadley, of this city, a magnificent new set of harness, which for beauty cannot be excelled.

THE cold storm of Sunday evening served to attract a large gathering at the Seventh Day church. The subject, "Hell the Result of Personal Choice," was seasonable and appealing.

THE Kearny statute was unveiled at Newark on Tuesday last. Gov. McClellan, Gens. Grant and Sherman, and other dignitaries were present. Hon. Cortlandt Parker made a speech.

THIS is a season when accidents are frequent from falls on slippery pavements. Provide against the same by taking out a policy in the Traveller's Life and Accident Company, of which Mr. Wm. F. Butler, of this city, is agent.

MR. D. W. LITTELL has purchased of Cook Bros. a strip of land, 20 feet front, on North avenue, next to Swalm Bros. paint store, and will erect thereon a brick building in which to conduct his stove and tin ware business.

THE Annual Ball of "The Y. M. St. B. Association" of St. Mary's R. C. Church, of Stony Hill, will be held at Guerrier's Hall, near Scotch Plains, Monday evening, Jan. 17, 1881. Tickets 25 cents. Prof. Franze will furnish music.

THE popularity of White's "five-cent counter" has led him to introduce another on which may always be found a large assortment of bargains at ten cents each. Call at the corner of Front and Peace streets and inspect these features.

CEDAR BROOK, which crosses Park avenue below the new Baptist church, is a stream of pure running spring water, and never freezes over. It has sufficient capacity to furnish water for the city of Plainfield, with the erection of proper works.

A LARGE number of people visited L. M. French's Repository on Christmas Day to view his display of handsome sleighs and cutters, several making purchases. Now is the time to secure a bargain in sleighs. Mr. French has a large stock on hand.

A VALUABLE horse, the property of Mr. David Boice of this city, was found dead in the stable yard of his owner on Thursday morning. It is supposed that the animal was unwell and escaping from the stable fell a victim to the extreme cold of the night.

THE carpentering work upon the residence now building for Mr. Chapman at Central avenue and Eighth street, is being done in a most admirable manner by Mr. T. O. Doane. This efficient workman is the same who lately completed the house now occupied by Councilman Lithgow.

THE residence of M. H. French, Esq., of Washingtonville, was the scene of enjoyment and happiness on Wednesday evening last, the occasion being the marriage of a daughter, Miss Carrie, to Mr. Lemuel Hart, of Plainfield. The bride was the recipient of many handsome gifts.

THE upper-ten of the city enjoyed itself on Tuesday last upon the introduction to Plainfield, by Mrs. Isaac Miller, of that English society frivolity unsuitably named a kettle-drum. The realized necessity of male attendance will, however, prevent the popularity of afternoon teas in this city.

MESSRS. J. C. Pope & Co., are offering insurance in some of the most reliable fire companies of the country, at rates that cannot but be satisfactory to the insured. The upright course followed by this firm in their fair and just dealing with all who patronize them, is the secret of their success as agents.

JUDGING from the quantity of New Year cards printed at this office during the past week, the enjoyable custom of celebrating the day by social visits is, seemingly, to be extensively followed by the male sex to-morrow. Most of the city's residents will keep open house and set generous tables.

THE customary New Year address of the carrier of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST should especially appeal to the generosity of those he has faithfully served during the past twelve months, by reason of the serious illness he is at present suffering. The severe weather of the season has induced an attack of cold that has resulted in his confinement to the house for some time.

"A sixteen and a half pound turkey is what we got in our Christmas stocking."—[illegible]

And we got in ours a horse and sleigh, fat cow, sixteen turkeys, $10,000 worth of Central Railroads bonds, a free pass over the same road, appointment of Postmaster, position of Sergeant-at-arms at Trenton and several other small gifts—in our mind.

THE Elizabeth Journal says that Mr. Geo. Wheelwright of that city, on Monday last, left his pocket-book, containing some $12,000 or $14,000 in money, in a Central Railroad car and had the same returned to him by the conductor of the car, Mr. Emory Robinson. "Emmy," thou art indeed an honest man. We never did know you to take any thing out of your reach.

THE Christmas Festivities of the different churches and Sunday schools of the city are now things of the past, destined to live long in the remembrance of those who participated, and consequently demanding no fuller notice by us of their occurrence. Had we the space necessary, a complete report of the enjoyable features that were experienced alike at all, would be recorded.

VICK'S FLORAL GUIDE.—This work is before us, and those who send 10 cents to James Vick, Rochester, N. Y., for it will be disappointed. Instead of getting a cheap thing, as the price would seem to indicate, they will receive a very handsome work of 112 pages, and perhaps 500 illustrations—not cheap, but elegant illustrations, on the very best of calendered paper, and as a set-off to the whole, a beautiful Colored Plate that is worth twice the price of the book.

A YOUNG gentleman of this city, but unknown as an athlete and bicyclist, and destined to [illegible] day shine forth on the Stock Exchange floor as one of its [illegible] and successful members, was appreciated by his employers to the extent of a [illegible] on Christmas eve. Of course [illegible]

THE [illegible]

Scotia to the Front.

Our jovial and esteemed friend of "Auld Scotia" nativity, ex-Street Commissioner John Wilson, made a sensation among the early risers on Christmas Day, by delivering milk from one of his milk wagons which was dressed up in right royal holiday style. The wheels of the vehicle were trimmed with red, white and blue, and the body with green boughs, while on the sides appeared the letters—"Merry Christmas." Our friend John is not only imbued with the milk of human kindness, but he is a dispenser of pure milk from the celebrated Johnston Dairy Farm.

The Vocal Society.

On account of necessary repairs to the heating apparatus of the High School, the rehearsal of the Vocal Society usually held in Assembly Hall, took place in the Lecture room of the First Baptist church on Monday evening. Active preparation is being made and earnest training gone through with looking towards the perfection of the members in the choruses to be rendered on the evening of the first concert of the Society, January 11th. [illegible] new voices have been added during the present season, and although [illegible] the tenor parts need strengthening, an improved execution is assured. An extra rehearsal for soprano and altos will be held in Assembly Hall on Tuesday afternoon; one for tenors and basses at the same place in the evening; and a final and joint rehearsal for all on Thursday evening.

Something Needed.

Plainfield needs a new Hall or Opera House for public entertainments. The beautiful little Vandeventer Hall, which has done so much toward attracting entertainments to our city since its construction, is not large enough to accommodate the assemblages that can be gathered together on the occasion of a first-class entertainment. The fair city of Plainfield is large enough in enterprise and—importance, to claim the existence of a paying Opera House as one of its institutions. None of your New Brunswick or Elizabeth Opera Houses, but one that will pay—if properly managed. It is with pleasure we announce a rumor, (we hope it is more than a rumor) that a company of capitalists contemplate the erection of such a structure in this city shortly. Boom 'er up. Let's have the Opera House.

Frozen to Death.

The distressing casualty that was discovered yesterday morning, to have happened to a prominent citizen and well-known professional gentleman of this city, will call forth the earnest sympathy of the many who remember the familiar presence of the unfortunate one in social and religious circles, and the deep sorrow and regret of those friends and acquaintances who will in future miss his kind smile and cordial greeting on the public thoroughfares.

Dr. George Smillie, residing on Plainfield avenue, of enviable reputation in the State as a surgeon Dentist of remarkable ability, left his loving home and cheerful fireside on Wednesday evening last, in answer to the demands of his occupation. Having some special work that needed consultation and assistance he stated his intention of completing the matter at the house of Dr. John S. Campbell in North Plainfield—intimating to his family, when he left, that he might not return home before midnight. These intentions were carried out so far as Dr. Campbell was aware—Dr. Smillie leaving the house on his return at about eleven o'clock. Thursday morning dawned, yet the latter had not arrived at his home, and his family, although imagining that he had remained at Dr. Campbell's all night, sent a servant to inquire.

Meanwhile an employee in Manning's City Marble Works, on his way from his house at the foot of the mountains, just before seven o'clock yesterday morning, discovered a man lying in the road in front of the residence of Benj. F. McKeage, Esq., on Willow avenue. Upon reporting the fact to that gentleman, he was advised to notify the police, and the news thus brought to the city attracted to the spot some gentlemen who recognized the body as that of Dr. Smillie. It was thereupon carried into the house, where it now lays, awaiting, as we go to press, the action of the County Physician in regard to a Coroner's inquest.

The unfortunate man was about seventy years of age, and although active in his profession, not possessed of a great amount of vitality. It is supposed that he fell down in a fit of apoplexy, and subsequently froze to death where found. When it is remembered, however, that the victim was quite near-sighted, that the night was extremely cold and that the snow was drifting fiercely, there may be some foundation for the belief that he wandered for some time about the neighborhood, ignorant of where he was. If this is so, a much younger and sturdier man would have undoubtedly succumbed as well. This theory is borne-out by the fact that the spot where the body was found is out of the most direct way to the unfortunate man's home.

The First Recital.

Nothing but unlimited praise can be justly accorded the managers of the Feininger-Evans Recital of Thursday last, for their successful efforts in placing before the lovers of music in this city a programme so remarkably attractive in its selection and so perfect in its rendition. The artists to whose care were entrusted the several parts, were unusually competent, and the entertainment particularly and generally reflected credit on all who contributed their talents to its accomplishment. Although a more generous patronage was to be desired, the class of people who attended were representative of the highest grade of our city's residents and the favorable criticism which they are sure to concede the affair will accrue to the benefit of the coming Recitals.

The programme opened most satisfactorily with a string quartette from Joseph Haydn's opus 76. The four numbers of the selection were most effectively and capably given by Messrs Feininger, Roebbelen, Risch and Mueller. The second theme—"Adagio sostenuto"— was especially pleasing and claimed the most intense appreciation of its hearers.

Mr. Clark W. Evans, who followed with an execution on the piano of a Polonaise by Frederic Chopin, is too well known as an artist of great skill and wonderful ability, to need a record of the approval with which his performance was received. A hearty recall was given and another production demanded, which was acceded to with the same acceptable efficiency.

Miss Ella Earle of New York, a stranger to our city, captured the hearts and senses of her audience by the modesty of her appearance and the delightfulness of her voice. The success of this young lady in Plainfield is forever assured, and we join with all in the hope that rumors to the effect that she has been engaged to appear at the Y. M. C. A. concert of February 22d, are authentic. Miss Earle possesses a voice of much richness and fullness, which has been admirably trained in the gradations of tone. Her singing of two compositions by Franz Schubert excited general admiration; while her rendition of a dainty lullaby by Mr. Clark Evans, set to words from the German, called for an encore the enthusiasm of which was most flattering alike to author and singer.

The first part of the programme closed with a solo by the greatly and justly admired violinist Mr. Carl Feininger—his wife playing the accompaniment. So great a favorite is this artist with Plainfielders that, by seeming to them, past improvement, consequently no change in his excellency as a musician was noticeable, although a radical difference in personal appearance was observed with regret by former pupils and other lady friends. Both the "Allegro de Concert" of A. Bazzini, and a familiar selection that was insisted upon at its close, were marked by a breadth of style and delicacy of touch that was at times remarkable.

The entire second part consisted of a Grand Quintette, Op. 107, by Joachim Raff, which before its conclusion became tedious by its extreme superiority to the modern [illegible] and intellectual relish of the majority. The piano part was interpreted by Miss M. E. Rose in a manner that was undoubtedly accurate, artistic and praiseworthy, but in comparison with the opening of the quartette alone, the additional instrument was not an accession.

The eligibility of the Park avenue Baptist Church building for the giving of such entertainments as the above, is undeniable so far as the convenience of heating and seating from any part of the auditorium are concerned; but there unfortunately seems to lurk somewhere within the confines of the walls a vibratory echo which [illegible] all those most [illegible] and audibly. There is, however, no reason to suppose that this drawback, in what is otherwise so desirable a place for the purpose, cannot be remedied by the able architect who originated the plan of construction.

To Gas Consumers.

Notice is given that in consequence of an unavoidable accident at the Gas Works, the Street Lamps will not be lighted until further notice, and in all probability consumers will be unable to receive a sufficient supply for their use this and to-morrow evening.

Plainfield Saengerbund.

The members of this society are earnestly requested to attend the next monthly meeting Monday evening Jan 3d, at their rooms on Front street, as business of great importance will be brought before it. Every one having the interests of the society at heart is expected to be present.

Silver Wedding.

Per invitations issued, there was a large gathering of friends at the residence of Mr. John Chandler, on Third street, this city, on Wednesday evening last, to commemorate the 25th wedding anniversary of that gentleman and his wife. The evening was one of unalloyed enjoyment. Prof. Franze furnished excellent music and dancing was continued until the small hours of morning warned the guests that they must tear themselves from the pleasures of the occasion. A bountiful table of refreshments was set before the merry party about midnight. The Order of Dance for the evening abounded in personal allusions, THE CONSTITUTIONALIST acknowledging a compliment bestowed upon its editors. The presents left with Mr. and Mrs. C. were many and useful, in some instances being costly. Great credit and compliments are due the Committee having the affair in charge, Messrs. Chas. W. Tallman and John Morton for the success attending the same.

Fraternal Visit and Presentation.

A committee of twelve members of the Halsey Guard, of Newark, visited this city last Monday evening to present a set of handsomely engrossed and framed resolutions to the Morris Guards of Plainfield. The committee were met at the depot by Captain Wm. Hand and Lieuts. S. C. Ryder and Wm. Smith, accompanied by a four-horse sleigh, into which the guests were stowed and conveyed to Capt. Hand's hospitable residence near Netherwood, where they were right royally entertained by that gentleman's family. The resolutions were presented here with speech making and singing following. Later the committee were sleigh-rided about the city and entertained at various places, returning to their homes on the 11:21 a. m. train, highly pleased with their visit and reception. The resolutions may be seen in the window of Shaw's drug store, Front street, beautifully engrossed and bearing the names of the following committee:—Joseph H. Horter, William H. DeCamp, Charles M. E. Woods, Wm. Hemsteder and Louis H. Lange. Among the visitors were City Treasurer W. H. Winines, Councilman I. Dieffenthaler and Freeholder I. Wavling, all of Newark.

Personalia.

Ex-councilman Rufus K. Case is home with his family for the holidays. He has been absent South for several months on business.

Mr. John Knowland and son, of Pittsburgh, Pa., are visiting at the residence of a brother in this city, ex-Councilman F. Knowland.

Mr. John Shotwell, son-in-law of A. Vanderbeek, Esq., and engaged in business at Fargo, Dakota, is visiting at his father-in-law's residence, this city.

It is with pleasure we announce to the many friends of "Col. Miller," proprietor of Laing's Hotel, this city, that he is much improved from his recent severe illness.

We are sorry to note that Mr. Jeremiah Garretson, the efficient baggage master at our depot is still confined to his home in consequence of a cold contracted, he thinks, while his quarters there were being renovated.

Hon. Miles Ross has been spending his time, during vacation of Congress, in looking after interests of his constituents in his district which may come before Congress. He will return to Washington after the close of the holiday season and be present at re-assembling of Congress.

The marriage of Mr. Augustus B. Thompson, (son of ex-sheriff Thompson) to Miss Allie Keron, (daughter of ex-chief Keron,) all of Elizabeth, N. J. the evening of Wednesday, Dec. 22d last, was a recherche affair. The gifts to the newly wedded pair on the occasion were numerous and costly. We extend our congratulations.

Mr. Chas. Tweedy, recently elected as one of the city Council, returned on Monday from the business trip that made his absence necessary and unavoidable at the time appointed for qualification. The vacancy thus occasioned will undoubtedly be filled by the Council's selection of Mr. Tweedy in recognition of the desire of the people; and we join the latter in the hope that, for the good of the city, the gentleman mentioned will accept the position.

FIRE MATTERS.

Gazelle, No. 1, indulged in a wash and a trial of her new suction, on Thursday evening of last week. The steamer and apparatus worked beautifully, leaving nothing to be desired that might be necessary for perfection. The lowness of the wells disallowed any lengthened trial, but the ability of the engine was conclusively proven.

SCOTCH PLAINS SCRATCHINGS.

There was a large attendance at Paffs' Hotel Christmas Eve, to participate in and witness the raffle for the well-known "Belle." Excitement ran high when "Ross" Drake threw 44, but some person threw 45 when the name of Charley Grant was called and then "Ross" gave it up.

And now Charley wonders what he will do with the famous trotter "Belle." [illegible] Charley. He will accept anything.

There will be fun at [illegible] Hotel New Year's Eve. A raffle for a horse and other two legged animals will be features of the evening's enjoyment.

Wm. [illegible], Jr., engaged in business at the West, has been spending a few days with his parents. He returned to his place of business on Saturday last.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

Christmas was observed in the usual old-fashioned manner here.

A young daughter of Geo. Peek, Esq., (Stella) died suddenly on Christmas Day.

Moonlight nights will soon come and then look out for a carnival of fun on Clark's Lake.

Active preparations are being made to put in steam power at Irving's Sash & Blind Factory.

The children (and parents) are "so glad" the schools will resume operations next week.

There is no truth in the rumor that horses are to be provided for the use of the track company.

The indications are that many of our lady residents will "receive" on a large scale New Year's Day.

Ice of splendid quality and good thickness, is being cut from Clark's Lake and stored in the ice houses.

The Hotel, under the management of mine host Moffett, is prospering. The house is well kept and the landlord popular.

A number of ladies of this place visited the deserving poor on Christmas Day and made their hearts glad by presents of substantial refreshments.

We understand there is to be a private shooting match at pigeons and glass balls between some of our crack shots on New Year's Day. Perhaps you will have an invitation to attend, "Billy." [Hope so—B.]

There was a joyous time at the residence of friend Joel Moffett on Christmas Day, the occasion being a double wedding. The brides were the two daughters of the above named gentleman. Look in the marriage list for names of grooms. A large number of invited guests were present and the affair was grand in all particulars.

There was a three-score wedding anniversary in this village, on the evening of Monday last. Henry Baker and Mary A. Radley were married near here on the 27th of December, 1820, just sixty years ago, and beside them sat her sister, who was the bridesmaid. The bridegroom is eighty-three years of age and the bride is eighty. The house was thronged with relatives from all parts of the State. He was born within a mile of his present home and has voted always in one precinct. That very night his brother Daniel, living in Canada, reached his ninetieth year. Among the guests were a Mrs. Hannah Radley, aged eighty-eight, and her son, aged sixty-eight. Mr. and Mrs. Baker are in good health and in possession of all their faculties.

New Year's Thoughts.

Another year has passed and gone,
And we behold a new year's dawn,
What changes doth appear;
The old, with all our faults and [illegible],
But pardoning grace [illegible],
Make hopeful the new year.

Although mistakes hath mark'd our path,
Yet sorrow's goodly mission hath
Made future some more clear;
Our weakness is our greatest plea,
And prayer is, Lord we all may see
A better, happier year.

The old year brought its galling grief,
Yet as its days, its sting was brief,
God bid us not to fear;
Each [illegible] brought some needful cross,
To purge us from our worldly dross,
And make a purer year.

While laughing streams run coldly now,
Stern winter reigns with icy brow,
A Saviour's help is near;
Though we like leaves on earth lay low,
If in the spirit, we do sow,
'Twill be a reaping year.

Spring time and summer, soon will come,
When birds and flowers, no longer dumb,
Will speak earth's harvest near;
Lord may our hearts with love to yield
Much fruit, then in the gospel field,
We'll find our happiest year.

And when on earth our course is run,
Life's battle fought, its victory won,
[illegible] shed our last tear;
Then to our Saviour, we will go,
Wash'd in His blood, made white as snow,
Through an eternal year.

"LET POLITICS ALONE."

A real clean, nice-looking old couple were at the Union depot yesterday to take a train going South. The husband was nearly 70 years old and pretty lively, and the wife was only a year or two behind him, with a voice that meant business every time she opened her mouth. There was considerable political talk around the depot, and the old man at once became interested.

"I've been over in Canada in the woods for the last two weeks and I hain't heard a thing," he explained. "Is the 'lection over with?"

"Yes," replied one of the men.

"Many riots and knock downs?"

"Thousands of them."

"I used to be the worst man around the polls you ever see," continued the old gent as he spit on his hands. "I've seen the time it took four constables to hold me."

"Peter, what are you doing here?" asked the old lady as she suddenly appeared.

"Finding out about politics."

"What kind?"

"All kinds."

"Well, you let politics alone and come into the waiting-room!"

"Party soon. So they had riots and knock-downs, eh? Lord! don't I wish I had been around!"

"Peter?" called the wife.

"Yes, I'm here. I suppose the candidates set up the drinks, didn't they?"

"Oh, yes."

"Great shakes! But I wish I'd been over here. Take it along about forty years ago, and after I had three drinks down it took the whole Whig party to hold me. My great hold was in cleaning out the voting place and walking off with the ballot-box."

"Peter, I want you!" called the wife.

"Yes, Nancy. Well, which side"—

Peter was choked off right there. Nancy got hold of his collar and lifted his heels off the floor, whirled him around, and headed him for the waiting-room with the remark:

"After you have lived with me another forty years you'll learn that when I say Peter I don't mean Paul! The idea of your standing out here talking politics when we've got to look around for a piece of bed-cord to tie that old satchel up or lose half our duds! Pike!"—Detroit Free Press.

OPEN OUTWARD.

The storm-doors around the Post-Office, at Detroit, open outwardly. This isn't for fear that a fire will occur and a rush ensue, but it is arranged that way to make a man mad. A man will go singing along the street, smiling all over, and bragging to himself how good-natured he is, when suddenly he remembers that he must mail a letter. He is only one man, but the others stand around to give advice.

The first man rushes up the steps and gives the door a push. It is solid as a rock, and his momentum generally carries his knees and nose against the hard wood.

"Push!" yells the extra man.

The other steps back and follows the advice, but with no successful results. By this time his smile has faded, his dyspepsia begins to work up, and there is indignation in his tones as he turns and asks:

"Is this blasted old Post Office closed for the day?"

"Oh, no, sir. I guess you will get in if you push hard enough. I presume the hinges are a little rusty."

Then the man returns to the charge. As a rule he puts his shoulder to the door, his feet slip back, and he comes down in a graceful heap, to be laughed at by all the boys. When he gets up he feels as if he could lick any seven men, but before he has time to pick a fight the other advances and says:

"Mighty curious about that door. Ah! I see—opens this way. You might have pushed all day and not got in."

The one who goes in is too mad to post his letter. The one who stays out shakes all over and keeps his eye out for the next.

The two young heirs, who had been taking their first lessons in grammar disputed long and earnestly over a question, and at last agreed to decide it by arbitration, selecting the head of the family as arbiter, with full power to send for persons and papers. The old man was greasing his boots before the kitchen stove.

"Father, said the elder heir, "is it proper to say 'we is rich,' or 'we am rich'?"

The old man worked carefully down into the hollow of his boot under the instep, remaining a long time in thoughtful meditation, and then slowly replied:

"Well I should say it would come nigher to the truth to say we hain't rich."

The young heirs, when they come to think what a hard time they had worrying pennies out of their paternal relatives, thought it might be made that [illegible]

HAPPY ENDING.

Long Suffering of One of the Best Men of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess Co., N. Y.—His Real and Complete Recovery from Gravel.

PLAIN WORDS ARE BEST.—Mr. Edward S. Hicks, of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county, N. Y., had suffered long from Stones in the Kidneys. He wanted relief, of course. Who would not? What are time and money to health? Mr. Hicks consulted the best physicians of his village and also of Poughkeepsie—and none better can be found anywhere—but, unhappily, without a good result. A friend in Rondout advised Mr. Hicks to go to Rondout and see Dr. David Kennedy about his trouble. This Mr. Hicks finally did. Dr. Kennedy saw at once what the suffering man's difficulty was, and that Favorite Remedy was the medicine he needed. The Doctor prescribed it, and Mr. Hicks went home without much confidence in the power of "Favorite Remedy" to do him more good than other medicines had done before. But hope clings to sinners, and he thought there might be one chance out of many in his favor. He followed the directions and was both surprised and delighted to find himself perceptibly improving. To-day Mr. Hicks is a well man.

While Dr. Kennedy is interested in introducing "Favorite Remedy," he continues to practice his profession and performs all the capital and minor operations in surgery. State your case. Letters promptly answered. Address Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y. dec10w4

THE SUN FOR 1881.

Everybody reads THE SUN. In the editions of this newspaper throughout the year to come everybody will find:

I. All the world's news, so presented that the reader will get the greatest amount of information with the least unprofitable expenditure of time and eye-sight. THE SUN long ago discovered the golden mean between redundant fullness and unsatisfactory brevity.

II. Much of that sort of news which depends less upon its recognized importance than upon its interest to mankind. From morning to morning THE SUN prints a continued story of the lives of real people and persons, and of their deeds, plans, loves, hates and troubles. This story is more varied and more interesting than any romance that was ever devised.

III. Good writing in every column, and freshness, originality, accuracy, and decorum in the treatment of every subject.

IV. Honest comment. THE SUN's habit is to speak out fearlessly about men and things.

V. Equal candor in dealing with each political party, and equal readiness to commend what is praiseworthy or to rebuke what is blamable in Democrat or Republican.

VI. Absolute independence of partisan organizations, but unwavering loyalty to true Democratic principles. [illegible]

How to Correct and Improve

IMPROVEMENTS OF THE DAY.

One of these is found in KING'S PATENT COMBINATION SPECTACLES.

As the name indicates, they consist of a combination of silver and steel frames, the silver bridge making a more elegant, durable and flexible frame and enabling any dealer to adjust it to any face, so that the centre of the lens is in the direct line of vision, thus giving the greatest benefit possible to be derived from the use of spectacles.

It also enables anyone to adjust it themselves to the position where it best corrects the sight.

All persons buying the COMBINATION SPECTACLES have their eyes fitted by KING'S NEW SYSTEM, the method used by Professional Oculists and the only true means of accurately testing the vision.

THIS SYSTEM IS COPYRIGHTED, and can only be used by Mr. King's Agents, all of whom are instructed in its use.

THE KING SPECTACLES are the first in merit over a million pair now being in daily use.

The leading Scientists of to-day agree that most diseases are caused by disordered Kidneys or Liver. If, therefore, the Kidneys and Liver are kept in perfect order, perfect health will be the result. This truth has only been known a short time and for years people suffered great agony without being able to find relief. The discovery of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure marks a new era in the treatment of these troubles. Made from a simple tropical leaf of rare value, it contains just the elements necessary to nourish and invigorate both of these great organs, and safely restore and keep them in order. It is a POSITIVE Remedy for all the diseases that cause pains in the lower part of the body—for Torpid Liver—Headaches—Jaundice—Dizziness—Gravel—Fever, Ague—Malarial Fever, and all difficulties of the Kidneys, Liver and Urinary Organs.

As a Blood Purifier it is unequaled, for it cures the organs that make the blood.
